ill, Who Clashed With Marie's Aid, Leaves Party —California Governor Won't Invite Queen.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 5.—The storm cloud that has hovered over Queen Marie of Rumania for several days passed away tonight with the departure of Samuel Hill, millionaire, who has been Marie's host on the western part of her trip, and the expulsion from the train of a reputed representative of the Henry Ford Motor Co.

At the same time it was officially denied that Queen Marie was confined to her bed by illness and that plans for the rest of her tour had been changed. The Queen spent a long day and late this afternoon retired to her private car to rest for a few hours before attending a dinner as the guest of Hill. A call on the Queen by Dr. William D. Kilpatrick, who met her during the war, when he was a Red Cross worker, led to a report that she was under a physician's care.

The self-styled Ford representative, who was expelled from the train on order of Col. John H. Carroll, official host to the Queen, J. B. Ayres of New York. Carroll's action followed published statements quoting Ayres as saying that he was spending nearly $500,000 to provide transportation for the Queen party and that Ayres himself was lending money to members of the entourage with which to pay for incidental expenses.

Ayres Aboard Out of Pity.

In a statement Col. Carroll said Ayres had presented himself in New York before the tour started, asking for permission to ride on the train on the basis of an agreement which he said he had with the Rumanian legation in Washington by which he was to have automobiles supplied by the Ford Company ready for the Queen at every place she visited.

Ayres' seat on the train was refused him until the party arrived in Ottawa, Ont., to which city Ayres followed the train by automobile. At Ottawa Col. Carroll said he left Ayres aboard out of sympathy because of the long jump from that city to Winnipeg and Ayres' inability to hire an airplane with which to make the hop.

Ayres was taken aboard, Col. Carroll said, with the understanding that he would remain incognito in arranging for transportation for the royal party at the various stops. He had no authority, Carroll said, "to make any arrangements and because he has broken his agreement with me, leaves the train tonight."

"We have made every effort," he said, "to make this journey a dignified one and to divorce entirely from any suggestion of commercialism and advertising. To this end no one has been permitted to come aboard the train except those necessary to the comfort and safety of her majesty."

Hill Leaves the Train.

The differences between Hill and Gen. Stanley Washburn, special agent to the Queen, were removed only when Hill left the train to take a dinner at his own home to which he tendered to the Queen party and Mrs. Washington, Gov. R. H. Hartley, Mayor Sam K. Landes and members of the party were guests.

The trouble began with the assertion by Hill of the role of host when he boarded the train at Spokane. He was in charge of ceremonies at the dedication by the state of his unfinished and empty museum of fine arts at Maryhill, Wash., and his plans ran counter to those of Washburn and Carroll. Some remarks by Hill to Maj. Washburn when the party was in Portland are said to have led to a serious breach and Maj. Washburn left with the train only at the request.

Mr. Hill's quiet departure today Col. Carroll and Maj. Washburn assumed complete charge of the journey. They announced in Queen Marie's behalf that she had highly enjoyed her reception in the far west and hoped to be able to make another visit later.

In connection with the Ayres incident Col. Carroll explained that transportation costs of the "Rumanian" are paid by the railroads over which it passes, the expenses incident to local

Lonely Island Prisons For Foes of Mussolini

To These Persons "Suspected of Opposition" Will Be Banished Without Appeal—All Italy to Be Virtually Under Martial Law.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Nov. 6.—Enemies of the Fascist regime suspected of serious opposition but not committing overt acts punishable by imprisonment, will be liable to indeterminate terms of forced residence on four lonely islands by the new decrees intended to safeguard Mussolini against further attempts to assassinate him.

The islands of Lipari and Ustica, between the Calabrian and Sicilian coasts near Stromboli volcano, Tremiti, in the Adriatic off the Apulian coast, and Pantelleria, in the Mediterranean, between Tunis and Sicily, will be utilized for this purpose.

The entire territory of the kingdom will be divided into police zones similar to those established successfully in Sicily in the recent struggle to wipe out the Mafia and Black Hand, suspected opponents of the regime being compelled to live from one to five years in a certain zone. Severe penalties will follow any attempted evasion. Banishment to the islands will be reserved for persons considered most dangerous to national peace. Special provincial committees, presided over by the prefects, acting on police information, will impose the sentence in these cases and there will be no appeal from their decision.

One of the most important instruments of the new vigilance system will be the janitor, for whom strict rules respecting competence and faithfulness will be drawn up. Latch keyes being virtually unknown here. The janitor acts as guardian, seeing and knowing every one who enters the building of which he is in charge. It is the present intention to make janitors and housekeepers semi-police agents.

Another innovation is the issuance of cards of identification, renewable at short periods, to every citizen and visitor to the country.

Other plans were arranged at a meeting today under the presidency of Premier Mussolini, acting for the first time as Minister of Interior, of a special inter-parliamentary committee of nine Senators and nine Deputies, who put the finishing touches on the laws amending the police regulations and legal codes. These will be presented in the Chamber Nov. 9 and in the Senate Nov. 16. Mussolini probably will make a speech to the Chamber when the laws are presented explaining the reasons for the drastic measures, amounting almost to martial law.

American, 65, Beaten by Fascists for Not Saluting Flag.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Nov. 6.—Dr. L. Rau, a physician of Lawrence, L. I., was attacked by a group of Fascists on Wednesday evening for neglecting to take off his hat to a passing Fascist flag, it was learned today. The doctor said he intended to make an official protest to the State Department.

Dr. Rau, who is 65 years old, and Mrs. Rau had just arrived in Rome and were leaving their hotel for a walk when a parade of black shirt militia passed. The doctor did not see any flag. Suddenly one man knocked off his hat while another struck him in the temple. Mrs. Rau shouted "Americano" and the assailants retreated.

DEMAND THAT GOVERNOR OUST SACCO-VANZETTI TRIAL JUDGE

Editors of Foreign Language Newspapers Tell Massachusetts Executive Jurist Was Prejudiced.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Gov. Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts today assured editors of 30 foreign language and Hebrew newspapers that he would give careful consideration to their demand that he remove from the bench in Massachusetts Judge Webster Thayer because of his denial of a final motion for a new trial in the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

The editors had expressed the opinion that the judge's action against the two radicals, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, accused of murder, was based on prejudice rather than judicial opinion.

REBELS SEIZE NICARAGUA TOWN

Control East Coast of Country Except Neutral Zone.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Nov. 6 —The liberal revolutionaries, waging war against the Government, captured San Juan Del Norte yesterday, the garrison of 100 withdrawing. All of the east coast of Nicaragua, with the exception of the neutral zone of El Bluff and Bluefield, is now in control of the revolutionaries.

Fearing that the revolutionary army may make an attempt to penetrate into the interior, the government is recruiting many men.

TYPHOON HITS PHILIPPINES, 30 NATIVES PERISH IN FLOOD

Heavy Loss of Life and Property in Southern Provinces of Luzon and Samar.

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 7.—A typhoon which swept over the southern provinces of Luzon and Samar Friday night caused heavy loss of life and property. In addition, the flooding of the Calumbang River in Batancas province cost the lives, it is estimated, of 30 natives.

The insular agricultural college of Los Banos was badly damaged and structures there made of light materials were blown down, the damage being estimated at $40,000. Many towns in Laguna, Batancas and Tayabas provinces were destroyed. It is impossible to ascertain the total loss of life or property in the storm areas because the telegraph lines are down.

A report of the submergence of the town of Bauang by a tidal wave could not be verified.

HEAD OF MICHIGAN SCHOOLS OUSTED FOR MALFEASANCE

Gov. Groesbeck Dismisses Political Foe Alleging He Accepted Money Improperly.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 6.—Gov. Groesbeck today announced that charges of malfeasance and misconduct in office against Thomas E. Johnson, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, had been substantiated at hearings recently and removed Johnson from office.

The charges against Johnson were made Sept. 25 by Leonard T. Hands, State Insurance Commissioner. It was contended that Johnson unlawfully accepted money from outside sources for work which he as superintendent was paid by the State to do. It was charged also that he used his office to procure State business for a surety company of which he was an officer.

Johnson admitted receiving the extra pay but said the Attorney General's office had held he was doing nothing against the law.

"It is settled policy of the State," said Gov. Groesbeck's statement today, "that State officials have no right to demand or receive extra compensation for services performed in their official capacity. The money mentioned in the charges preferred was taken from the state treasury without the slightest justification either in law or morals."

Johnson is a political foe of Gov. Groesbeck. He was one of the members of the State administration board who several months ago demanded from the Governor a statement of expenditures for state highway improvement.

REVISED RETURNS CUT GANTT'S LEAD ON OTTO TO 841

Official Canvass Gradually Narrowing the Margin in Race for State Supreme Court.

REPUBLICAN SAYS HE WON'T CONTEST

'I Will Congratulate Him,' If the Complete Figures Show Democrat Has Won by One Vote.

Revision of the unofficial returns of the vote cast in Tuesday's election for Judge of Division No. 1 of the Missouri Supreme Court, further reduced the lead of Circuit Judge Ernest S. Gantt (Dem.) of Mexico over Supreme Judge Robert W. Otto (Rep.). On returns of the official canvass of the vote in 108 counties, and complete but unofficial returns from the other six counties and the City of St. Louis, Gantt was leading Otto by 841 votes. All of the 4124 precincts in the State had been reported, giving Gantt 490,560 and Otto 489,719.

Gantt had a lead of more than 1100 on returns early yesterday. During the day the reports from the official canvass of the vote in each county gradually cut down this scant margin.

Otto Plans No Contest.

Judge Otto yesterday told the Post-Dispatch over long-distance telephone that he would not institute a contest if the final official State canvass of the election returns gave Judge Gantt a majority.

"If Judge Gantt wins by one vote I will congratulate him," Judge Otto said.

The official canvass of the vote in each of the counties was started Friday by the county election officials. The election law requires that reports of these canvasses, when completed, be immediately transmitted to the Secretary of State at Jefferson City. When the reports are in from each of the 114 counties and the City of St. Louis, the official State canvass of the return by counties is made by the Secretary of State.

The canvasses in the City of St. Louis, St. Louis County and Jackson County, including Kansas City, will not be completed before Monday, according to election officials, because of the large vote to be canvassed.

Closer Even Than in 1918.

The race between Gantt and Otto is ever closer than that of 1918, when Judge W. W. Graves (Dem.) was re-elected over Neville (Rep.) by a margin of only 678 votes, on a total vote of 573,028.

Official returns on the United States senatorship came in more slowly yesterday, and slightly reduced the majority of Harry B. Hawes (Dem.), who was elected over Senator George E Williams (Rep.). Returns from 4027 precincts, some of them official, gave Hawes 496,931 and Williams 463,009, a majority of 33,922 for Hawes.

State Superintendent of Schools Charles A. Lee (Dem.), re-elected over W. S. Smith (Rep.) of Excelsior Springs, increased his lead on additional returns from rural counties. The unofficial count in 3948 precincts gave Lee 485,756 and Smith 468,724, a majority of 17,032 for Lee.

The revised vote on the Supreme Court race showed that slightly less than 1,000,000 votes were cast in Tuesday's election, as had been forecast.

Control of the lower House of the Legislature remained in doubt. On returns compiled by the Associated Press, 75 Republicans and 71 Democrats were elected or leading in their respective counties or legislative districts. Four counties were unreported, of which three were represented in the 1925 Legislature by Democrats and the fourth by a Republican The House has 150 members, elected every two years.

The counties from which reports have not been received on Representatives are McDonald, Morgan, Ralls and Shelby.

DEMANDS GASOLINE PRICE CUT

Governor of Tennessee Charges Restraint of Competition.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 6. —Gov. Peay said today that on his return to Nashville he would telegraph to the Standard Oil Co. demanding an immediate reduction in gasoline prices and that, if this is not granted, he will institute suit to break up what he termed artificial levels of prices and to restore competition.

He said Tennessee consumers, with a 3-cent State tax, pay as much for gasoline as those in Kentucky, where the State tax is 5 cents a gallon.

DRY OFFICERS RAID CHICAGO CITY HALL AND SEIZE LIQUOR

Arrest Two Employes and a Discharged Clerk in Whose Lockers Whisky Is Stored.

ACCUSE PRISONERS OF BOOTLEGGING

Make Seizures Only in Tax Division but Find Broken Bottles in Many Other Offices in Building.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Three hundred employes of Cook County, waiting for the clock in the tax extension offices of the County Clerk to mark noon and the end of their week, jumped from their desks ten minutes ahead of time today when a dozen prohibition agents raided the room and extracted from three lockers which line the walls nine pints of brandy and whisky.

The agents invaded the city and county building, which houses the Mayor's office, a dozen courts and scores of municipal and county departments and posted guards at every exit from the long room occupied by the tax extension department.

Then after ransacking every locker and finding the liquor they arrested Arthur McVeady, for 15 years a clerk in the office; William Dessow, a special assessment clerk for the Board of Local Improvements, and Fred Haverkamp, a former clerk, who had been discharged three weeks ago. Agents said they had purchased liquor from all three and charged that the lockers served as a source of supply for the thirsty all over the block-square building.

County Clerk Surprised.

In the midst of the raid, with the corridors outside jammed by city hall employes who had heard the news and girl clerks in the tax office climbing on lockers to watch the proceedings, County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer appeared in the room, learned the cause of the turmoil and expressed great surprise. He ordered the clerks to lend co-operation to the raiders and began an inquiry of his own to find out why Haverkamp was still at his desk although he had been discharged Oct. 15.

The agents said Dessow was poring himself a drink in the vault when they entered. His office was elsewhere in the building. Officers said complaint had been made anonymously that drinks were sold openly in the tax extension office.

Broken Bottles in Other Offices.

When the raid was finished, the agents wandered casually through other offices, but made no arrests. They said they found in some offices, however, broken bottles indicating that news of the raid had been widely circulated.

The three men arrested were charged with selling liquor and held each in $1000 bond.

Then the agents proceeded to the offices of the Beverage Dispensers' Benevolent and Protective Association, across the street from the city hall, and seized 14 cases of whisky and 16 cases of champagne.

63-HOUR TRAIN FROM CHICAGO TO SAN FRANCISCO, NOV. 14

CHICAGO, Nov. 6. — Transcontinental travel by train will be shortened by five hours when three railroads unite their efforts, a week from tomorrow, in the inauguration of a new 63-hour train service from Chicago to San Francisco.

With the shortened service the traveler may leave New York Saturday night and have breakfast Wednesday at the Golden Gate.

The faster of two trains being started Nov. 14, will go from Chicago to Council Bluffs, Ia., on the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, thence to Ogden, Utah, by Union Pacific, and to the Coast over the Southern Pacific.

The first trains from Chicago to San Francisco, 60 years ago, required 109 hours.

CREWS RESCUED IN STORM

Only One Man Missing of Those Aboard Barges Adrift in Lake Erie.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 6.—A check-up today by the Coast Guard on the three barges which broke away from the tug Barryton in Friday's storm on Lake Erie disclosed that the crews of all the barges are safe ashore except Capt. Dan Newman, of the St. Catharine, which sank. He is missing and probably perished.

R. W. Hoffman and his wife were taken off the barge Freedom and cared for in a farmhouse. The Freedom is high and dry on the beach five miles east of Northeast, Pa.

SEVEN EMPLOYES HELD UP IN OFFICE; $575 STOLEN

Three Armed and Masked Men Rob Hostess Cake Co. of Day's Receipts.

Seven employes of the Hostess Cake Co. were held up in the company's offices at 2901 Hebert street, at 6:30 o'clock last night, by three young men, who escaped with $575.95 in cash, the day's receipts.

The robbers, each with a revolver and each holding a handkerchief to his face, slipped into a side door used by drivers who had been instructed to keep it locked. The last driver to enter, however, apparently had left the door ajar.

Four drivers and the company's sales manager were talking in the drivers' room. The robbers compelled them to lie on the floor, and while one man guarded them, the other two passed to another room where R. C. Surkamp, cashier, and Milton Baird, cashier, were working.

Surkamp was compelled to lie down while Baird was ordered to open the cash drawer and the safe. Then he joined Surkamp on the floor, and the robbers fled the way they came, enjoining their victims not to follow.

RUSSIAN HOME-MADE MOVIES IMITATE AMERICAN STARS

Impersonations of Lloyd, Chaplin and Others Poor But Audiences Are Guileless.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Nov. 6. — Bolshevik imitators of American movie stars are making a big hit with Russian screen fans who get quite a kick out of seeing diminutive "New York policemen" wielding little clubs and chasing Illinsky Apor, imitator of Harold Lloyd, past the Kremlin gates.

Finding it impossible to gratify completely the Russian public's demand for American motion pictures, the State's Kino Trust is producing imitation of American films with obscure Russian actors impersonating such stars as Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Harold Lloyd and Buster Keaton.

The new films are popular with the Russians, many of whom confess that they do not know the difference between the genuine and spurious article, but Americans who have seen the films characterize them as poor, talentless caricatures that deceive no one except the guileless.

'TURANDOT' GIVEN IN BERLIN

Posthumous Puccini Opera Draws Brilliant Audience.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—"Turondot," the posthumous Puccini opera, was given here for the first time tonight.

The performance was long advertised as the most brilliant of the civic opera season and was attended by an audience made up of the leaders in art, music, literature and society at the German capital.

Courtmartial for Plane Pilot.

By the Associated Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 6.—Lieutenant A. J. Lehman of Lebanon, Ind., held by military authorities at Maxwell Field in connection with the killing of Frank G. Browder Sr., by a sweeping airplane Oct. 19, will face courtmartial, Major H. H. C. Richards, commander of the field, announced when informed that the grand jury of Montgomery County failed to return indictment in the case.

TURKEYS CHEAPER THIS THANKSGIVING, GOVERNMENT SAYS

Other Items for Holiday Table Also Lower Than They Were Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Department of Agriculture experts say that filling the Thanksgiving basket this year will be less expensive than it was last year.

Texas this year has 15 per cent more turkeys than were available last year, and early prices now are 3 cents a pound less than last season. Cranberries are as low as 10 cents a pound, as the Eastern crop has been reported successful, with large yields in Wisconsin and the Northwest. Pumpkin will be less than $1 a barrel in some sections. Lower lettuce prices are expected, but celery will show a wide range of price, reflecting uneven quality.

The greatest saving will be in potatoes, sweet and white. The white potato will sell at about one-third less than last season, with the crop 11 per cent larger. Sweet potatoes will sell from one-half to two-thirds of the price of the white.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.— Raids by the bulls and the bears in the annual pre-Thanksgiving turkey market have begun, but the Government today put a crimp in price-boosting with an official announcement that the marketable crop is larger than last year. Already one unofficial market service has broadcast a statement that turkeys will be costlier because the crop is not as large as last year, but the Government officially contradicts this.

The National Poultry, Butter and Egg Association, composed of carlot wholesalers, predicts a large crop and advises farmers to ship only mature birds to aid depressing prices.

SPIRITUALISTS HOPE TO GET SOME WORD FROM HOUDINI

Some Even Believe Master Scoffer Performed Feats by Psychic Powers.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Houdini's spirit will be sought in the afterlife under plans made by spiritualists, whose claims of communication with the dead were continually challenged by the magician during his lifetime.

British and Continental believers desire to settle the question whether Houdini actually did his remarkable feats by legedermain or through the exercise of supernatural power. Some contend that he extricated himself from places of confinement, including his famous "water cell," by dematerialization, and that his feats were not actually accomplished by dexterity and trickery as he claimed.

Arrangements are already being made, following upon his death last Sunday, to endeavor to communicate with his spirit.

HURT KILLING A CAT; SUES

Humane Society Worker Injured When Gas Box Explodes.

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 6.— There may be more ways than one to kill a cat, but what is the right way—this was the question up in court here today.

Ronald Bean, Humane Society worker, says he was seriously injured when a gas box in which he was killing a cat, blew up. He is asking for $1250 damages from the society. Personally he does not think cats should be killed anyway.

INVESTIGATOR IN HALL-MILLS CASE GOT $2500 TO QUIT STATE, HE SAYS

H. L. Dickman Testifies County Prosecutor Beekman, Dead for Two Years, Paid Him to Leave.

GAVE NO REASON, HE DECLARES

Asserts Henry Stevens Was "Evasive" Under Quiz as to Whereabouts on the Night of the Murder.

By the Associated Press.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 6.— With other testimony of the long court session almost routine, the closing minutes of the stay on the stand of Henry L. Dickman, former New Jersey State trooper, stood out in the trial today of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her brothers, Henry and Willie Stevens, charged with the murder of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

Dickman testified that the late Azariah Beckman, some-time prosecutor of Somerset County, paid him $2500 to leave New Jersey when he was engaged, in April, 1923, in investigating the murder.

With the testimony of Dickman the sole oasis in the colorless desert of identification of exhibits, consisting of clothing of the slain couple, the oft-displayed articles found about the bodies, and letters, interesting, but apparently not conclusive, was a hint of a battle of fingerprint experts to come.

Fingerprint Duel in Prospect.

A New York authority on fingerprints again declared that a smudged visiting card found near Dr. Hall's foot, bore the imprint of Willie Stevens' left index finger.

The defense has made no secret of the presence of fingerprint experts in its camp. Joseph Faurot, of New York, was on the witness stand for the state briefly today, as a recalled witness. He will return next week for cross-examination.

Dickman, taken from a military prison at Alcatraz, Cal., where he is serving a sentence for desertion from the army, told of joining the New Jersey state police in 1921 and the beginning an investigation into the Hall-Mills case in October of the following year. On direct examination he testified that he deserted the navy and was dishonorably discharged from that branch of the United States armed forces.

Under cross-examination he was asked by Clarence E. Case, defense attorney:

"And you were drunk for 41 days when you got in trouble in connection with the army desertion?" "Yes."

"And then you deserted the New Jersey state police, leaving three months pay behind you?" "Well I left and didn't wait to get my pay."

"Paid $2500 to Vanish."

Then Prosecutor Simpson asked a question: "Why did you leave the New Jersey police, that Senator Case calls desertion?" asked Simpson. "I was paid."

"By whom?" "Prosecutor Beekman."

"You mean Azariah Beekman, who was prosecutor of Somerset County then?" "Yes."

"How much did he pay you?" "Twenty-five hundred dollars."

"What did he pay you that money for?" "To leave the State."

"Why did he wish you to leave the State?" "He didn't say."

Man Accused Is Dead.

Defense attorneys resumed the questioning.

"Azariah Beekman is dead, is he not?" "So I understand."

"That's all."

Prosecutor Simpson took the floor again.

"You didn't know that he was dead when you made an affidavit that you were paid to leave the State, did you?" "No."

"That's all."

Azariah Beekman, who died two years ago, was prosecutor of Somerset County at the time Hall and Mrs. Mills were murdered. Later he was made a District Judge.

The procedure of the defense in extending what amounted to an invitation to the State to bring out the statements from he witness that he was paid by Beekman to leave the State seemed to be based on a conviction by defense attorneys that the testimony would not be accepted by the jury and would serve to discredit Dickman's previous statements.

He had said that in February,

DEMOCRATS SAY TAX REFUND PLAN IS POLITICAL PLAY

President's Stand Called Subterfuge to Avoid General Reduction Before Election of 1928.

VIEWED AS ISSUE FOR REPUBLICANS

Executive's Proposal Described as Humiliating Surrender by Simmons of North Carolina.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The sudden declaration of President Coolidge for a refund of 10 or 12 per cent of this year's income taxes caused a scratching of heads today both at the Treasury and at the Capitol.

Surprised Treasury officials discreetly suggested that the President's proposal be accomplished through a credit on income taxes to be paid next year, rather than through a straight-out refund at this time.

Equally surprised Democrats, suspecting that Mr. Coolidge was trying to take the political play away from them, called the President's action a subterfuge to avoid a general tax reduction until 1928, to give the Republican party an issue.

Attitude of Smoot.

Surprised also, but cautious in his utterances, Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, chairman of the Finance Committee, whose ears pick up the slightest mention of taxation or tariff, said he thought the business outlook should be studied a bit before anything was done. More-outspoken was Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, ranking Democrat on the Finance Committee, who described the executive's proposal as a "humiliating surrender," and demanded again that the taxpayers be given a straight out reduction in taxes rather than the refund.

Generally, in Republican and Democratic circles alike, the move was taken to mean that the session of Congress beginning one month from today would have the issue thrust upon it from opposing camps—the Democrats holding to their demand for straight out tax reduction, and the President's followers countering with the plan for rebates.

Secretary Mellon, genius of the administration's financial policies, was not in town when the official White House spokesman dropped the words setting forth the President's approval of the rebate idea. The secretary has planned heretofore to apply the $250,000,000 surplus for this fiscal year on the retirement of the public debt. Treasury spokesmen explained, however, that the idea was entirely the President's and that the proposal could be accomplished without embarrassment to the Treasury.

Treasury for Credit Plan.

It was emphasized that the Treasury would urge that the refund be accomplished through the credit plan, which would spread the benefit over next year's income tax payments.

About 2,000,000 individuals and corporations would benefit by the program and it was estimated that if immediate refunds were ordered by Congress rather than credit on next year's taxes it would cost much in routine expenses to return $200,000,000 to the taxpayers.

Under the program for a 10 per cent refund the average taxpayers would get little more than a dollar. Those with taxable incomes of less than $5000 would get little more than 75 cents each.

About three persons paid taxes amounting to more than $1,000,000 last year and it was figured the largest single taxpayer would get about $500,000.

Against Permanent Cut.

The Treasury stood firm today on its contention that a permanent tax reduction cannot safely be made at this time. This was in line with the position taken yesterday by Mr. Coolidge. It was reiterated that while the surplus would be well over the needs of the Government for this fiscal year that many of the receipts collected now would not be available next year.

Joseph S. McCoy, Government actuary, said most of the surplus for this fiscal year would result from the collection of back taxes on which he said there had been a special drive. Continued collection of back taxes cannot be counted upon, he argued.

Senator Simmons argued in a statement today that the surplus of $377,000,000 at the close of the last year also should have been returned to the public. He insisted proper relief would not be accorded through a refund, holding that it would permit partiality. Only income taxpayers would benefit from the refund, he said, whereas "the other taxpayers, besides the individuals and corporations, are as much entitled to consideration."

Objection in U. S. to Rebates.

"The President," he continued, "also leaves out of consideration the deep-seated objection in this country to refunds and rebates. This objection exists for the reasons, first, that the party entitled to relief rarely gets the benefit of it through refunds and rebates; secondly, because of the wrong-doing and partiality always incident to the distribution by this process.

"I am gratified, however—and I am sure the Democrats of the country, who stood so solidly behind our demand in the last campaign for an immediate tax reduction; and the millions of Republicans who felt the same way, and the great body of honest American business will share in the feeling of gratification—that the President and the Treasury Department have at length consented that a bill for some sort of relief from the existing over-taxation may be introduced and passed through the House; because we have been threatened—even since the election—that the Republican majority in the House would not permit a bill to pass that body and come to the Senate. With the assent of the administration, it is, therefore, I think, assured that a bill will pass the House and will come to the Senate."

Another tax problem which will confront Congress when it convenes in December will be a renewal of the demand for repeal of the Federal inheritance tax. This was determined at a meeting today of the American Taxpayers' League, attended by a number of State legislators and officials who registered their opposition to the levy at the last session of Congress.

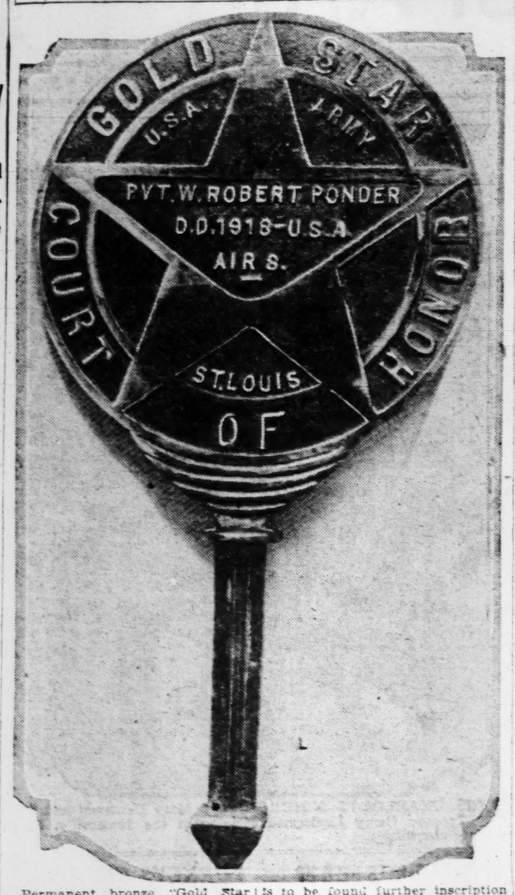
New Markers for "Court of Honor"



Permanent bronze "Gold Star Tree Markers" for each tree in the World War "Gold Star" Veterans' Court of Honor on Kingshighway Memorial boulevard are being erected to take the place of the small copper stars formerly used.

There are 750 Gold Star Trees in the Court of Honor, which extends from Easton to Florissant avenues, and it is hoped that 350 new markers will be in place for Memorial day. The remaining trees will be marked as soon as the National Society of World War Registrars is able to compile service records.

Each marker, the circular face of which is eight inches in diameter, contains the inscription "Gold Star Court of Honor" and also the fallen hero's name, rank, branch of service, division, time, place and cause of death. On the reverse side is to be found further inscription when and by whom erected, and in whose honor. The tablets are set in concrete to insure permanency, and placed a short distance from each tree.

A fund sponsored by the National Society of World War Registrars provides for the erection of markers for men whose families cannot be located.

It is planned to erect seven "Perpetual Gold Star Lights" at intervals along the Memorial boulevard, the first of which will be started soon at Penrose avenue and Kingshighway Northeast. Sufficient funds for one star have been donated and plans for the base are being drawn. The Gold Star will measure two feet from tip to tip and be lighted brilliantly at all times.

DOCTORS WOULD INCORPORATE

Association to Study Heart Disease Seeks Decree.

A petition for a pro forma decree of incorporation was filed in Circuit Judge Calhoun's court yesterday by the St. Louis Heart Association, an organization of physicians which has for its object the study of the causes, treatment and prevention of heart disease.

Officers are Dr. Hugh McCulloch, president; Dr. Arthur E. Strauss, secretary, and Dr. Drew Luten, treasurer. They, with Drs. Elsworth Smith and Ralph A. Kinsella, constitute the board of directors.

WITNESSES TOLD THERE WILL BE NO TRIAL OF ENGLISH

Official Notices to Disregard Subpenas State That Impeachment Hearing Will Be Abandoned.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Announcement that the trial of George Washington English of East St. Louis, lately Federal Judge of the Eastern Illinois district, has been abandoned because of his resignation while under impeachment charges, was sent today to the more than 75 witnesses summoned for the opening of the trial before the Senate Wednesday.

The messages sent to witnesses, signed by David S. Barry, sergeant-at-arms of the Senate, read:

"Disregard subpena to appear before the United States Senate in the impeachment trial of Judge English Nov. 10, as trial will be abandoned."

The Senate will meet in special session Wednesday, as heretofore arranged. Senators now in Washington are expected to be present, and others have been notified by Senators Curtis and Robinson, Republican and Democratic floor leaders, that the resignation of Judge English has made their attendance unnecessary.

Will Adjourn to Dec. 6.

At the special session Wednesday, adjournment will be taken to the regular session of the Senate, which begins Dec. 6. This has been agreed upon by Vice President Dawes and leading Senators.

After the opening of the regular session of House and Senate, the House managers of the English prosecution will report the fact of the defendant's resignation. It will be the House's duty to give the managers further instructions, and those instructions, it is expected, will be to the effect that the resignation satisfies the House, and that the case is to be dropped. A formal report to the Senate will follow.

Leaders of House and Senate who are in Washington have canvassed the sentiment of leading members. The general agreement has been that the resignation satisfies the purposes of the investigation and the subsequent impeachment proceeding, and makes further action unnecessary.

As has been explained, the only result of trial, beyond the removal from office which is accomplished by resignation, would be to inflict a sentence of disbarment, which is within the discretion of the Senate in such cases. As against this is the prospect that a trial would take three weeks of the Senate's time, and would cost $100,000 or more.

Won't Offer New Evidence.

Additional evidence against Judge English, uncovered by the prosecuting managers and the Post-Dispatch during the last summer, will not reach the House, Representative Earl Michener said today. He is chairman of the House Board of Managers in the impeachment case. As chairman, he has directed the collecting of the earlier evidence, following the investigation, on demand of Representative Hawes, now Senator-elect, of the charges printed in the Post-Dispatch.

"We are a purely legislative body, notwithstanding the fact that we had the role of prosecutors before the Senate," said Michener. "If any further action is taken against Judge English it must be initiated by the Department of Justice. Anything the managers have will be given on request of the department, but as far as we are concerned, the case will be closed when we receive our instructions from the House."

At the Department of Justice it was stated that any further charges against the former East St. Louis Judge would have to be started by the District Attorney.

Piles Can Be Cured Without Surgery

An instructive book has been published by Dr. A. S. McCleary, the noted rectal specialist of Excelsior Springs, Mo. This book tells how sufferers from Piles can be quickly and easily cured without the use of knife, scissors, "hot" iron, electricity or any other cutting or burning method, without confinement to bed and no hospital bills to pay. The method has been a success for twenty-six years and in more than nine thousand cases. The book is sent postpaid free to persons afflicted with piles or other rectal troubles who clip this item and mail it with name and address to Dr. McCleary, 566 St. Louis Ave., Excelsior Springs, Mo.

CUCKOO GANGSTER CARRYING LOADED REVOLVER ARRESTED

Herman Tipton Taken at Real Estate Office on North Fourteenth Street.

Herman Tipton, one of the leaders of the Cuckoo gang in its war against the Italian faction, was arrested at 7:30 o'clock last night as he entered one of the Cuckoo hangouts, a real estate office at 106 North Fourteenth street.

In his waistband the detectives who stopped him found a loaded automatic pistol. He had $610 in his pockets. The office he was entering is operated by Beverly Brown and Clarence Owens, professional bondsmen and former saloonkeepers. It was in their office that nine Cuckoos were arrested and a half-dozen weapons seized two weeks ago.

Tipton is a brother of Roy Tipton, now serving a Federal sentence with Egan gang members for mail robbery. He was with "Mulehead" Simon and Jimmy Michaels, when they were fired upon by Italian feudists two months ago, near Collinsville, and suffered a bullet wound in the right arm.

Illinois Pastor's Son Killed by Auto.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Nov. 6.—Morrill, 11 years old, son of the Rev. C. S. Tritt, pastor of the Central Methodist Church here, was hit by an automobile and killed this afternoon. The boy with a party of children was returning from a Sunday school picnic, the driver of the car did not stop and police are trying to learn the identity of the driver.

ANDREWS OUSTS DRY AGENTS FOR LAWLESS ACTION

Prohibition Enforcement Chief Dismisses Four Who Searched Auto Without Cause.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—An object lesson in "lawful law enforcement" was set before the eyes of the prohibition army today by its commander-in-chief, Major-General Andrews.

Explaining why the names of four of his officers will appear no longer on the rolls, he listed "frankness," and "straightforwardness" as qualities to be cultivated by prohibition agents, and described "threatening and insulting methods" as something that will not be tolerated.

The manifesto is addressed to the field forces of prohibition the country over, and contains a definite order that agents "must not stop automobiles except for unquestionable reasons indicating that the car is engaged in illicit practice."

Treasury Officer Complains.

The four men summarily dismissed from the service for violating these policies include Robert L. Livingston, deputy prohibition administrator for the District of Columbia. The other three were agents under him. All four were accused of having held up and searched without cause the motor car of Charles R. Nash, himself a high officer of the Treasury. He is Deputy Commissioner of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which is the parent of the prohibition unit, but he reported the incident, he says, solely in his capacity as a citizen.

It was not the first time the agents of Gen. Andrews had pounced down on the wrong automobile. Several months ago an agent was dismissed in New Orleans because he arrested a man and a woman for having a pint flask of whisky in their car, then compelled them to drive to a court more than 150 miles away for a hearing.

One of the much-repeated stories among Government officials here in the capital is that a very high judicial officer, driving back into Washington after a fishing trip, was stopped by prohibition agents who searched his car despite his protests, and found nothing.

Protection for Citizens.

Gen. Andrews said today his course in the latest "strong-arm case" was intended to set an example that would protect from mistreatment the humblest citizen, equally with the most powerful official of the Government.

"The whole incident, in all its particulars, shows a serious lack of conformity with our instructions and general policy for the conduct of law enforcement," said he in his order to his field officers. "The deputy administrator showed a deplorable lack of leadership and sense of responsibility, and furthermore, during the investigation was far from exhibiting the qualities of frankness and straightforwardness which should characterize an officer in our service.

Displayed Revolvers.

"The agents used drawn revolvers and threatening and insulting language and methods absolutely without cause or even excuse. They did not announce themselves as Federal officers, or show their badges. They might easily have been mistaken for bandits and, had the occupants of the car been armed, their ridiculous conduct might easily have resulted in a shooting scrape. They have shown themselves absolutely unworthy to exercise the authority and dignity of Federal officers.

"Let this be a lesson to them and to all others that the department means business when it directs that its agents shall operate only within the law and in a lawful manner. It is definitely directed that our agents must not stop automobiles except for unquestionable reasons indicating that the car is engaged in illicit practice."

HAWES VICTORY CLEARS WAY FOR SENATOR REED

Little Doubt Exists That He Could Have Missouri Delegation Instructed to Support Him.

REPUBLICAN PLANS ARE MORE TANGLED

Hyde's Speech Bringing in German Question a Serious Blow to His Chances for 1928.

By CURTIS A. BETTS.

Any doubt that may have existed as to the ability of Senator James A. Reed to get indorsement of Missouri Democrats for the nomination for President in 1928 was dispelled by the results of the election last Tuesday.

Unless some complications arise based on something other than the old antagonism to Reed, his supporters will have little difficulty in the election of a sufficient number of delegates to the State convention to obtain an instructed delegation to the national convention for him.

Just as the election proved that in the Democratic party Reed had "come back" into popular favor, it probably wrecked former Gov. Arthur M. Hyde's ambition to be United States Senator to succeed Reed. Hyde is being charged with much of the responsibility for the defeat of Senator Williams, the Republican losses occurring in St. Louis and a few counties which are overwhelmingly Republican, and on which a Republican candidate in the primary must count to be successful.

To probably a greater extent than usual this election may be taken to indicate the probable strength in the next primary.

Otto Into Prominence.

It brought Supreme Judge Robert W. Otto, though he apparently had defeated for election to succeed himself, into prominence as a strong, likely prospect for the Republican nomination for Governor, and it shunted into the background several others who had formed alliances which they believed would give them the advantage.

Of outstanding interest is the effect of the election on Reed, who recently announced he intended to retire from the Senate at the conclusion of his present term, an announcement which was taken as an indication that he would seek the Presidential nomination. True, Reed has denied that he is "a candidate for any office" but activities of a number of his friends have caused the belief that the Senator must have had "his fingers crossed" when he so expressed himself.

It was noticeable that at the Democratic State convention in Jefferson City several of Reed's most ardent friends were promoting the proposal for the convention to indorse Reed for President. The suggestion which was only dropped when Reed was convinced that its injection in the convention might have disastrous results for the candidacy of Harry B. Hawes for the Senate.

Proved Reed's Strength.

Viewing Reed's strength in the light of election results, it appears that Hawes would not have suffered from the adoption of such a resolution by the convention, but the situation was not as apparent then as it is now.

Notwithstanding much advice from rural sections that Reed's prominence in the campaign would defeat Hawes many thousand votes, and the warning that the anti-Reed sentiment was not dead, only slumbering, Chairman Fordyce of the Democratic State Committee used Reed extensively for speeches in St. Louis and out in the State. Reed delivered "wet" speeches, "anti-klan" speeches and "anti-World Court" speeches. Fordyce had warned that this would cause many "Democrats" and "Wilson Democrats" to remain away from the polls. But it didn't do anything like the kind.

Not Much Opposition.

Rural Democrats were convinced that the only way for the Democrats to get representation in office was for Democrats to vote for Democratic candidates, and they stepped to the polls, "wet" Democrats and "dry" Democrats, "pro-drys and anti-leaguers." Many of them had voted for Hawes in the primary on the theory that he was the only candidate who could win in the general election, and they forgot their differences with Reed on many issues in the election, and voted for him then.

There is no doubt they have much the same feeling toward Senator Reed for the presidency. A good lot of them don't agree with him on prohibition nor on the World Court, and they didn't agree with Hawes. Although Hawes publicly was not quite as "wet" as Reed, the voters knew that in reality there was precious little differ-

HAWES VICTORY CLEARS WAY FOR SENATOR REED

Little Doubt Exists That He Could Have Missouri Delegation Instructed to Support Him.

REPUBLICAN PLANS ARE MORE TANGLED

Hyde's Speech Bringing in German Question a Serious Blow to His Chances for 1928.

By CURTIS A. BETTS.

Any doubt that may have existed as to the ability of Senator James A. Reed to get indorsement of Missouri Democrats for the nomination for President in 1928 was dispelled by the results of the election last Tuesday.

Unless some complications arise based on something other than the old antagonism to Reed, his supporters will have little difficulty in the election of a sufficient number of delegates to the State convention to obtain an instructed delegation to the national convention for him.

Just as the election proved that the Democratic party Reed had "come back" into popular favor, it probably wrecked former Gov. Arthur M. Hyde's ambition to be United States Senator to succeed Reed. Hyde is being charged with much of the responsibility for the defeat of Senator Williams, the Republican losses occurring in St. Louis and a few counties which are overwhelmingly Republican, and on which a Republican candidate in the primary must count to be successful.

Otto Into Prominence.

It brought Supreme Judge Robert W. Otto, though he apparently was defeated for election to succeed himself, into prominence as a real likely prospect for the Republican nomination for Governor. It shunted into the background several others who had formed alliances which they believed would help them the advantage.

Of outstanding interest is the effect of the election on Reed, who recently announced he intended to retire from the Senate at the conclusion of his present term, an announcement which was taken as an indication that he would seek the Presidential nomination. True, Reed has denied that he is "a candidate for any office" but activities of a number of his friends have caused the belief that the Senator must have had "his fingers crossed" when he so expressed himself.

It was noticeable that at the Democratic State convention in Jefferson City several of Reed's most ardent friends were promotors of the proposal for the convention to indorse Reed for President, a suggestion which was only tepidly voiced when Reed was convinced of the injection in the convention would have disastrous results for the candidacy of Harry B. Hawes for the Senate.

Proved Reed's Strength.

Showing Reed's strength in the face of election results, it appears that Hawes would not have suffered from the adoption of such a resolution by the convention, but the situation was not as apparent then as it is now.

Notwithstanding much advice from rural sections that Reed's prominence in the campaign would cost Hawes many thousand votes and the warning that the anti-Reed sentiment was not dead, only slumbering, Chairman Forbes of the Democratic State Committee used Reed extensively for speeches in St. Louis and out in the State.

Reed delivered "wet" speeches, "anti-Klan" speeches and "anti-Reed Court" speeches, Fordyce has warned that this would cause many "Democrats" and "Wilson Democrats" to remain away from the polls. But it didn't do anything of the kind.

Not Much Opposition.

Rural Democrats were convinced that the only way for the Democrats to get representation in office was for Democrats to vote for Democratic candidates, and they responded to the polls, "wet" Democrats and "dry" Democrats, "progressives and anti-leaguers." Many of them had voted for Hawes in the primary on the theory that he was the only candidate who could win in the general election, and had forgot their differences with him on many issues in the election, and voted for him then.

There is no doubt they have taken the same feeling toward Senator Reed for the presidency. A whole lot of them don't agree with him on prohibition nor on the Reed Court, and they didn't agree with Hawes. Although Hawes publicly was not quite as "wet" as Reed, the voters knew that in real fact there was precious little differ-

Mum Growing on an 8-Foot Stem

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

They have to look up to this one—the eight-foot M. L. Rouseau, tallest "mum" in the annual Chrysanthemum Show now on view at Shaw's Garden for a month.

FALL CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW TO OPEN TODAY

Display of 3000 Blossoms at Shaw's Garden to Be Continued for a Month.

Autumn's degance of approaching winter shines no less gorgeously in the bright foliage of country woods than in the chrysanthemum show which will open at 2 p. m. today at Shaw's Garden.

All through November the chrysanthemums will be shown.

Anyone may go there free, any time between 2 p. m. and sunset on Sundays and between 9 a. m. and sunset on week days. The garden entrance is at Flora place and Tower Grove avenue, on the Vandeventer car line and near the Russell boulevard bus line.

Among the 300 varieties and 3000 specimens are many strange and beautiful varieties from Japan, but the most familiar still remain to many the most attractive—the great, lordly sunbursts of yellow.

These, including the "Golden Wedding," the yellow William Turner, the yellow Bockett, and the Nagirroc—looking like a very tousled head of hair—make a huge panel at the north end of the display house look like a yellow bonfire. Beside them, but a long way from their arrogance, are the aptly named white "Puritans," diminutive and modest.

Not all the little ones in the bush varieties are like the "Puritans." There is the equally well named "Coquette," for instance, the "Claret" and the "Caprice." The fanciers don't think so much of the Caprice these days. "Caprices are becoming as common in chrysanthemums," said one, "as in women."

Bush varieties and pompons are banked along the walls and about the three panels in the center of the big single stem "mums." The middle panel is all white. "Innocence" Mrs. Charles J. Johnson, white Turners, and the golden-hearted Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. The front panels holds a subtly-shaded congeries of pinks and mauves, Norissas, pink Turners and Cornetas.

These by no means throw the "wall flowers" in the shade, even to the nickel-size "little Tott." Its name is a coincidence and no a misspelling. Tott was its originator. Outstanding also is the Mrs. Harrison, an unusually large pompon attractively delicate of tint but especially an achievement in symmetry.

HALL-MILLS CASE PAID HIM $2500, DETECTIVE SAYS

1923, he had gone to the home of Henry Stevens at Lavallette, N. J., to question the man who now is a defendant, as to his movements on the night of the murders. Stevens told him, he said, that he was fishing on the beach at Lavallette. Stevens was quoted by the witness as saying that he had at various times owned "guns" of .32 and .38 caliber. An effort to more definitely identify these "guns" as revolvers, rifles or other arms, failed. Dickman also added that Stevens seemed "nervous" and "evasive."

Other witnesses served only to identify records and contribute to the historical aspect of the case. George Totten, Somerset County detective at the time of the killing identified the clothing worn by the slain couple when they met their death.

John E. Toolan, assistant prosecutor of the adjoining county of Middlesex, when the killings took place, and now prosecutor of the county, read a long digest of questions and answers in a conversation with Mrs. Hall, shortly after the crime. This examination was conducted by the witness and the late prosecutor Beekman.

Mrs. Hall's declaration four years ago, that her husband's love "was the most beautiful thing that ever existed," was read into the record by Mr. Toolan.

Knocks Barber's Itch Often In 48 Hours

Men who are troubled with barber's itch, rash, pimples or poison ivy, should try this new treatment, which is said to be effective often in 48 hours: Night and morning bathe the face in warm water, and apply Whyte-Fox liquid compound, following with applications of Whyte-Fox Cream. This treatment has astounded experts by correcting not only the commonly known forms of skin troubles, but also many that are unnamed or misnamed. Whyte-Fox is now put up in convenient form for home use, and may be had at good drug stores at small cost, under a money-back guarantee. Treatments also are given at most good barber shops.

MAN IMPLICATES WOMAN RELATIVE IN $800 HOLDUP

Prisoner Taken After Chase Had Seized the Payroll Money From Wife of Contractor.

A woman relative of the robber and of the woman robbed is blamed by the holdup man as the instigator of the theft of an $800 payroll taken from Mrs. Edward J. Frederich of 2843A Texas avenue, at Texas avenue and Lynch street yesterday morning. The woman suspect denies implication in the crime, but is being held for questioning at the Wyoming Street Police Station.

Mrs. Frederich is accustomed to getting the weekly payroll for her husband, a granitoid contractor, whose place of business is at 2819 Texas avenue. She drew the $800 in bills yesterday from the Jefferson-Gravois Bank, placed it in a purse with a strap over her wrist, and walked away. The robber grabbed the purse, and in the struggle for its possession the strap broke and he ran away with the purse, while she pursued a short distance, crying loudly for help.

Neighbors telephoned the police and street signal lights in the district were flashed. Detectives Mergelkamp, Immeken and Gruhalla, responding, saw a man running and caught him at Ohio avenue and Sidney street. At the police station he said he was William Hosford, 22 years old, a shoe worker, of 2442 North Grand boulevard.

Victim Identifies Robber.

Mrs. Frederich, who said she had seen him only once before, but recognized him, identified him as the robber. He had a cap drawn low on his forehead and kept his head down during the robbery, she related. He had $270 of the payroll hidden in one shoe and the rest was in his coat pocket. Stopping in an alley during his flight to hide the bills in his shoe was a slip on his part that gave the detectives time to reach the neighborhood.

Hosford, admitting the robbery to a Post-Dispatch reporter, referred to a written statement given police for details. A woman relative told him last Monday about Mrs. Frederich's practice in getting the payroll, according to the statement, and they agreed to commit the robbery. Accordingly, it went on, he called for the woman this morning in an automobile and they drove to Jefferson avenue and Sidney street.

Then he helped himself to the automobile of a friend of his employed at a factory at Texas avenue and Sidney street, which was parked there, and drove the woman in it to the scene of the robbery. the statement asserted, adding that the woman stayed in the car while he crossed the street and robbed Mrs. Frederich. He was wearing an old topcoat and he said he left his hat and a better topcoat in the coupe. Apparently he became confused after the robbery and forgot about the car.

Hat and Topcoat Found.

The hat and topcoat were found at the woman relative's home, the police reported. The old topcoat, with a water pistol in the pocket, and Mrs. Frederich's purse were found in the rear yard of 2622 Ohio avenue by a small boy.

"I don't know why they should accuse me," said the woman he implicated, "I was home all morning, except for a short time when I went to a store, and I know nothing about the robbery. I'm not envious of Mrs. Frederich; she has a car and I haven't, but I have better furniture in my home than hers. We have been friendly and our families have been going out together every week."

Hosford made his confession to Capt. O'Brien and Detective-Lieutenant Amrhein.

GIRL, 11, KILLED UNDER TRAILER OF MILK TRUCK

Helen Nikola Falls in Attempting to Get Down After Riding on Coupling of Vehicles.

Falling from the coupling of a milk truck and trailer, Helen Nikola, 11 years old, of 1340 South Thirteenth street, was run over by a wheel of the trailer and fatally injured, on the Free Bridge at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. She died at City Hospital six hours later.

Helen, with her brother, Alfred, 7, and their playmate, Irene Owens, 14, of 1409A South Fourteenth street, had made a trip to East Louis. Returning on foot over the bridge, they were about 100 yards from the Seventh street end when the truck passed slowly.

The two girls ran between the truck and trailer, climbing up. According to Irene, Helen started to get down again because the boy had not joined them, and lost her balance.

The driver, Dan Masterson, 25 years old, of 909 Le Beaume street, employed by the St. Louis Dairy Co., was arrested by bridge policemen. He said he did not know the girls had climbed on the coupling until he felt the trailer jolt and heard a girl scream.

Man Injured When Struck by Speeding Automobile.

Louis J. Lefevre, 53 years old, of 3013A North Twentieth street, suffered fractures of the left leg and arm when he was struck by a speeding automobile at Broadway and Ferry street at 10:30 o'clock last night. He was picked up by the occupants of a machine, apparently the one that hit him, carried to the sidewalk and left there to be found later by the crew of a passing street car.

GROCER AND WIFE HELD UP IN STORE AND ROBBED OF $420

Two Men Enter Place at 1701 Carr Street, Take Cash Then Flee in Auto.

Harry Koenig last night reported that he and his wife were held up in their grocery at 1701 Carr street at 10 o'clock by two men who took $420 from the cash register and rode away in an automobile driven by a third man. The money was insured.

Theodore Meckfessel of 4814 Cupples place was robbed of $2 by two Negroes who held him up a short distance from his home at 10 o'clock last night.

ARMISTICE DAY OBSERVANCE

A community Armistice day service will be held at Christ Church Cathedral, Thirteenth and Locust streets, at noon next Thursday. Rabbi Leon Harrison will deliver an address, "Ground Arms."

A prayer for peace will be offered in all Episcopal churches throughout the country today.

Self-Styled Ford Agent Put Off Queen's Train

receptions, hotel and similar bills are paid by local committees, he added.

Ayres Introduces Ileana.

Ayres was an unexpectedly prominent figure in the program, followed today by Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana. After driving by automobile with their mother from Bellingham to Burlington, Wash., the children completed the journey to Seattle by motor, driving cars provided by Ayres, while Marie remained with the train. Ileana drove an open car with Ayres beside her.

At Seattle they drove to Washington stadium to see the Washington-California football game. Although the Princess' lady-in-waiting and the Prince's aid were in the party, Ayres acted as host and guide and presented several local persons to the royal children.

There was no indication tonight that any change will be made in the itinerary for the remainder of the journey which calls for a two-day stop at Detroit and a visit to the Ford plant. It was understood on the train that automobiles would be given the royal visitors by the Ford company.

From Seattle the party will start East tomorrow morning, by way of Spokane, Wash., and according to present plans will sail soon after arriving in New York. With her the Queen will carry memories of many unusual experiences, even for a Queen, and some of them will not be wholly pleasant.

Gov. Richardson Declines.

Following the reported dispute between members of her party recently in Portland, Ore., came the announcement today from Gov. F. W. Richardson of California that he would not officially invite the Queen to that state. The Governor's announcement was in response to a question put to him by newspaper men after Mrs. Alma De Brettville Speckles, formerly a member of the Queen's party, had returned to San Francisco and said she believed Marie would visit California, if the Governor officially invited her.

"If any King, Queen, potentate or executive of any foreign country should come to California, I know they would be cordially welcomed by our citizens," said the governor. "Many potentates have visited California during the past four years. Many have called at my office to pay respects of their countries. In no case have I invited the head of any foreign country to come to California. The Rumanian case is the only one in which it has been suggested. All visitors are welcome to come to California regardless of whether they are Queens or Kings or just plain, honest citizens."

The Southern Pacific Railroad declined to carry the Queen's special train through California for $1, the charge made by other roads over which she traveled. As a result her projected visit to the Golden State was canceled.

From Portland today came declarations of Rabbi Max J. Merritt of Temple Beth Israel, in an address before his congregation, that the Rumanians were "still clinging obstinately to the oppressive tactics of the barbarous past in their treatment of the Jews" and that he hoped the Queen would learn on her American tour "what Jews can give to a country that gives them opportunity for advancement."

Queen Keeps Silence.

Meanwhile the Queen is silent on all of the events which have been reported as disturbing the serenity of the tour.

On the return to Seattle, Queen Marie's train stopped at Blaine long enough for her to dedicate the peace portal along the American-Canadian border there. The peace portal was built by Hill. In dedicating the monument the Queen told the several hundred persons present that she understood the builder's thought was to do something to inspire world peace. She expressed the hope that similar portals would be built throughout the world and take the place of monuments which recall the deeds of war.

ROUTE QUEEN MARIE WILL TRAVEL THROUGH STREETS OF ST. LOUIS

AFTER a brief ceremony of welcome to Queen Marie of Rumania on her arrival at 10 a. m. Friday, automobiles will convey the royal party from Union and Lindell boulevards east to Kingshighway and the Coronado Hotel.

At 11:30 a. m. a parade through the business district will begin. Paced by motor cycle police, the procession will leave the hotel, moving east on Lindell boulevard to Grand boulevard, thence south to the entrance of St. Louis University for a brief stop.

Leaving the university, the party will move east on Pine boulevard to Theresa avenue, thence to Channing avenue through the Lindell cutoff to Washington boulevard, East to Broadway, South to Olive street, West to Twelfth boulevard, North to Locust street and west via Locust and Lindell to the hotel.

Ford's Secretary Knows Nothing of "J. B. Ayres."

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 6.—J. B. Ayres, professing to be a personal representative of Henry Ford, witn Queen Marie's party, who stated Ford has been paying "incidental" expenses of the party on its American tour, is unknown to officials of the Ford organization here, E. G. Leibold, private secretary to Ford declares here tonight.

Leibold said there was nothing unusual in Ford's offering the use of automobiles to the party. It is a courtesy extended through his agencies to thousands of important persons visiting America, Leibold said the Ford organization had offered the Queen's party use of cars at cities where it has agencies.

Leibold said he could not account for the statement by Ayres that Ford had cared for "incidental" expenses of the party. In the absence of Ford, he said he did not feel qualified to make a statement for the manufacturer. He indicated, however, that he thought Ayres' assertion without foundation.

Ford could not be reached tonight for a statement.

Other officials of the Ford organization said Ayres was unknown to them and were doubtful that Ayres had any connection with the headquarters of the organization here.

Attacks Cut Receipts of "Royal Performance" to $17,000.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Wayne Kendrick, certified public accountant and treasurer of the Woman's Universal Alliance for the Mothers' Memorial, declared in a statement today that gross receipts at the Metropolitan Opera House performance in New York, Oct. 24, which was attended by Queen Marie, amounted to approximately $17,000.

The entertainment feature was a ballet, "The Lily of Life," based on a fairy story written by Queen Marie, presented by the Loie Fuller troupe, and some of the boxes were said to have been sold for $1,000 or more each. Net proceeds were dedicated to a fund the alliance is raising and probably would have been greater than they were, Kendrick said, if "uncalled for attacks on the entertainment" had not caused many boxholders to cancel their reservations and take seats in the orchestra.

MRS. M'PHERSON AND MOTHER SUED FOR LIBEL

Los Angeles Paper Says Sister of Mrs. Sielaff Seeks $1,000,000 Damages.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 6. — The Los Angeles Examiner says Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, were made defendants in a $1,000,000 suit, charging libel, filed here today by Mrs. Viola Kimball, of Oakland, twin sister of Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Sielaff, co-defendant with the Angelus Temple leaders on criminal conspiracy.

The white sports blouse reported found in Kenneth G. Ormiston's trunk, seized recently in New York, which District Attorney Keyes believed would be identified as the property of Mrs. McPherson, is missing, Keyes announced today.

The discovery that this garment was not in the trunk was made when W. C. Farley, proprietor of a Carmel (Cal.) cleaning establishment, was brought here to attempt to identify it as one he had cleaned and delivered to the woman companion of Ormiston at a cottage there last May.

A handkerchief, reported from New York to have had the name of "Paul Rader" on it, also was missing when the trunk's contents were rechecked in a bank vault here, Keyes said. Paul Rader, a Chicago evangelist, assisted in the pulpit at Mrs. McPherson's Angelus Temple early last spring.

Mrs. McPherson, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and others are held for trial in Superior Court on a conspiracy charge. The evangelist disappeared last May. Reappearing at Douglas, Ariz., five weeks later, she said she had been kidnaped, taken into Mexico and held for ransom. The State contends she was living with Ormiston in a cottage at Carmel, and accuses her and her co-defendants with plotting to manufacture false evidence to support her kidnaping story.

HAWES VICTORY CLEARS WAY FOR SENATOR REED

ence between them. Hawes announced he was opposed to the World Court, possibly not as forcefully against it as Reed, but against it.

It may be expected there will be opposition to an instructed delegation for Reed, but it probably will dissolve quickly. The Democrats of Missouri had six years of internal strife and its net result was the election of Republicans. They abandoned the family fight in this election and elected Democrats. They are not in a mood now to revive the old fight.

Hay and Kemper.

Reed's retirement from the Senate will open the way for spirited contests in both parties for the right of succession, though up to this time there have been no definite indications of a Democratic lineup for the Senatorship. Charles M. Hay, "dry" leader, undoubtedly saw encouragement in the huge majority against Proposition No. 4, and his ambition to be United States Senator is by no means dead.

However, Hay would go up against a very strong opposition for the nomination notwithstanding the active support he gave Hawes in the election. Credit is due to Hay for keeping in line a very large element of Democrats out in the State, but it is extremely doubtful if St. Louis "wet" Democrats would remember this service. Hay has made many bitter enemies by the force of his fight against Reed in 1922 and his fight for prohibition.

And yet, the situation might shape itself to make him the nominee. So far there has been little activity among Democrats for the 1928 senatorship. About the only gesture has been from William T. Kemper of Kansas City, Democratic National Committeeman, of whom mention was made in so many rural Democratic newspapers immediately after Reed's announcement of retirement, that it could not have been spontaneous. The suggestion, however, did not seem to take root and Kemper is not now being seriously considered.

Hyde's Fatal Error.

Until the fatal Hyde speech in Jefferson City at the Republican campaign opening, it generally had been conceded the former Governor would have the Republican Senatorial nomination next time virtually without opposition. But when Hyde committed the great political mistake of bringing the German question into the campaign by his criticism of Hawes for going to Europe to bring home Mrs. Adolphus Busch in war time, he seriously endangered, if he did not wreck, his hope of going to the Senate.

He provided the Democrats with the one thing they needed to swing the big German Republican vote to Hawes, and he made lasting enemies of that part of the Republican voters in St. Louis, which represents the Republican majority of more than 25,000.

Former Mayor Kiel, Collector Koeln and Charles Nagel could have held most of this vote in line on the prohibition issue by an explanation that Senator Williams was as wet as Hawes, but when the German question came into the campaign, there was nothing they could do. This element of the Republican party wanted to vote for Hawes and the Hyde speech gave it the excuse.

There is little probability these voters will forget the Hyde speech in two years, and coupled with the fact they know Hyde to be a "dry," there is little probability that Hyde would be able to do much in the primary in St. Louis.

Republican Possibilities.

Because of the fact that Hyde had been looked upon as the next senatorial nominee, there had been little discussion of other candidates prior to the election Tuesday, but since then there has been a lot of talk among Republicans, centering mostly on Cleveland A. Newton, Tenth District Congressman, who voluntarily retires from Congress next March, and former Attorney-General Barrett.

Both have kept themselves free from embarrassing factional alignments, and both clearly are available. Newton is "wet," but he has not been noisy enough about it to cause himself any real trouble in the country. Barrett is neither objectionable to the "wets" in the city nor the "drys" in the country.

It may be that the talk of Newton for Senator will not be allowed to proceed very far. For several days there has been a rumor among Republicans that the Kiel-Koeln combination in effect during the last campaign for the advancement of Koeln, particularly, in his race for re-election, and of Williams, incidentally, will break up very shortly, and that Newton will be the Koeln candidate for Mayor.

As against this, however, there is some doubt that Newton would consent to oppose Kiel, and a considerable likelihood that, if he thought the outlook good for the senatorship, he would prefer to go after that.

Residence a Factor.

Barrett, since his retirement from office, has practiced law in St. Louis, and has helped out in the campaigns, delivering speeches for the ticket without becoming embroiled in primary quarrels. As against Hyde, there is little doubt that he would have the support of the local Republican organization, and he also could be expected to cut into the Hyde following out in the State.

About the only disturbing element to Barrett's candidacy would be that he resides in St. Louis and his election would give both seats in the Senate to St. Louis. This might not take well in the western part of the State.

That there would be a Kansas City candidate of strength against him, however, is doubtful. The controlling faction in the Republican party there is so enmeshed with the Hyde organization that it could not get away from supporting Hyde.

The prospect of Judge Otto becoming a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor must be disturbing to a number of State office-holders who had been attempting to arrange alignments for themselves. They expected Otto to be elected Judge of the Supreme Court and had not counted on him as a gubernatorial possibility.

Now, that is changed. While Otto apparently was defeated, he made such a strong race that it is doubtful that he could be defeated for the nomination for the other place, though, of course, sometimes a man will develop great strength for one job and little for another.

Others under Republican consideration are Thomas J. Brown of Charleston, chairman, and Almon Ing of Poplar Bluff, a member of the Public Service Commission; Charles U. Becker, Secretary of State; former Mayor Kiel; Mayor Albert I. Beach of Kansas City, and Congressman Charles L. Faust of St. Joseph.

Kiel's One Ambition.

Brown is tied up more or less with the fortunes of Hyde and his stock as a candidate has dropped some since the election. Ing is merely a prospect, and Becker probably has been eliminated by the disclosures of his connection with the Missouri State Journal and its officers, and their connection with the wrecked Citizens' State Bank of Englewood, a suburb of Kansas City. Kiel is said to have only one ambition, to be re-elected Mayor of St. Louis, which would seem to bring the matter down to Faust and Beach.

Beach is strong in the western part of the State and has a creditable public service behind him, but he is closely lined up with the Hyde organization, which might work to his disadvantage.

Faust is recognized as one of the outstanding Republicans of the State, with a very commendable record in public office, the duties of which he has taken very seriously. His personality and record have made him [illegible] in the Fourth District, which his advent in politics had been [illegible] ocratic for years.

Fause Doesn't Want It.

But Faust's friends say he does not want to be Governor now; that he has no desire for other office than the one he has. It is said that if he gets into the race for Governor, his friends or some combination of Republican leaders have to force him in.

A musical sensation that has swept the country...

The New Orthophonic

Victor Record

For more than two years, Victor experimented to produce the record which is now sweeping the country. While this improved record has been available for some months, we did not want to present it formally to the public until it had definitely proved its worth as the finest record made.

Two weeks ago we announced the new Orthophonic Record. Already millions of music-lovers have been thrilled by the music of this new and wonderful type of Victor Record—a record unequaled in clarity, tone, and fidelity to the original.

Here at last is a record as good as the Orthophonic Victrola. There is nothing with which to compare it, except the singing or playing of the artists themselves.

Close your eyes and you cannot believe that you are listening to a reproducing instrument playing a record. It is just as much the actual artist as though he or she were in the room with you. For the tone of these amazing records is the tone of naturalness—round, full, true, not pinched and not too loud.

Microphone recording—Orthophonic—Artists now sing or play in natural position before a microphone, just as they sing or play at a public performance. The microphone "hears" and records what you would hear were you there.

Unpleasant scratch eliminated—Made from a new improved material, Orthophonic Records have eliminated those annoying surface-noises so common to the ordinary type of record. You hear the music and nothing else. Also, these records have longer life.

That elusive "third dimension"—Victor has captured what a great musician calls the "third dimension"—depth! Just as the great masters gave "relief" and depth to their paintings, so these new records give depth and roundness of tone to reproduced music.

Foremost artists in every class—Victor has always attracted the foremost singers and instrumentalists of the world—operatic—orchestral—popular and dance. Their confidence is more than ever justified by the lifelike fidelity of Victor's new Orthophonic recordings.

Record stops automatically—An exclusive feature of the Orthophonic Victor Record is a groove, cut "off center." When the music has finished playing, the needle swings into this groove and applies the automatic stop on all modern Victrolas.

Hearing is believing—Whether you own an Orthophonic Victrola or not, hear these new Victor Records. They play on any instrument—and vastly improve its playing quality.

Go to your nearest Victor dealer. Go expecting the musical thrill of a lifetime. You will not be disappointed.

Comes E. A. Kieselhorst

When John A. Kieselhorst II and his wife died in 1895 the eldest son, Edwin A. Kieselhorst succeeded to the business.

Mr. Kieselhorst, popularly known as "E. A." or "Ed," was but 20 years old when he took charge of this great business.

That the house was established and doing well, did not mean that the responsibilities were light.

On the contrary, this succession involved much headwork, much untiring effort, much tact and diplomacy to demontrate that back of his youthfulness was the intelligence and wisdom of a man twice his years.

Of extraordinary energy, Mr. Kieselhorst built on a firm foundation an institution known in America and abroad as one of the leading piano houses of the entire world.

TAX REBATE PLAN DUE TO PRESSURE ON PRESIDENT

Coolidge Advances Scheme as Compromise Between Democratic Plea for Reduction and Delay.

PLAN IS TO REFUND MILLIONS TO PEOPLE

Proposal Helps Take Public Attention Off Elections and Puts President on Offensive.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1926.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—President Coolidge's announcement that he favors a rebate on income tax payments made during the year 1926 on incomes earned in 1925 represents a compromise between two plans which were so hopelessly involved with politics that decision was deferred until after the Congressional elections.

The Democrats have been insisting that another tax revision law could be adopted at the short session of Congress which begins next month and ends in March. The Republicans in Congress have impressed on the administration that it would be difficult for them to stop the Democrats if such a move should be started.

President Coolidge had hoped that tax reduction could be deferred until the Congress which meets in December, 1927. It was contended that not until then would there be a clear idea of how the tax law which went into effect this year actually operated.

Political Pressure Intense.

Secretary Mellon has shared the view of the President that it would be better to get further data before trying to levy another set of rates, but the political pressure to do something at the session of Congress which begins next month was intense. Accordingly the decisions has been reached by the adminstration that a rebate on 1926 payments would not commit the Government to a permanent reduction of rates but would satisfy the clamor for an immediate reduction.

"Whether the Democrats have been checked by this move remains to be seen, but it is quite likely they will endeavor to get the rates revised. They have the figures issued by the Treasury as a basis for their argument and the administration will have to use considerable pressure to keep the Republicans in line behind the policy of no revision.

Much more, however, can be accomplished in a short session of Congress to block revenue legislation than would be the case if the session did not expire automatically on March 4.

By announcing that a simple resolution of rebate would be approved, the administration has taken the initiative and incidentally will develope a novelty in that actual money will be returned to the taxpayer. The psychological effect of returning 10 or 12 per cent of money which the taxpayer, as the slang phrase has it, had "kissed good-by," is something that cannot be underestimated.

Effect on Business.

But entirely apart from this is the effect on business if $250,000,000 is turned back to the American people. Much of it will go either for luxuries or for the payment of debts. In either event the economic conditions of the country will be improved and the Republicans will have given momentum to another argument about prosperity which will come in handy just as the 1928 nominating campaign begins and the voters' minds are turned toward the next presidential election.

The strategy of the President in taking the initiative before Congress meets is considered by his friends to be wise for two reasons: First, the administration will not be on the defensive when Congress meets; and second, it helps to take the mind of the country off Tuesday's election with the more or less unpleasant impressions of Democratic gains.

But the outstanding fact is that predictions made when the first returns were analyzed last spring have been borne out, namely, that the present tax rates have been more productive than dreamed and the way has been opened for further reductions in rates.

5-CENT CIGARS GOOD AGAIN

Tom Marshall's Wish Has Come True, Makers Declare.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—"What this country needs most," said the late Thomas R. Marshall, Vice President during the Wilson administration, "is a good 5-cent cigar."

Now the officers of the largest cigar manufacturing company in the country say the five-centers being sold today are just as good as any the country ever has had, notwithstanding an increase by 80 per cent in cost of living generally since 1913. Mass production by machinery, chain store retailing and reduction of taxes has made it possible, they declare.

Kennard's Announces its 40th Oriental Rug Anniversary

The Most Magnificent Collection Ever Assembled

Additional space has had to be taken on Kennard's Third Floor in order to display the really marvelous Orientals assembled by Mr. M. C. Seropyan in connection with Kennard's 40th Oriental Rug Anniversary. Every sort and size of rug that Persia produces is now on exhibition . . . a mammoth collection as compared to the tiny stock that Kennard's pioneered with in 1886 . . . an exhibition, not only notable locally, but outstanding from a National standpoint. No one who revels in the glowing Oriental colorings and designs should miss seeing it.

Special Anniversary Reductions of 10% to 30%

Aside from being a rare sight—Kennard's Oriental Rug Anniversary is a real buying opportunity. To celebrate a long and honorable history, the Oriental Rug Department has been authorized to sell for this limited time at marked reductions. On some rugs there is a saving of as high as $500 . . . and these rugs have not been purchased for sale purpose . . . but each one, large or small, is a real find of its kind.

Like the Galleries of a Fine Rug Museum

Unbaled, and draped in full view, in all their splendors, the Orientals in Kennard's 40th Anniversary, are a sight for those who can appreciate them, rivaling the Museum collections in interest and yet sold commercially at these very marked price reductions. Kennard's is not a store of extravagant claims—but never in its entire history—has any finer stock been assembled—or at any such decided markdowns.

Don't Miss this Unusual Exhibition of Persian Rug Weavers' Art

COOLIDGE URGES AID FOR RED CROSS

Proclamation Calls on Americans to Enroll in "Legion of Mercy."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—President Coolidge, in a proclamation issued today, urged all American citizens to renew their membership in the American Red Cross in the roll call which will extend from Armistice Day, Nov. 11, to Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 25.

"The American Red Cross has a foremost place in the ranks of distinctive American institutions which we honor and loyally support," the proclamation says. "Operating in practically every city, town and county in the United States as well as in our territorial possessions, it has become an intimate part of our every-day life. To it we turn instinctively and confidently when sudden calamities occur.

"Each year we have renewed proof of the willingness, the promptness, and the efficiency of this organization in responding to the call of duty. It has become the recognized agency of our Government and of our people in meeting emergencies calling for prompt assistance of a material character, whether on our own or foreign soil.

"It is not alone at time of disaster that the Red Cross serves humanity. It has been called the greatest mother in the world' to thousands of ex-service men not yet recovered from disabilities received during the war. As a definite duty placed upon it by the Congress the Red Cross does much to prevent as well as to relieve suffering. In teaching methods of life-saving and safeguarding the public health the organization has become as valuable in time of peace as in war.

"In these many services to suffering humanity, the American Red Cross is able to act in the name of all the people of the United States. This is so because each year from Armistice day to Thanksgiving day, the organization extends to everyone the invitation to enroll in its ranks. Its work is supported by these membership dues.

"It is a privilege and a duty shared by all our people to continue our support of this fine organization. As President of the United States and as president of the American Red Cross, I earnestly ask all our citizens to renew their membership in this legion of mercy.'"

EDGAR LEE MASTERS MARRIES

Present Wife While Writing Sonnets to Former.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Edgar Lee Masters, poet and lawyer, who was married a second time in New York yesterday to Miss Ellen Coyne of Kansas City, is descended from a family of Illinois pioneers although he was born in Garnett, Kan. He once related that his grandmother, wife of a Spoon River Justice of the Peace, refused to allow Abraham Lincoln to try a lawsuit in her home because his witnesses were chewing tobacco.

Masters is said to have met his present bride while writing "14 sonnets" to his former wife, Helen Jenkins Masters of Chicago, who divorced him in 1922. He was criticized by newspaper reviewers for having taken a rather doleful view in those verses of the marriage state.

WAGE RULING REJECTION

Canadian Rail Men's Agents Oppose Decision Against Increase.

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, Nov. 6.—Acceptance or rejection of a recent conciliation board ruling against an increase in wages will be put to a vote of the 15,000 members of the Trainmen's Union, with the recommendation of 200 representatives, who have been considering the matter, that rejection be voted. The delegates, who have been in closed session for two days, reached their decision today. The union members are employes of the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific roads.

Scientific facts every home owner must face!

Tests show that the usual building materials when used alone offer inadequate protection against cold and heat. Lining your attic with Celotex will make your home more comfortable. It will save in fuel money more than it costs.

Relative heat-stopping values of building materials

These cross-sections show why Celotex is needed as insulation, in addition to the usual building materials.

Wood. It takes three times the thickness of wood lumber to equal the effectiveness of Celotex as insulation.

Wall-Board. You would have to use four layers of the average wall-board to equal the insulation value of one layer of Celotex Plaster Board. It takes four times the thickness of plaster boards to equal the effectiveness of Celotex as insulation.

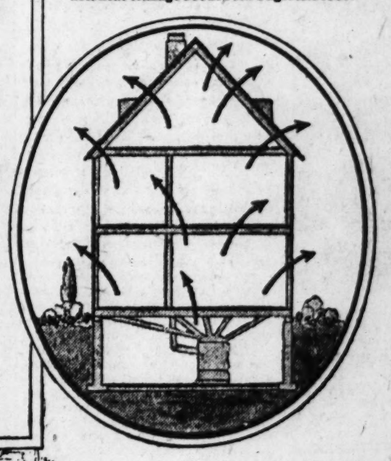
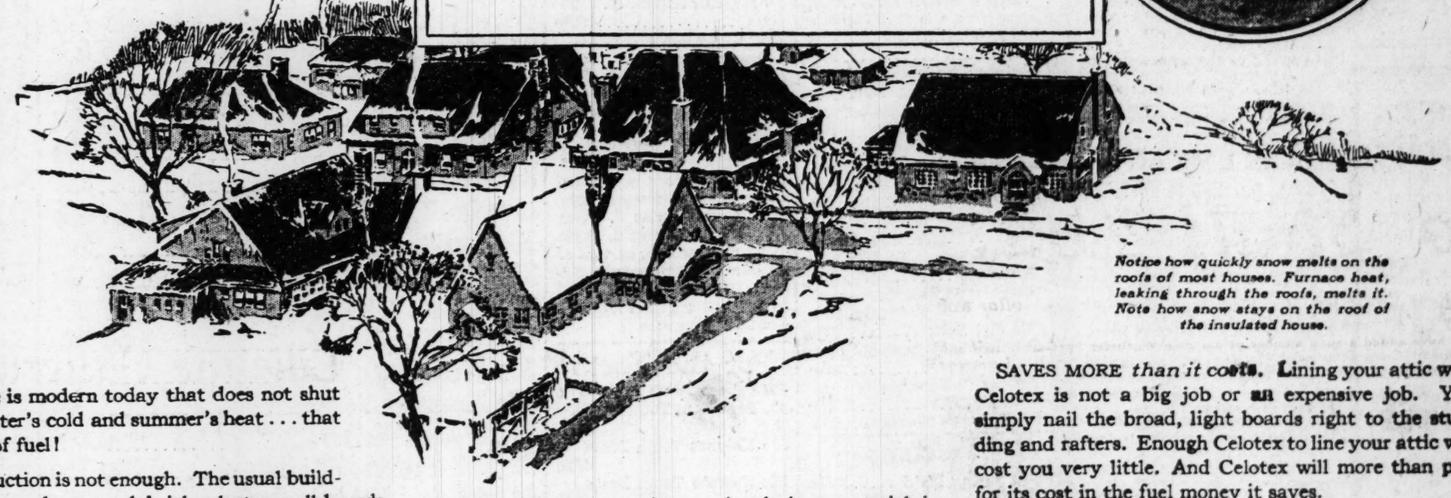
Plaster would have to be eight times as thick as Celotex to resist the passage of heat and cold as effectively as Celotex does.

Celotex. This layer of Celotex is equal in insulating value to the proportionate thicknesses of the other materials shown here.

This data is compiled from tests published by the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers and other recognized authorities.

Because furnace heated air naturally rises, the greatest amount of the avoidable heat-leakage occurs through the roof.





Notice how quickly snow melts on the roofs of most houses. Furnace heat, leaking through the roofs, melts it. Note how snow stays on the roof of the insulated house.

NO home is modern today that does not shut out winter's cold and summer's heat . . . that is wasteful of fuel!

Solid construction is not enough. The usual building materials such as wood, brick, plaster, wall-boards, shingles and roofing materials, alone, offer too little resistance to the passage of heat and cold. Scientific tests prove it.

And careful experiments in hundreds of homes show that there is an avoidable heat loss of from 25% to 35% right through solid walls and roofs of homes built with only these materials.

A special heat-stopping, or insulating, material is needed. And such a material is available for every home, new or old, right now.

This material is Celotex, the amazing lumber that stops the passage of heat and cold . . . shuts out wind and moisture . . . quiets noise. Celotex is not cut from trees, but is manufactured from the tough fibres of cane. The broad Celotex boards are stronger in walls than wood lumber.

Already more than 90,000 new homes built with Celotex have set a new American building standard. For these homes are winter-warm, summer-cool, quiet, strong and about ⅓ more economical to heat.

LINE YOUR ATTIC with Celotex. Thousands more who built before Celotex was available are now making their old homes modern by lining their attics with this amazing lumber.

While attic insulation cannot effect the same results as complete house insulation, it gives protection where it is most needed. The roof is the most exposed, yet the thinnest and least protected part of your house. Also, because heated air rises, the greatest amount of the avoidable heat-leakage is through the roof in winter. And in summer, such a roof is poor protection against the sun's attack.

Anyone who can use a saw and hammer can finish off an attic room with Celotex. You simply nail the broad, light boards to the studding and rafters. Celotex not only shuts out winter-cold and summer-heat but converts your cold attic into an attractive, livable room.

SAVES MORE than it costs. Lining your attic with Celotex is not a big job or an expensive job. You simply nail the broad, light boards right to the studding and rafters. Enough Celotex to line your attic will cost you very little. And Celotex will more than pay for its cost in the fuel money it saves.

Celotex also converts your old attic into a comfortable, livable room. Its golden-tan color and rough-textured surface make an attractive wall finish . . . or you can decorate it in many ways.

There are also many other places where Celotex is the ideal material for re-decorating, repairing or re-modeling.

Ask your architect, contractor or lumber dealer to tell you more about this amazing lumber. All lumber dealers can supply Celotex. Also ask about the $200 gold bond now issued on all Celotex-insulated homes.

Meanwhile, send the coupon below for the free Celotex Building Book. It tells you how to use Celotex in old and new homes alike.

Heating costs cut 26%
when the attic of this Chicago home was lined with Celotex

Actual records from the Peoples Gas Light & Coke Company, show that the owner of this house at 5424 Trumbull Avenue, Chicago, saved 26% in fuel money by lining the attic with Celotex. The house was heated by a gas-fired boiler at a cost of $338.40 for one year before the Celotex was applied. The next season's gas consumption, after the Celotex was applied amounted to only $250.92 . . . a saving of $87.48. (Allowances made to correct for the difference in the severity of the winters.)

FARMER CHARGED WITH KILLING HIS FRIEND OF YEARS

Lyman Peterson, 64, Arrested as He Lay in Bed in Same Room With Body of John Klaus, 59.

BOTH HAD DRUNK FROM KEG OF WINE

Highland (Ill.) Man Tells Police He Remembers Quarrel but Cannot Recall Striking Neighbor.

Charged with killing his best friend in a drunken quarrel, Lyman Peterson, 64 years old, was held for the grand jury after an inquest at Highland, Ill., yesterday into the murder of John Klaus, 59.

The body of Klaus, with the skull fractured, was found on the floor of Peterson's home at Grant Park, near Highland, by a neighbor's boy who went there to borrow a horse at 7 a. m. The boy saw Peterson asleep on a bed in the same room.

Officers, notified by the boy, went to Peterson's house. Peterson still was sleeping, in the same room with the body. Aroused and arrested, he said Klaus paid him a social visit Friday night and he opened a keg of wine. They drank considerable wine and became intoxicated, he said, after whichg a quarrel developed, for no particular reason. He did not remember striking Klaus. A thick board was found near Klaus' body, indicating he had been struck on the head. Peterson was not injured.

Peterson, a widower, lived alone on his farm. Klaus, a bachelor, lived alone on a neighboring farm. They had been friends for years.

MRS. EMMA A. ROWLAND, 80, DIES IN HOSPITAL

Widow of Former President of Merchants' Exchange Succumbs Following Stroke.

The funeral of Mrs. Emma Aderton Rowland, widow of David P. Rowland, who was a former president of the Merchants' Exchange, will be at 2:30 p. m. today in the Wagoner chapel, 3621 Olive street. Mrs. Rowland died early yesterday in St. Luke's Hospital, following a paralytic stroke. She was 80 years old and lived at the Roselle Hotel on Lindell boulevard.

Mr. Rowland, who died about 20 years ago, was a wholesale grocer. David Rowland Francis, former Governor and later Ambassador to Russia, is his nephew and namesake. Mrs. Rowland was his second wife. Her only child, a daughter, died before her death, but two grandchildren survive her.

SHORT SKIRTS VEX WOOL MEN

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—The abbreviated clothing affected by the gentler sex is causing wool men to burn midnight oil trying to find a way to work up new markets Walter Humphreys of Boston, secretary of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, in an address to the annual convention of the California Wool Growers' Association here today.

"The women who dress in wool garments need only half the yardage previously required,' he said.

SAY CLEVELAND GIRLS PET OFTEN, LACK SELF-RESPECT

That Is Conclusion of 100 Young Men in Church, Who Lay Blame on Parents.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 6.—The conclusion of replies to a questionnaire sent to 100 young men of his congregation by the Rev. F. D. Butchart, pastor of the West Boulevard Christian Church, is that the Cleveland girl of 1926 is admired for her friendship, her independence and her comradeship but she smokes, drinks and "pets" too often.

She has a lack of self-respect, as expressed in dress. One of the boys wrote: "You cannot expect young men to respect them if they do not respect themselves."

Another youth wrote: "I think the greatest vice of the young woman of today is the tendency to cheapen herself. Womanhood should be as on a pedestal. It should be something to be looked up to, not down at."

None of the correspondents blamed any of the faults on the girls, but several of them criticised parents and institutions.

"Girls themselves are not entirely at fault," said one reply. "Their mistakes are due to lack of proper training and to ignorance of the facts of life."

Several letters declared that men like girls who "think for themselves and can take care of themselves."

Indestructible, Unswerving Protection Against High Prices and Inferior Goods.

SALE LASTS TILL THURSDAY NIGHT

Housewives from all over St. Louis and suburban towns, you will find this a wonderful economy location. We and we alone have held the prices of foodstuffs to the lowest level ever known. By the superior quality and purity of the food products sold, we have convincingly proved the absurdity of the idea that to buy something good you have to pay an enormous price for it. This sale will record another black eye to competitors who hold the public up. PRICES THAT ARE CUT BELOW THE BONE, CLEAR DOWN TO THE MARROW.

BELOW DIAGRAM OF CARCASS OF BEEF

Showing the various cuts and various names—is something that every economical housewife should preserve. Paste it on a piece of cardboard—hang it in your kitchen and compare it "a year hence" and you'll readily know at all times whether prices are declining or advancing. It's absolutely a correct showing of every name and cut.

PRICES of different cuts shown below are from STRICTLY CORN FED NATIVE FRESH SLAUGHTERED BEEF. START TODAY—and join the happy, contented, prosperous crowds, and be a REMLEY BOOSTER.

SEEK HIDDEN MOTIVE BEHIND STRANGE WILL

It's Valid, but Preachers Hesitate About Accepting Stock in Brewery.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6.—The will of the late Charles Millar, which disposes of a $2,000,000 estate by leaving $750,000 worth of brewery stock to a group of prominent Methodist ministers, $25,000 worth of Jockey Club stock to three bitter enemies of racetrack gambling, and the residue to the parents raising the largest number of children in Toronto during the next nine years, is "sound as a dollar" in the opinion of a leading Toronto lawyer, who was a close friend of Millar.

None of the supposed beneficiaries are prepared to say what action they will take until the validity of the will is established definitely.

There seems little doubt the extraordinary document drafted in 1921 is Millar's last will, and it is stated that as late as last Sunday morning, the day day of his death, he referred to this will and said that he must make another.

Will Believed Valid.

There seems no doubt, also, that the will was validly executed. He took every care to eliminate all grounds for attack upon it, so that it is hardly conceivable that at the time it was drawn Millar intended it merely as a joke and did not intend it to go into effect.

It is not anticipated that the document will be allowed to go to probate without a protest. Relatives, who do not share in any part of the estate under its provisions, are entering upon consultation in the matter. It is pointed out that, if this will should be set aside, there are at least two prior wills under which also the relatives do not share.

The race stock beneficiaries are W. E. Rainey, former Attorney-General of Toronto; the Rev. Benjamin Spence, head of the prohibition forces in Ontario, and W. Newton Rowell K. C., former member of the Privy Council. All three are maintaining a dignified silence.

Ministerial Heirs Silent.

In ministerial circles, however, there is a keen discussion concerning the course that should be adopted by the clergymen who are bequeathed the brewery stock "to discover whether their avarice for money is greater than their principles."

The Rev. Canon H. F. D. Woodcock of Christ Church (Angelican) said: "Apparently it was a large jest, as he realized that those people could not conscientiously accept."

As for the bequest to the parents who have the most children, he added: "I think that provision was made more seriously than most people think. It should help to solve Ontario's immigration problem. I think he realized that Quebec has solved its population problem in that way and that Ontario is far behind."

PREFERS SCRUBBING FLOORS TO 'MUGGY' POTSDAM COURT

Princess Alexandra Victoria Is Happy With Second Husband in Modest Home.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—Scrubbing floors as an avocation is infinitely preferable to sitting in the princely halls of Potsdam, says Princess Alexandra Victoria, the divorced wife of Prince August Wilhelm, the former Kaiser's fourth son.

The Princess, who is now the wife of former Commander Ruemann of the Imperial Navy, recently was found cleaning floors by a prominent Berlin lawyer who unexpectedly called upon her at her home in Munich.

"No doubt you are surprised to see me doing housework," the Princess said, "but believe me I am a thousand times happier managing my own home and supporting myself than I ever was when breathing the muggy air of the Potsdam Court."

Princess Alexandra, who is a Princess of Schleswig Holstein by birth and is a niece of the late Empress Augusta Victoria, depends on her artistic skill for her livelihood, as her husband, who is a simple Bourgeois, has no fortune but merely his officer's pension.

Her skill as a painter of landscapes and portraits is considered unusual.

Her Munich home is a snug, comfortable apartment in which, as a typical German hausfrau, she does her own housework and cooking. Since her divorce in 1920 and her marriage in 1922, the only cloud that has marred the happiness of the Princess, who is almost 40 and is still famed for her beauty, is a longing for her only son, 13-year-old Prince Alexander. The boy was awarded to Prince August Wilhelm by the court in accordance with German custom.

HOMEBUILDERS BALANCE $6146

State Finance Commissioner Cantley yesterday filed a final report in Circuit Judge Ittner's court as receiver of the United Home Builders of America, one of the housing trusts which were taken over for liquidation three years ago. The report shows that the total receipts since the company went into receivership were $183,412.84, while the disbursements have been $177,266.75, leaving a balance of $6146.09. Missouri contract holders of the defunct corporation have received $51,497, according to the report.

The receiver asked for permission to turn over the balance on hand to the Texas receiver of the company.

DOWNTURN TO HOG PRICES PAST WEEK

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last wk.	Pr. wk.	Yr. ago
Cattle and calves	33,537	41,366	36,309
Hogs	64,390	69,385	82,662
Sheep	9,900	10,609	12,003
Horses and mules	483	1,183	1,188
Totals	107,710	122,573	132,162

Aside from hogs, which again closed lower, livestock markets were generally on a steady to strong basis at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week. Receipts in all departments showed a smaller volume than the preceding week. Steer cattle showed the most pronounced strength of any class of stock, the market rallied sharply, with killing classes closing about 50c higher and stocker and feeder offerings 25c higher. Butcher cattle also developed a stronger trend in practically all classes. Light yearling steers and heifers, beef cows, canner and cutter cows and the various classes of bulls moved up about 15c to 25c. Calves and yearlings followed the trend of cattle and gave ground in most cases. From a $12.75 basis for choice steals the previous week, the top at the close of the session under review had dropped to $12. Southern canner yearlings closed at $4.50 to $5, against $4.50 to $5.75 a week previous. The combined run of cattle and calves amounted to approximately 33,537 head during the week-day period. Quality was about normal for this time of the year, consignments carrying common, medium and well-finished droves. Native beef steers bulked at $8 to $10.50 per cwt. and four cars of 935-lb. Morgan County Illinois baby beeves equaled the year's top of $12.25. Approximately 70 cars of Kansas and Oklahoma range steers sold in a spread of $8.50 to $8.50. Light yearling steers and heifers varied from around $5 and $6 for plain kinds to $9, $10 and $10.50 for finished consignments. Beef cows varied from $4.75 for plain kind to $5.50 and $6 for offerings in good flesh. The top reached $7.50. Cutter cows closed at $4 to $4.50 and canners at $3.40 to $3.75 or $4. Medium to good bologna bulls scored in the $5 column, with top bolognas and good weight beef animals centering around $6. Canner and cutter bulls made the $4 column. Shipments of stocker and feeder cattle from the market to country feed lots aggregated a fair total of 3500 head. Most of the business was in steers, sales of which were in a practical range of $5.25 to $6.75, a few loads of yearlings trade in stock cows, heifers, bulls and calves and prices were not materially changed from those in force the previous week.

Downturn to Hogs.

Buyers continued to exert bearish pressure on hog prices throughout the week and the market was on the down grade most of the time with the exception of a few instances when decreases were preserved in trading about an upward reaction. Advances, however, were momentary and prices for the week show 25c to 35c decline on 190 pounds and up, with some butcher grades as much as 40c and 45c lower than the previous Saturday. A premium was paid for the lighter grades of hogs from 190 pounds and down and a large proportion of butcher hogs between 200 and 220 pounds averaged up, resulted in a reversion of prices with shipping weights selling on top, whereas up to the present time butcher hogs had been in the preference. Prices throughout the entire six-day period were at the lowest level recorded since the first of the year. A top of $13 was registered during the week with the high top at $13.25. Bulk of sales was at $12.75 to $13 on all grades from 160 pounds and up. While the shipping demand was fairly broad during the latter part of the week there was a limited number of hogs on the shipping list early in the period and big killers consequently furnished the bulk of trade. In the discount trade, trading was active, although the few coming to market curtailed operations on this class to some extent. There was a broad demand from both killers and stocker buyers, the first mentioned operators securing the bigger proportions of good to choice offerings. Little, if any, decline on the weightier grades with light pigs selling fairly steady with a week ago. Top pigs sold at $12.75 and bulk of 130 to 150 pounds cleared for the week at $12.75 to $13, with lighter kinds selling at $12 to $12.25 and down. Some packers of Southern origin sold as low as $11.50. Many dealers in stock pigs reported plenty of orders, but no material shipping trade of this kind. Packing sows after an uneven week closed the period around steady, quotable at $10.25 to $10.75, also were steady at $9 to $10.75 largely, some light fat kinds upward to $11, occasionally. Hogs, 160 pounds and quotable at $12.75 to $13, $12.85, 130 to 150 pound pigs $12.75 to $12.85, 120-pound pigs and down $12 to $12.50, Southern pigs down to $11.50. Packing sows, all weights, $10.25 to $11.75; stags, $9 to $11.

2 p. m.

Lamb Run Moderate.

Receipts in sheep and lambs during the week were of moderate volume, both locally and at other western markets. Eleven days' receipts, as compared with the previous week's six-day total but were considerably heavier than for the corresponding period a year ago. Local quality was generally good, bulk of arrivals from native territory and well finished. Few sales usable that it could strictly to medium and a two deck consignment of mixed lambs and yearlings from Missouri sold at $13.50, among the best purely consignments. Bulk of the good lambs cleared through packers at $13 to $13.25, medium grades around $1 and big heavy lambs selling mainly around $12. The season's first consignment of Utah lambs arrived this week, which were fairly well clipped natives and showed exceptionally good finish. The price was $13.15 and lambs sold mainly at $8.50 although several lots grading somewhat better in flesh than the average run sold upward to $9. Some yearling wethers grading good in quality but lacking somewhat in flesh brought $11 with throwouts from these going at $9. Aged southern wethers were received in somewhat small supply than during the previous week and quality graded plain to medium. The low figure was $8.25 for some burry offerings with others ranging upward to $7. Native mutton ewes sold throughout the week at steady prices, bulk of desirable kinds clearing at $5.50 to $6 with medium and heavies at $4 and $5. Some shorn yearling ewes brought $6.50 to packers. Clipped canner grades continued at $1.50 to $3, largely with buyers paying around $3 if good fleshed, thin kinds around $2. Prices in all departments figured steady with the previous week's closing deals. Quotations of the different grades follow. Slaughter stock—Good to choice lambs $13.15 to $13.75, medium to good $12 to $13, plain to medium $10 to $12, cull and common $8 to $9, skins $5.50 to $7. Feeding and shearing lambs $11 to $12, medium to good $10 to $11, plain to medium $9 to $10. Good to choice wethers $8 to $8.75, plain kinds $6 to $6.75. Good to choice mutton ewes $5.50 to $6.50, medium to good $4.50 to $5.50, plain to medium $3 to $4.50. Choppers and bucks $2 to $4, canners $1.50 to $2.50. Fat goats $2 to $2.50, kids and yearlings $4 to $5, plain kinds $4.50 to $5.50, thin to fair kids $2 to $4.

Horses and Mules.

Horse and mule receipts at St. Louis the past week 6,100 head, a total of approximately 483 head and the market displayed a firm tone in most departments.

There is an outlet at this time for young mares and fillies of size and shape to be used as work stock. A call also prevails for extra heavy draft horses for the cities trade.

Dealers also report that they can sell some thick made, good boned geldings. The little farmers' demand is quiet on account of hand, are not having a very good inquiry. Likewise, tall, leggy offerings are somewhat sluggish.

Fine and medium territory wools are generally held at $1.15 but some sales are reported around $1.12. Woolen wools are slow but mill demand reported pretty well covered.

Financial and Industrial Briefs

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.

Estimated earnings of more than $11 a share on the common stock of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific for 1926, in contrast to $4.54 a share in 1925, exclusive of the profit on the sale of its "Cotton Belt" stock to the Kansas City Southern, equal to about $3.31 a share on the common, have drawn attention to the meeting of Rock Island directors next Wednesday. It is not generally expected in the street that common dividend action will be taken now, but in several quarters it is believed an initial disbursement of $1.25 may be looked for next month in absence of adverse developments.

A generally firm tone prevailed in "over the counter" trading in securities this week, in line with the "big board's" equanamity after the election results. Price changes were higher and a few issues scored unusually sharp gains. An upturn in Scoville Manufacturing, in response to the plan to declare a 25 per cent stock dividend, was a feature of the week. Good gains also were made by Singer Manufacturing, National Fuel Gas, Standard Screw, Johns Manville and Pittsburg & Lake Erie.

Universal Pipe and Radiator Co. declared four quarterly dividends of 1¾ per cent each on the preferred stock for the year 1927, payable Feb. 1, May 2, Aug. 1 and Nov. 1.

Net profit of Onyx Hosiery for the nine months of 1926 was $650,617, equal, after preferred dividends, to $3.45 a share on the common stock, which was reduced to $473,292 after giving effect to inventory adjustments not applicable to current operations. Net profit in the first nine months last year was $588,164, or $2.60 a share on the common.

Bank clearings throughout the country the week are put at $9,616,873,424 by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, a decrease of 9.3 per cent under the $10,600,818,620 the week before. New York City showed a drop of 10.4 per cent.

Sales of S. H. Kress Co. for the 10 months this year rose to $37,379,069 from $33,245,151, a gain of 12.4 per cent over the corresponding period of 1925.

Crude petroleum prices in 10 representative fields, compiled Nov. 5 by the Oil, Paint and Drug reporter, showed an average of $1.968 per barrel, against $2.004 per barrel Oct. 29 and $1.515 per barrel Nov. 5, 1925. Crude petroleum production in domestic fields this year to Oct. 30 amounted to 631,561,000 barrels, against 645,661,000 barrels in the same period of 1925. Production is now at the rate of 2,315,700 barrels daily, against 2,052,300 daily at this period last year.

R. G. Dun's insolvency index makes quite an advance for October, being not only higher than it was at this time last year, but approaching the five-year average. Some additional failures in the South are in fact, the cause for the substantial proportion of the number of firms in business, the index for October was at a ratio of 98.1 whereas it was 84.2 a year ago, while the five-year average 1921-25 inclusive, for that month was 103.8. Insolvencies in the East and South last month exceeded those of September by about 30 per cent.

Formation of the New England Laundries, Inc., to consolidate several laundry properties with plants in and around Boston, has been announced. Harry Silverman, the former Winchester Laundry and substantial ownership of the Lowe Machinery Co. will be associated.

Sales of the Hartman Corporation for the 10 months of 1926 rose to $15,1[illegible]952 from $12,422,834 in the same period of 1925 a gain of more than 20 per cent.

Higher pig iron prices are reported from various districts. In Eastern Pennsylvania territory some dealers are quoting $23 a ton for No. 2 foundry, up 50 cents, and $1.50 a ton over levels several days ago. A rise of $1 a ton is reported in the Youngstown Valley to $24 a ton. In Buffalo Bethlehem Steel has advanced quotations to $21 and Wickwire-Spencer steel to $20. Iron and steel scrap is up $5 to 50 cents a ton at the Chicago district.

Loss of $377,384 is reported by Mexican Seaboard Oil and its subsidiary international Petroleum Co. for the first nine months this year, against loss of $539,269 for the corresponding period of 1925.

Potatoes Are Steady to Slightly Stronger at Week End.

ST. LOUIS PRODUCE ROW, Nov. 6.—Potato prices were steady to slightly stronger, the weekend trade being light, as no effort was made to move supplies. There was only a limited demand for the good quality stock. Wheat was firmly held. The local buyers were reluctant to pay premium prices, showing preference to slightly off stock, of which there is an oversupply, and can be bought at relatively cheap prices. Most sales reported were from local jobbing houses. Sales were reported as follows: Sacked, per 100 pounds, on track, invoice weights—2 cars Idaho russet burbanks at $3. 2 cars No. 2 do at $2.50. Delivered—1 car Idaho russet burbanks at $3.35, 1 car do at $3.25, 2 loads Minnesota round whites at $2.65, 1 car Michigan rurals at $2.75 to $2.85, 2 loads Minnesota round whites at $2.60, 1 car Michigan rurals at $2.75 to $2.85, 2 loads Minnesota round whites at $2.60.

ONIONS—There was nothing done in wholesale way, usual Saturday inactivity prevailing. Quotations, sacked, per 100 pounds delivered on basis of latest sales: Minnesota red, $1.50 to $1.60; Iowa red, $1.10 to $1.25; Indiana red, $1.35; and white, $2.50; Idaho yellow at $1.85@1.90.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Either Wall street had expected the Democrats to make gains in Tuesday's election or it is disposed to base its forecasts on trade returns, or both, for what might have been regarded by some as a vote adverse to the financial district has left sentiment better than it was. Since the election fluctuations in stocks have been small, but the general movement upward is evidence that the market is in too strong a position to be unsettled except by some fundamental change. The election issues were not very clearly defined so far as industry is concerned, and neither major party had committed itself to measures plainly inimical to business, so the prophets, naturally enough, refuse to see in its outcome any reason for uneasiness.

Strong Technical Position.

"The stability of the stock market just now reflects something more than faith in the trade position, however, or a general desire on the part of traders to await a change in underlying conditions. The strength lies partly, and in fact greatly, in the nice balance of speculative forces between the constructive and destructive sides of the market. Not since the earlier stages of the so-called Coolidge bull market, or at least not since the completion of the March liquidation, have stocks been in so favorable a technical position as now. This is not to say that sharp rallies and declines may not come, but it does mean that the market has many followers on both the long and short sides, and that is why, other things being equal, any pronounced swing in one direction quickly brings its corrective countermovement.

Contraction in Loans.

"Not the least interesting of the recent developments that bear on the market is the substantial reduction in brokers' loans since Sept. 15, and especially in the last three weeks. Loans have contracted $218,186,000 since that mid-September peak, the shrinkage of the last three weeks alone having been $207,811,000, between Feb. 17 and May 19, during the period of violent Stock Exchange liquidation, loans fell much more heavily, of course, or $730,029,000, but the present slump has been substantial enough to improve money conditions and the technical aspects of the market. Brokers' loans stand roughly 17 per cent under the peak for all time, reached on Jan. 6, 1926, but about their position of a year ago they still represent a volume much larger than any on record prior to the autumn of 1925. A falling off in recent demands from the securities markets and the passing of the seasonal requirements in the agricultural districts have, notwithstanding a large commercial demand, combined to ease money rates.

Outlook for Future.

"That industry from its own momentum will continue active for the remainder of the year and into early 1927 nobody now doubts. On the more distant future reports are, as always, mixed, but in the statistics no tangible signs of depression appear or even of any serious downturn in the months immediately ahead. That some recession from the 1926 peak levels may be gathering force is suggested by the failure of the three key industries—that is, the building, iron and steel and motor groups—to show continued acceleration. In fact, inquiries for the future in these divisions are not so persistent as they have been and not so numerous. Far-sighted industrial leaders again are beginning to reckon on a possible and harmful loss in agricultural purchasing power that may be reflected in next year's business, but which has not yet been felt.

Improvement Abroad.

"Overseas the situation has improved since Belgium's move for stabilization, and in the current week the French franc rallied in spectacular fashion. From its record low point of 1.95, reached on July 20, the franc, at its high for the week of 3.39c, had improved its position by 74 per cent, which is an achievement that will go down in history. While the unexpected success of the Belgians in returning to a gold basis has stimulated new faith in the French people, the rise in the franc reflects also a general revival of confidence in the political situation under the Poincare government. Capital that had been exported is being brought back home and turned again into francs, the trade position has improved and hopes for stabilization have spread. The day may not be so far distant when all important European countries will, on one basis or another, have returned to gold."

Market Irregular Saturday.

"Today's short session of the stock market was devoid of unusual incidents. Popular stocks backed and filled irregularly in a narrow range and the volume of business was small. Uncertainty over future price movements was again apparent, although several specialties sponsored by pools showed more than ordinary activity and strength. Scattered selling pressure and liquidation gave an unsettled tone to the general list. Bonds were in continued good demand, although activity slackened to some extent. Prospects of satisfactory credit conditions were reflected in the steady undertone.

Rails Are Irregular.

"Conflicting reports on a possible rearrangement of the proposed Nickel Plate merger brought some irregularity into the railroad group, but because confirmation was lacking traders were inclined to move cautiously in transactions involving Chesapeake & Ohio and allied rails shares. Uncertainty over the situation, however, checked buying in other sections of the carrier list and prices moved backward and forward in a narrow range. Industrials received fairly good support on suggestions from Washington that another moderate cut in income taxes next year was possible. Publication of the New York Stock Exchange figures on brokers' loans, however, served to revive apprehension over the market's technical strength, since the shrinkage in loans last month was revealed as only slightly more than $27,000,000, while the Federal Reserve Bank reported a decline of more than $210,000,000.

Exchange Trade Quiet.

"Trading in the foreign exchanges was again quiet, and fluctuations were generally narrow. Sterling continued to improve in anticipation of a settlement of the miners' strike. French francs were slightly higher, but later developed weakness and slipped back about 6 points. German offerings were again plentiful and exchange on Berlin fell to a new low level at 23.74c.

Definite Trend Lacking.

"This discrepancy was believed to mean that liquidation of stocks held on margin last month was negligible and that the shrinkage in loans was due largely to completion of financing operations by bond syndicates. Although it was recognized the credit position of the market had been strengthened in the month, it was clear the improvement had not been as great as the financial district had been led to believe. Leading favorites lacked a definite trend. While General Motors was being more freely offered and sagged to 156, U. S. Steel was again in good demand and rose slightly. Atchison was bid up further and Woolworth continued to recover.

Decline Excess Reserves.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House banks revealed, instead of the expected indication of credit improvement, a decline in the excess reserve to $12,606,210 from $17,666,240 a week ago. Surplus decreased $5,060,030, while loans, discounts, etc., fell $38,390,000.

ACTIVE TRADE IN BONDS ON THE CURB EXCHANGE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—After a spirited opening, in which numerous issues appeared, the market on the Curb Exchange today assumed a half holiday appearance with trading during the remaining session contracting considerably. There was continued strength in most favored issues after the start and new high figures were again reported in Estey Welte and American Seating. St Regis Paper moved to a new high for the movement. Glen Alden rose six points to 135, another new high.

In the public utility division, American Gas preferred scored an early gain of 1¼ points, while others were irregular.

Whatever liquidation of oil shares was induced by the present condition of production or marketing of this product was readily absorbed. Moderate advances resulted in some of the more prominent oil shares.

Nearly all important movements in the Curb Market the past week came after election day, the trading on the first day being comparatively quiet and without important feature. When business resumed after election the bond market became by far the most important feature. Dealings expanded along that specialty in the foreign issues, more than 50 different foreign issues being actively traded for the past few days and required a division of the bond department into two sections.

United Steel Works 6s were traded on a huge scale, $500,000 changing hands on Wednesday and Thursday at 98¼ to 98¾. Gains of a point or more were made in Buenos Aires 7s, Fiat 7s, Great Consolidated Electric 6½s and Baron Public Works. Nevada Consolidated Copper 6s made a new high on an advance from 102 to 106⅜. Stute Motor 7½s were heavy, yielding five points. The aggregate sales of bonds ranged above $2,500,000 daily.

Petroleum stocks maintained a strong tone, although crude oil production had another pronounced increase and prices of crude oil were reduced in some fields.

Many of the industrials moved over a wide range. Singer Manufacturing rose from 360 to 385 and American Seating made a new high record on an advance of six points to 42. New York Transportation, after advancing 2¼ points, lost its gain. Ford Motor of Canada made a new low record on a decline to 390.

Utilities were irregular. American Light & Traction dropped six points while United Gas Improvement moved up a point. Electric Bond & Share was in supply but rallied after a decline of over two points.

BONDS AT CLOSE OF WEEK NEAR YEAR'S HIGHEST

Trading on New York Exchange Unusually Active for Two-Hour Session—Profit-Taking Well Absorbed.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The bond market today closed the week with prices holding not far from the highest levels of the year. Trading was unusually active for the two-hour session and advancing tendencies were maintained in nearly all sections of the list.

French and Belgian obligations clearly demonstrated their ability to resist selling pressure, although a rather general disposition to take profits was evident. These sales, particularly in the case of the Belgian 6s and 7s and the French 7s, were easily absorbed and several of the French municipals and rails scored fractional gains.

News that President Coolidge would urge a rebate on the 1925 income taxes put the entire market in a cheerful frame of mind, with railroad liens additionally benefited by indications that the year's net earnings would break all records. Some of the world speculative issues still were forced to contend with profit-taking, but without any serious setback as the price movement. Unconfirmed reports that the Van Sweringens were planning a radical revision of the Nickel Plate merger grouping had little or no effect on the bonds of these carriers.

International Mercantile Marine 6s displayed independent strength in reflection of higher ocean freight rates and reports that new negotiations might be opened for the sale of the White Star ships and the purchase of others.

Active Bond Market Past Week.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—While the bond market has been active and strong all the week, at first it was foreign issues on which the buying conversed and later the rails maintained in nearly all sections of the list. Trading was unusually active for the two-hour session and advancing tendencies were maintained in nearly all sections of the list, particularly in the case of the Belgian 6s and 7s and the French 7s, were easily absorbed and several of the French municipals and rails scored fractional gains.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of Post-Dispatch.

"Dealing in sterling during the week attracted more attention to banking circles, chiefly because of the heavy offerings of exchange on London, which carried sterling exchange to the lowest for the year, sales being made at 4.84 for demand on Thursday. At that rate sterling was the lowest level since last spring. The establishment of the highest price in three years by Japanese exchange and the decline in sterling to a new low level for the year.

Except in a few individual cases, election results failed to cause any surprise in Wall street and apparently had no influence on the movement of security prices. The market appeared to be awaiting further light on the trend of business, which continues to show irregularity. The so-called key industries—building, iron and steel and automobiles—recently have shown a slackening in activity, but Wall street has not yet been able to make up its mind as to whether this represents a normal, seasonal decline after unusually heavy midsummer activity or the beginning of a general downward drift. Bank clearings showed a falling off of 5 per cent in October compared with the same month last year, but on the other hand freight traffic is being moved in record volume.

The credit situation continues easy, with funds in plentiful supply for both stock market and commercial purposes. However, the small reduction in Stock Exchange member loans, compared with the decline shown in Federal Reserve Bank reports, aroused apprehension over the market's technical position. Low money rates undoubtedly are providing the chief stimulus for the advance in bond prices.

New York Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week (five days) shows excess reserve of $12,606,210. This is a decrease in reserve of $5,060,000, compared with the week before when excess reserve of $17,666,240 was reported.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Cotton goods markets were quiet today in anticipation of the government crop report, due Monday. Buyers have been holding off. Business holdings afloat are being released and consumption is about taking up the limited shipments of recent months. Raw silk figures tended to soften prices locally. Linens in steady call for holiday distribution. Light weight worsted dress goods have sold well in many houses.

Mrs. A. Everett's Estate, $72,870.

Mrs. Amalia Everett, 502 Dover place, who died Sept. 17, left an estate valued at $72,870.59, as shown by an inventory filed in Probate Court yesterday. She made specific bequests totaling $31,000 to various relatives, friends and benevolent organizations and gave the residue of her property to her husband, Edward Everett, a chiropractor, whom she married about a year ago. Prior to this marriage she was the widow of Frederick Kukkuck.

SINCLAIR DENIED PLEA ON CONTEMPT CHARGE

Dismissal by Court of Appeal Involving Demurrer Opens Way for His Trial.

Post-Dispatch Bureau
20-22 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6. — The District of Columbia Court of Appeals today dismissed the special appeal allowed Henry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, from an order of the lower court which over-ruled his demurrer to an indictment charging him with contempt of the Senate.

Sinclair appeared before the Senate Committee on Public Lands and Surveys and refused to answer certain questions while that committee was investigating the naval oil lease cases. The lower court overruled his demurrer as to six of the questions and sustained it as to the other four questions. He appealed.

The motion to dismiss the appeal was based on the Walsh bill which did away with appeals from interlocutory orders of the lower court in criminal cases. The Walsh bill also was responsible for the dismissal of the appeals allowed in the oil lease conspiracy cases in which Sinclair also figures.

In neither instance did the Appellate Court assign any reason for the dismissal except to state that the motion of Gordon, Pomerene and Roberts, counsel for the Government to dismiss on the strength of the Walsh bill was granted.

The Appellate Court has heard arguments on the Sinclair contempt appeal but had deferred decision on account of the fact that the United States Supreme Court had decided the Daugherty case which involves the same questions of law but entirely different questions of fact.

The contempt case is now back in the Criminal Court, but it is not likely to be tried for some time, as the court is not disposed to tie itself up with the Fall-Doheny conspiracy case and the Sinclair contempt case at the same time. If the Government should lose the Daugherty case, it is likely the Sinclair contempt case would be dropped.

George P. Hoover, of counsel for Sinclair, said he would ask the Appellate Court to stay its mandate in the contempt case to allow time for him to apply to the highest court for a writ of review.

M. E. BOARD INQUIRES INTO DR. BAST'S CASE

Bishop Nicholson Named to Go to Denmark to Investigate Charges.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 6.—Investigation of charges made by ministers of the Danish conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church against Bishop Anton Bast of Copenhagen was ordered by the Board of Bishops at its regular semi-annual meeting here today. Bishop Thomas Nicholson of Detroit was named by Bishop J. F. Berry of Philadelphia, senior member of the board, to make the investigation. Bishop Nicholson will leave for Copenhagen late in December, or early in January.

Dr. Bast was released from prison in August after serving a 3-month sentence for an offense against the Danish law regarding financial appeals. Various charges of misusing money, or misappropriation, were dismissed on the motion of the prosecutor. It is charges made by the ministers prior to and at the time of the trial that will be investigated.

Bishop Nicholson consulted with the board in regard to civil and church law on the charges. The board will select a group of ministers from the conferences in Europe to hear the charges under the direction of Bishop Nicholson and this committee may dismiss the charges or order a trial before a regular church court. Bishop Nicholson, it was said, asked the board to appoint Bishop G. C. Richardson of Atlanta, Ga., secretary of the board, to accompany him as counselor, but no action was taken on the request.

GONE FOR A WHILE!

Au Revoir but not goodbye to the joyful, healthful pleasures of outdoor life now rapidly nearing their end! That's regretful!

Country life, new and attractive to many of us, loses the greater part of its charm as Winter approaches. That's Natural!

'Tis then we turn again to that place beyond compare which John Howard Payne so perfectly describes in the three following lines:

"Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam, Be it ever so humble, there's no place like HOME."

Most wonderful of possessions; the place whence all that is good and ennobling emanate; the place of unalloyed content.

Shack or bungalow, hovel or palace; IT'S HOME!

King Nadi Breaks Fast.

Little time was lost at the barrier and the start was a good one. Sande, on King Nadi, and Johnny Callahan, on the lightly weighted Edith Cavell went into the pace at once and Mother's Son was not far away. Fator had Peanuts away in good position and, after having the handsome little racer well in his stride, he dropped down on the rail to save ground. Gaffsman was in the front division with The Clown was hurrying along to help in the pacemaking for his stable mate, Princess Doreen.

It was not until nearing the turn out of the back stretch that Fator made any move with Peanuts. There he pulled from the rail and shaking up the colt he dashed around on the outside until he was alongside of Edith Cavell. By this time King Nadi was through and was dropping back rather badly but Princess Doreen was moving up gamely and Edith Cavell was hanging on well.

Swinging into the stretch, Peanuts came clear and Fator hustled along briskly until gluneing back on both sides, he saw his mount was safe but he did not take any chances. Princess Doreen hung on with her usual courage and right at her heels came Display, as usual closing ground when just a bit late. Joy Smoke outfinished Edith Cavell when the filly weakened from her pacemaking and then came Seventh Son after having run a decidedly dull race.

Eleven Good Horses.

It was a worthy renewal and rather remarkable that eleven such horses should be brought to the post for a mile and a half gallop.

The Seagram stable claimed Wandering Minstrel, out of the first race for $4500 and Marcellus, winner of the third race, was claimed by A. G. Robinson for $2000.

A handsome silver cup will be presented to the owner of the winner of the W. P. Burch Memorial handicap to be run at the Bowie meeting.

and this committee may dismiss the charges or order a trial before a regular church court. Bishop Nicholson, it was said, asked the board to appoint Bishop G. G. Richardson of Atlanta, Ga., secretary of the board, to accompany him as counselor, but no action was taken on the request.

Princess Doreen and The Clown, Audley Farm entry.

Peanuts, restrained off the early pace, raced on the outside of his opposition to secure racing room, moved into the lead with a rush at the turn out of the back stretch and holding on grimly when challenged outgamed Princess Doreen in a hard drive. Latter worked her way up gradually, came to the outside of the winner at furlong pole but faltered slightly right at end. Display, as usual slow to get going, circled his field and closed with splendid courage. Joy Smoke saved ground all the way and held on well. Edith Cavell tired after a mile and a furlong. Seventh Son, a trailer early, finished stoutly. Gaffman stopped the last half mile. King Nadi out after a mile.

$2 mutuels paid: Peanuts, straight $6.10, place $420, show $3.40; Princess Doreen, place $7.40, show $4.50; Display, show $3.50.

PIMLICO, Md., Nov. 6.—Peanuts, the game little son of Ambassador Fourth and Agnes Sard, racing under the silks of Robert L. Two lengths back of him came Princess Doreen, which won the same prize for the Audley Farm Stable last year, and third was Display, winner of the Preakness last spring. 57-Yard Run by Daugherity Wins For Illini, 7-0

Chicago Shows Strength in Holding Coach Zuppke's Eleven.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—A crippled but game Chicago team fought a stubborn defensive battle against Illinois before a record breaking crowd of 50,000 spectators today, but crumpled before Coach Bob Zuppke's slashing backs, losing by a score of 7 to 0 after holding Illinois scoreless in the first half.

Illinois played a superior offensive game and, considering the yards gained, Coach Zuppke probably wonders why his charges failed to register a larger score. Illinois with Daugherity, Stewart, Lanum, Gallivan and Frosty Peters' flashing around the Chicago ends, and piercing big holes in the line made 13 first downs, but most of them were registered in their own territory or in mid-field.

Long Run Nets Touchdown.

Illinois registered its touchdown a few seconds after the third period opened when Russell "Pug" Daugherity, the big fullback, crashed through center, and shaking his tacklers loose, broke away for a 57-yard run, with the demoralized Maroons in full pursuit. The manner in which Daugherity tore into the line, broke through and then cut around the tacklers into the open field, was reminiscent to Illinois rooters of the gallops made famous by Red Grange.

Frosty Peters, the Montana mercury, attempted to swell the count by booting a trio of drop kicks, but he missed all of his shots.

With a touchdown safely tucked away, Coach Zuppke's players did not attempt any dazzling forward passing as they did against Pennsylvania a week ago. They only tried three, getting away with one for a 20-yard gain.

Chicago failed in its aerial attack, attempting only three, one of them being intercepted.

Fast and Heavy Detroit Eleven Beats St. Louis U. In Annual Contest, 28-7

Billikens Gain Nicely on Passing Attack, but Rushing Offense Fails; Janosky of the Titans Dashes 48 Yards for Best Run.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Nov. 6.—St. Louis University waged a bitter but hopeless struggle against a heavier and faster University of Detroit team on Dinan Field and lost today, 28 to 7. However, like the real football players they are, the Billikens went down fighting. They never let up, although their case, so far as victory was concerned, was almost devoid of hope from the start.

Only in the second period, after Detroit had piled up two touchdowns in rapid order, was St. Louis able to knife through the Titans' defense. Coach Dorais, of Detroit rushed in a substitute team right after his second score. After this move, the Billikens' pass attack brought good yardage and the visitors' only score.

Detroit's scoring was done in the first, second and fourth periods. One touchdown in each of the first and second and two in the fourth was their day's work. Detroit blended a rushing game with careful insertion of the forward pass. Long gains on passes, one by each team, and a 48-yard run by Janosky, reserve halfback for Detroit, featured.

Jordan, St. Louis quarterback, crossed up Detroit's reserves in the second period when he threw from a point back of his 13-yard line to Kearns. The play netted 40 yards. On top of this throw another pass to Kearns brought the Billikens 12 yards from a touchdown when interference was charged against Detroit. Then Jordan hurled to Hanratta who had got past the Detroit defense unobserved and went over without molestation.

Besides Kahle, Jordan, Kearns, Miller, Browning, Dirnberger, Hanratta and Downey distinguished themselves by their individual efforts. As a team, the Billikens could not match the Titans but these individuals helped to cut down the Detroit total.

Connell, Maniere and Maloney rushed to the St. Louis two-yard line. Connell went over but the Man Who Led Toronto to Pennant Tells Roy Stockton His Plans for Handling the St. Louis Situation.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6.—If you have a forlorn hope and it is sufficiently forlorn, call on Daniel Philip Howley. If the prospects are bright, or the future promising, if you see so much as one ray of light, don't bother Mr. Howley. But if your forlorn hope is like unto Mrs. Luella Nonesuch Schmalz of Macon, Ga., before she started taking pink pills, and all your friends have given it up, then call Mr. Howley. Forlorn hopes are his specialty. He dotes on them.

Howley has no time for bright futures or promising prospects. He is too busy rescuing floundering ships in the baseball seas and steering them safely into pennant port, with all flags flying, all seams caulked and all the paint restored on the former drifting hulk.

Howley is no miracle man. He doesn't believe in miracles. He's a two-fisted Irishman who has had to use his fists in his day and he knows that the things that the baseball public calls "miracles" are accomplished by hard work, perseverance and co-ordination of brain and muscle. He also knows that his new task of leading the St. Louis Browns out of the doldrums of the second division, is what baseball men call a "tough spot."

But Howley is a fighter.

His eyes gleamed and his square jaw set more firmly as it was mentioned that, in succeeding George Sisler as manager of the St. Louis American League Club, he was encountering a "tough spot."

"I wouldn't feel at home in a soft spot," he said. "I've had tough ones all my life. I managed Montreal for four years and that was a tough spot. I managed the Toronto club in 1918 and that year the war took away all my players. Then I came back to Toronto in 1923 and the club had finished fifth and all the players who helped finish that high were lost. But we finished fourth in 1923, second in 1924 and 1925 and then this year we won a pennant. On the 1926 team there was not a single player who was in Toronto uniform when I was appointed manager."

Howley was asked if he had a formula for winning pennants, for building ball clubs. He rubbed his chin and thought. Howley doesn't believe in making snap statements.

"Every situation must be met differently," he said finally. "Of course there are essentials to success on the ball field. There are three or four requisites. You must have the players. The players must be in condition. The players must hustle and there must be harmony. If you take players as good as the players on the other teams and they will hustle and if there is

No Places Open For Rum Hounds On Howley's Club

TORONTO, Nov. 6.

DANIEL PHILIP HOWLEY, 40 years old, weighing 180 pounds and standing half an inch more than six feet in his stocking feet, has never worked except as a ball player, or in some baseball capacity. From high school he went to professional baseball and has been in professional baseball ever since.

Howley's favorite winter recreations are hunting and fishing in the Canadian wilds and watching hockey games. He'd travel 100 miles through a driving snowstorm to see a hockey game and he'd sleep in a tent with the temperature 40 below zero for a day's sport with the rifle.

Howley is married, but has no children. His wife never saw a ball game until she became Mrs. Howley and she doesn't know much about the game now, Howley says, which he considers fortunate, as she can't discuss the players' ability with their wives.

Howley smokes cigars and cigarettes, but never has tasted beer or whisky. He does not object to others drinking, but says there is no room on his ball club for "rum hounds."

WITH BALL ON 4-YARD LINE IN FINAL QUARTER, SOONERS GROUND PASS

Clark Picks Forward Out of Sky to Make Tiger Touchdown; Potts Eludes Entire Team in 55-Yard Run for Score; Haskin's Kick Decides Game.

By C. E. McBride.
(Umpire Missouri-Oklahoma Game)

NORMAN, Ok., Nov. 6.—Missouri's triumphant parade toward the goal of another Valley championship in football came to the turn in the road on the Sooner gridiron today when the fighting Oklahomans put a 10 to 7 crimp in the Tiger's tail.

A story book touchdown, with Frank Potts, 100-pound Oklahoma backfield star, playing the role of Frank Merriwell, was the main motive power on which the victory swung, although it was a field goal in the third quarter that really shot the Sooners into the lead they managed to hold to until the final gun.

Missouri was leading 7 to 0 when the swift-moving Potts tore a page from football fiction and filmed it before the eyes of Oklahoma's greatest home-coming crowd. That Tiger touchdown had come in the second quarter, Bert Clark, Missouri's elusive back, taking a long forward pass on Oklahoma's eight-yard line and speeding unmolested across the goal line. Just out of reach of an Oklahoma back was the pass, the ball clearing the Oklahoma's head by inches, dropping into the arms of the Tiger back a scant three yards ahead.

Potts Rises to Occasion.

That was the first scoring play of a thrilling hour of football. Staring this lead in the face in the same quarter, Frank Potts did his specialty. Sooner rooters say no game passes that does not find this star of the Sooner backfield pulling a spectacular play that puts his team in the running. He has a habit of rising to the occasion. When the call comes, Frank Potts answers. That's what his Sooner rooters say.

Oklahoma's ball somewhere out near the middle of the field. The powerful Potts falls back to kick or to pass or maybe it is to run with the ball. Not to kick though, someone says, because he isn't a punter. All right, then; to pass or to run.

The ball goes back to him. 10 yards back and Potts turns this way and that looking for an uncovered eligible to whom to pass the ball. Or maybe he was bluffing. Some say he was. Anyway, Frank finds every eligible teammate covered by a Tiger secondary defense man. There is no one to whom to throw the ball.

He Is on His Way.

Two Tiger rushers are almost on him. Sooner hearts are in Sooner throats. Thousands of them. Thousands and thousands. Potts was about to be thrown far back of his scrimmage line for a big loss. Then it was that Frank Potts started to run. He dodged one Missouri forward sidestepped another and was on his way.

Around Missouri's right end Frank Potts is now running, gathering speed. He must be greased. Missouri tacklers slide off. Potts is on his way. Fifty yards he runs, cutting perilously close to the side line once but quickly veering from the danger of out of bounds. Five yards from the Missouri goal line.

Fifteen thousand Oklahomans yelling like mad—but what's this—the crack of a gun—the field judge who is timekeeper dashing down the field, firing his gun, indicating that time is up. And the ball is in play. A page out of fiction. You said it all. Even as the Tiger fired his gun a third time Potts crossed the goal line and the touchdown was entered on the books. Time has expired during the course of the run but the rules provide that in such goal point and the half is history at 7 and 7. Glorious history for Oklahoma.

Was It Luck or Strategy?

Was Frank Potts' touchdown a happy break from a play that went wrong or was his attempt to find a mate to receive a pass merely a bluff? Answer that and you answer a question that is on every tongue in Norman tonight.

"The play that went wrong, or boys I can take it myself!" might well be the caption for the story of this exciting run of Frank Potts, the Oklahoman who has always produced the thrill when his team is in need. Only for this, one hears that the play was a premeditated play, planned that way, plotted in that manner and executed as planned and plotted.

"Sure, we planned it," said Benny Owen, the Oklahoma coach. "Didn't you see the ends go down. We had worked it out just that way." But the Sooner coach smiled and one couldn't tell whether

"ONLY HUSTLERS CAN PLAY BALL FOR ME"—DAN P. HOWLEY

Browns' New Leader Outlines Plans for Managing the Team

Harmony, Condition and "Pep" Will Be Expected of All Men Retained — Hopes Sisler Will Decide to Play Under Him — Is Used to "Tough Spots."

harmony the club will soon be on top.

Has No Plan for Browns—Yet.

"I CAN'T says what I plan to do with the Browns. I know most of the players there. I was with Detroit for some time and I know all the older players in the league, but I don't know much about the players that have come up since I went to Toronto. Every player must be handled differently. What would be good policy with Toronto might be bad for the Browns. But, summed up, you can't go wrong on the statement that you have to have good players, players who hustle and players who work together, without any cliques or factions or malcontents.

"I always have been an admirer of George Sisler. I consider him one of the greatest players that baseball ever knew and for a time he was the greatest player of them all. Besides that, he is a gentleman, a player with a fine spirit, a hustling, aggressive player. I hope he decides that he wants to stay with the Browns. I want him. You could not replace Sisler. Where is there a first baseman who can play as George plays? And I know that if Sisler decides to stay with the Browns he will give his best efforts, that's the kind of a player and a man Sisler is. He is a 100 per center if there ever was one.

"We'll get an early start at training camp for the pitchers and the pitching staff and the entire team will be in condition for the 1927 pennant race. That's one thing I can say right now. I have definite ideas about training a baseball team. I have had to train players and I have had to develop players and I am confident that my methods will have the Browns ready for a battle when the next season opens.

"I believe in one practice session a day, but it must be a long drill, with the players hustling every minute of the time. When you try two sessions the noon hour and lunch breaks up the work and the afternoon session is lackadaisical and worse than time wasted."

Howley has made a great reputation as a developer of pitchers. In winning the International League pennant the past season he developed a pitching staff that baseball men say could have carried through to a championship in the major leagues. The Toronto team won 109 games and then wiped up the diamond with the Louisville club, champions of the American Association. Howley's team, the Leafs, defeated the Louisville Colonels in five straight games, five different pitchers working for the Leafs and holding the Colonels to an average of five hits a game.

"I always had good pitching," he said when asked how he developed the staff. "I was a catcher and I always made a study of pitching. Pitching is so important that you can't give too much attention to that department of your team. Christy Mathewson was a great friend of mine. I never played on the same team with Matty but whenever I got a chance I questioned him. He liked to answer questions. Just show an interest in pitching and he'd give you hours at a time. I profited greatly by my time spent with Matty and I guess he did more for me in teaching me how to develop pitchers than any other man I ever met in baseball."

Howley, Never a Great Player, Chose Baseball Rather Than College Career

HOWLEY never was a great player. Born in Weymouth, Mass., Oct. 16, 1886, he went through high school and was an outstanding member of the baseball and football teams. As a youngster he was a pitcher and third baseman, but when he went to Indianapolis in 1906, choosing professional baseball in preference to a course at Dartmouth University, he was a catcher.

Indianapolis farmed him out to Grand Rapids and Grand Rapids won a pennant that year. In 1907, 1908, 1909 and 1910 he was with Indianapolis, the team winning a pennant in 1908 with Charley Carr as manager. In 1911 he was ordered to Louisville, but refused to report and that year he went to Utica, joining his former manager, Carr. He was sold to Cleveland in 1912 but before he reported he was assigned to Portland and then in 1913 he was bought by the Phillies.

"I realized by that time that I was not going to set any records as a big league catcher," Howley related, "and decided to give up the job of being a mediocre player and take a chance at managing a club. So when I had a chance to manage Montreal I grabbed it and led that club for four years. I was learning, but not doing any great stunts as a manager and Montreal finished no better than third while I was in charge.

"Then I shifted to Toronto and won the pennant in 1918. That was a tough spot, as I mentioned before. Toronto had won the pennant in 1917, but when I got hold of the team only one player remained from the pennant-winning machine. But we picked up players here and there and we went over. It was a tough battle. We didn't win until the last day of the season and then we won in 12 innings after we had tied the score in the tenth inning to save the game."

Howley was assistant to Hughie Jennings in 1919, managed Hartford in 1920, returned to Detroit as Cobb's first lieutenant in 1921 and 1922, and then moved back to Toronto.

After finishing fourth with Toronto in 1924 Howley's team was shot to pieces by sales to the majors and he found himself with a squad of youngsters. The average age of his players in 1925 was a few months over 22 years, but the team won 99 games and finished second despite that handicap. A picture of the team resembles a high school or college team more than it does a Class AA runnerup.

"You can't win without good players," Howley continued, after he had given an outline of his baseball career. "In the minor leagues you have to develop them. And your stars are taken away from you about as fast as they are developed. That's a condition that has to be met in the minors. You have to know how to develop the best there is in a young player. In the majors things are different. I have served in the lower ledgues and the big leagues and there is as much difference between minor league baseball and major league baseball management, playing, business methods and every phase, as there is between a sand pile and a gold mine.

Browns Need Another Scout.

"YOU must have a good scouting systenf in the major leagues, players must be available for development and one of the most important things in a big league organization is a scout. I will add at least one scout to the Browns organization, a man I know and whose scouting ability I recognize.

"Then, when you have the players, you must weed out all those who won't hustle. The Browns under my management will hustle. If there is anyone on the squad who won't hustle, he won't last long. And there is no room on any team of mine for a malcontent. Of course, there are some good players who are considered grouches, or as players call them, 'crabs.' Frequently their bark is worse than their bite; but if they bite too hard, they must be shipped away."

Howley was asked if he believed in the "choke-'em Charley" style of baseball, the vicious slide and the policy of doing anything to win.

"Baseball has changed since I was a player," he replied. "In the old days the game was rougher and you had to play rough to be on even terms with the other fellow. I remember when I was a kid that I hated one player with particular hatred. He was not a particularly brilliant player. Just an average sort, and if he had played a mild, polite game he would not have stayed in the big leagues. But whenever he rounded third base he would give the third baseman the knee or the elbow, or slip his finger in his belt and give him a boost. Anything to throw a fielder off his stride. I used to think that I'd give anything if I could just slide into his face feet first, just once. But he was a valuable player because he was a tricky player, and he was sought after and kept in the game whereas had he played purely on his merits he would not have lasted long. Do you know who he is? You'd never guess it now, but Bill Friel was one of the toughest and meanest players I ever saw in my life.

"But baseball has changed now. You couldn't get away with that stuff now. You'd get killed in three days even if you escaped detection by the umpires."

Howley was questioned as to his ideas of discipline.

"Never Humiliate a Baseball Player On the Field," One of Howley's Maxims

"THAT'S a very important proposition," he replied. "You have to treat every man differently. I'll have to learn my men. But I have laid down a few dules for myself. I have never called down a player on the filed. I never liked to be humiliated myself and I have never humiliated a player by calling him dwon for a mistake on the field. If you will wait until after the game or until you have a chance to take the man to one side he will profit more by the calling down, or the advice, than if you bawled it out so all the players and the public could hear you.

"I explode occasionally, but you can't help it. If you don't take your baseball seriously you'll never get anywhere. But when I do explode I get over it soon and I never leave any wounds that won't heal. That's the trouble with some managers. They cut their players wide open and the wound never heals and the player's value to you is reduced.

"In the old days it was a daily occurrence to fight the umpires. But it doesn't get you anywhere, either. I have fought umpires and I have fought players. I have a scar here on my head where a policeman hit me while I was fighting an umpire. One time I fought a player in the clubhouse. He was a whale of a man and I thought he was going to kill me. I guess he would if he had stayed in the fight a little longer. But those days are gone. You don't have to fight any more. It doesn't do you any good. All you have to do to get the player's best is to give him a square deal. You have to be the boss, but to be the boss you don't have to throw up your fists or make a threat every time you give an order.

"I think the most valuable thing on a baseball field is the spirit of the team, the harmony. They tell me that's what won for the Cardinals, the fine spirit of the team, the willingness of the players to give everything they had for Rogers Hornsby. That's what won for us in Toronto, and no team can win consistently unless it has harmony and a good spirit. There are players who have more of the winning spirit than other. Billy Mullen, a St. Louis boy, is the ideal type of player. If you could have nine Billy Mullens on any team it would breeze through any league because that much winning spirit could not be defeated.

"After you have established harmony and a good spirit on a ball club it takes a lot of hard work to get anywhere. Even with good spirit and hard work you also need some breaks. There are eight teams in each major league, each striving and working all the time and only one of the eight can win a pennant."

One of the best recommendations for Daniel Philip Howley is the attitude of the Toronto baseball public toward his advancement to the major leagues. Howley took the writer on a tour of the city, showed him the fine new ball park, the ice rink where two professional hockey teams were practicing and other points of interest.

Wherever Howley went he met the same greeting. Smiles faded from the faces of friends as they told Dan they were sorry to hear he was leaving; but that they hoped he would prosper and that of course he couldn't pass up a chance to go to the big leagues.

The old grounds keeper at the ball park tried bravely to wish Dan luck with a smile, but the old man broke down and tears streamed down his face.

At the ice rink the practice was broken up by the appearance of Howley and the skaters rushed to greet him to tell him how sorry they were he was leaving. Newspaper men said Toronto would never get another man like Howley.

Browns' New Manager Prefers Tight Defense and Pitching to Sluggers

FREDERICK WILSON, sporting editor of the Toronto Globe, had the following to say in comment on his advancement:

"With a record of continuous success in majors as player, and assistant manager, and in the International League as manager, Daniel Philip Howley assumes the management of the St. Louis Browns in succession to George Sisler. Howley will be successful in St. Louis as elsewhere. The Browns are down. President Phil Ball admits that the team will have to be rebuilt, not an altogether pleasant prospect for a new manager stepping up from the minors, but Howley is an indefatigable worker, an astute manager and a result-getter. He will get results as soon as he has an opportunity to get his system of attack and defense working smoothly. Howley is a really great handler of pitchers, and a great developer of defensive strength. There has never been a more popular manager in the International League."

Howley was asked if he specialized on defensive baseball.

"We had the greatest defensive team you ever saw," he replied. "And we won the pennant. Too many managers now concentrate on developing a team of sluggers and the result is that the close games are lost through errors. Pitching and the tight defense are essential to a pennant winner. Where would the Cardinals have been if it had not been for Thevenow? There's a great shortstop. Or, what might have happened if the Yankee defense had been better? There were two games that would have been won by the Yankees if stops had been made of ordinary ground balls.

"Yes, I guess I'm a believer in a tight defense. Give me a good fielder, even if he doesn't hit so hard. Hold down the other fellow's run total and you'll win the close games and make it easier for your pitching staff."

Howley was asked if he believed in changing pitchers at slight provocation.

"No hard and fast rule can go there," he replied. "Sometimes an error will put a pitcher in the hole. You have to learn to know your pitchers. Some pitchers blow up when an error is made behind them. It's wise to take out a pitcher like that, even if it is not his fault that he is in the hole.

"But there's a vast difference between minor and major league pitching in that respect. In the minor leagues you don't have to change pitchers so frequently. The minor league team usually has only two or three good hitters, but when you get to the majors every man is a good hitter, with few exceptions, and if you tarry too long with a faltering pitcher the other fellows will have nine or ten runs before you know it. You can't set a rule, though. Some pitchers will want to stay when they ought to be taken out, and some pitchers will feel shaky and want to get out when they're better than anybody in the bull pen. You just have to learn your men and stand or fall on your judgment."

The Job Sought Howley.

HOWLEY did not seek the job as manager of the Browns. He could have had the management of any of three major league clubs, but he did not solicit any job. He wanted to stay in Toronto. He has built up an army of friends here and he really feels very bad about leaving the city. He never signed a contract as manager while in Toronto. He worked under a verbal agreement. But when he was offered the job in St. Louis, after being recommended to Phil Ball by Ban Johnson, he conferred with Ball.

Howley and Ball quickly came to terms. The two men should get along very well together. Ball is a fighter and Howley is a fighter. Ball likes a fighter, and Howley likes a fight. Ball owns the Browns, but in signing Howley he is signing a man who never will say "Yes, Mr. Ball" if he thinks he should say "No." After terms had been agreed upon, Howley said he would have to confer with L. Soloman, owner of the Toronto club, before he could close finally with Ball. Howley was not under contract in Toronto, but he felt himself honor bound to get Soloman's consent before accepting the place in St. Louis. Soloman, of course, hated to see Howley go, but he could not stand in the way of Dan's advancement.

"It's a good thing I saw Mr. Ball and Mr. Soloman and didn't have to meet the board," said Howley. "They've been so wonderful to me here that if they had got me up there in the board room and started shaking my hand I'd never have been able to leave them. You know after I had it all fixed up and settled to go to St. Louis I felt all broken up and wished I could undo the whole thing. Friends mean a whole lot in this world.

"But they tell me I've got a tough spot in St. Louis." There was the old gleam, the fighting Irishman. "I love tough spots."

Yes, if you have a forlorn hope, and it's forlorn enough call on Daniel Philip Howley. He'll be busy for three years building up the Browns and steering them toward pennant port, but after that he may be at liberty. St. Louis may no longer be a "tough spot," and if the prospects are bright and the future promising this fighting Irishman may want none of it. For he dotes on "tough spots," he specializes in forlorn hopes.

St. Louis will like Daniel Philip Howley, just as Toronto learned to like him.

Westminster 47, Drury 0.

By the Associated Press.

FULTON, Mo., Nov. 6.—Westminster defeated Drury College of Springfield on the local gridiron this afternoon by a score of 47 to 0. Line plunges in the first half by Sexton, fullback, and White, halfback, and end runs by Farrington, quarterback, gave Westminster 34 points in the second half.

The Bluejays played many substitutes. A 50-yard pass, Sexton to Farrington, and a touchdown from kickoff by White, who got the ball after Drury had fumbled, were spectacular features of the game.

Ernie Nevers Booting Place Kick, in Game With Blues at Sportsman's Park

Ernie Nevers Scores 30 Points and Eskimos Beat The St. Louis Blues, 48-0

Stanford Star Passes, Kicks and Runs in Great Style; Slevin Geraghty Goes to Hospital; 1500 Attend.

By J. Walter Goldstein.

The great Ernie Nevers may have played in more heroic roles, while fullbacking on the campus of Leland Stanford University during the past three autumns; but it is doubtful if he ever spent a busier afternoon than he did while leading his Duluth Eskimos to a 48 to 0 victory over the St. Louis Blues in a professional football game at Sportsman's Park, yesterday afternoon.

Ernie expended his efforts to conclusively prove to the 1700 spectators that he is one of the most versatile football players who ever romped on a local gridiron and that Knute Rockne was not far wrong when he said that the big, blond Native Son is the greatest athlete in the game's history. His contributions to the score were four touchdowns, a field goal from the 38-yard line and three goals after touchdown. Besides these concrete evidences of ability, he showed considerable stuff which is not reckoned by points.

Nevers punted. Nevers forward-passed. Nevers returned kicks. He crashed the guards, slid through tackles, skirted ends, ran interference for his backfield comrades, played defensive fullback on line plays by the opposition and dropped back to handle the safety job when punting was in order. Outside of handling these odd jobs and directing the team, he spent a rather listless afternoon. Six minutes before the end of play, he retired from the field, calling it a day.

Nevers On the Job.

It will be remembered that when "Red" Grange brought his professional club here for a game last year, he limited his exhibition to less than half of the game; and was roundly "panned" by the spectators when he left the field. None of that virtuoso temperament for Ernie. Despite the fact that he must play in Detroit today and has other games Thursday, Saturday and Sunday, he stuck to the job long after retiring some of the lesser lights of his eleven. After the game in the clubhouse he said, "Well I guess the people who come out to see us want me to stay in there; but I play because I love the game."

Nevers has surrounded himself with a thoroughly workmanlike group of football players. Unlike most professional clubs of high standing, his is not built of whilom stars from college fields. He has recruited men of brawn—they average slightly over 200 pounds—who are schooled in the mechanics of the game and able to lay the groundwork for the exploitation of his own brilliance. Evidently he did not expect much of a tussle yesterday, since he left two of his first string backs, a guard and a tackle at home.

This reduced power of the Duluth Club was somewhat offset by the absence of three of the St. Louis mainstays. Bob Hannegan, erstwhile St. Louis University star, has been the bulwark of the local club's defense; and when he was lost to the lineup, the Blues were seriously handicapped. Klausner and Beach, two other regulars, also were unable to get into play and further crippled the St. Louis club. It would however, have taken more than a Hannegan and a Beach and a Klausner to have made yesterday's game look more like a contest than an exhibition; and Nevers was a couple of dozen of the reasons.

Teams "Utterly Unmatched."

Less than five minutes of play had been spent before the nature of the meeting between these two utterly unmatched teams asserted itself. After the local players had been unable to dent the opposing defense in three tries, Duluth received a punt on its own 45-yard line and started a sustained march down the field for a touchdown. There were 10 line smashes in the sequence, a chap named Rooney doing most of the gaining. Nevers took the ball on the three-yard line and headed through tackle for the score. Then he place-kicked the extra point. Later in this period, the Blues came closer to the visitors' goal than they did at any time during the afternoon.

An alert St. Louisan got through the line of scrimmage, partially blocking one of Nevers' punts, and a teammate recovered on the Eskimo 42-yard line. A line play gave a couple of yards and then a forward pass, with Eggler on the receiving end, netted 10 yards and a first down on the Nevers—beg pardon, the Duluth 29-yard line. Things were looking up for St. Louis; but on the next play a second pass effort went into the intercepting arms of Method who returned 20 yards. That was the last quasi-serious thrust of the Blues. Not only did they fail to score another first down during the play, but their aggregate gained yardage did not amount to 10 yards.

It is in the passing role that Nevers is most spectacular. He shot short ones with plenty of zip on them across the line of scrimmage or out to the wings; but it was when he made the long, arching tosses that the thrills were produced.

"Pro" Football a Failure Here?

It was generally conceded that yesterday's exhibition might be considered a true test of professional football in St. Louis. With Nevers as an unusual attraction, perfect football weather and the absence of collegiate game competition, it seemed that if the "pro" game is ever to prosper the conditions were ideal for that opportunity. In spite of such an auspicious setting, fewer than 2000 spectators watched the play and the promoters suffered no inconsequential financial loss as a result.

The play lacked the sparkle, the zest and the color of football that the college game has trained us to look for. True enough everybody was satisfied with the afternoon's entertainment; but Ernie Nevers alone may be thanked for that.

Northwestern Is An Easy Winner Over Purdue 22-0

Defeat Is First of Year for Boilermakers—Purple Still Undefeated.

By the Associated Press.

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 6.—Northwestern's Purple Wildcats smothered Purdue's hope for a high standing in the Western conference today, defeating the Boilermakers, 22 to 0. Greater speed in the backfield coupled with the forward passing by Capt. "Moon" Baker of the home team, were the main factors.

Northwestern performed brilliantly from the start and with Capt. Baker and "Tiny" Lewis dashing off ends or plowing through tackles, kept the home goal out of danger throughout the afternoon. In one department, punting, the Purdue team had the advantage. "Cotton" Wilcox could not get loose for any spectacular dashes, but he made excellent use of his right foot and consistently drove the ball 45 yards or more.

All told, Purdue tried 13 passes. Two were completed, three were intercepted and the others were wild or knocked down. Northwestern completed five out of 11 throws for a total gain of 101 yards. Two were intercepted and four incomplete. From scrimmage the home team had a big advantage, scoring 16 first downs to Purdue's seven. Each team was penalized frequently for offside and once Captain Hogan, of Purdue, returning to the lineup after a rest, cost his team 20 yards by talking out of turn.

Minnesota Easily Defeats Iowa, 41-0.

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 6.—Out of the north a Minnesota avalanche rolled today, crushing Iowa's football team under a 41 to 0 score and ruining the Hawkeyes' annual homecoming.

Never did the men of Coach Ingwersen seriously threaten, their only first down from rushing coming on an 18-yard dash by Cowboy Nick Kutsch.

Viewed from a statistical angle, it was all Minnesota. The Gophers collected 408 yards on 73 rushes and made 21 first downs. Five of the Gopher forward passes were completed for a gain of 82 yards, including one touchdown. Iowa, with Kutsch in the stellar role, made a total of 82 yards in 34 rushes, the Cowboy getting a net of 38 yards, advancing 47 yards and losing nine. Four Minnesota punts totaled 219 yards and seven Iowa kicks went for 258 yards.

Nydahl led the Gopher yardage gains with 131 on 23 tries. He replaced Almquist, injured early in the game, and repeated his dash of last week's Wisconsin game when he took a punt and ran 63 yards for Minnesota's second touchdown.

Joesting's plunges averaged 5½ yards and he made 122 yards in 22 tries.

Michigan Smothers Wisconsin, 37 to 0.

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 6.—Opening wide an air drive that featured the old Friedman to Oosterbaan combination, Michigan humbled Wisconsin 37 to 0 today in what probably was the last game that ever will be played on historic Ferry Field. Michigan used a revamp line and showed a better offensive, than she has revealed in any previous games this year. Most of the play was in Wisconsin territory.

Notre Dame Wins From Indiana, 26-0.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 6.—Notre Dame's undefeated 1926 football team added another victory to its string today by downing Indiana University, 26 to 0. Knute Rockne's eleven was not forced to extend itself although Indiana fought until the final gun.

Notre Dame, with the difficult Army game only a week off, kept its stars on the fiel donly long enough to put over the winning scores.

Flanagan and Dahman, Notre Dame backfield men who have been consistent ground gainers throughout the season, were in form today. Each contributed two touchdowns and Dahman made two drop-kicks for extra points after touchdowns. One of Dahman's scores came after a 65-yard run.

After That Stillwater Eleven Louis Entry, Using Forwa —Second Team Goes in

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

STILLWATER, Ok., Nov. 6.—O tained its perfect standing in Missou Lewis Field here today by defeatin astonishing score of 37 to 3.

It was the fifth consecutive conference loss by the St. Louis eleven, which came to Stillwater determined to break into the victory column. The Aggies were "loaded for Bear" and their aim was true.

Five touchdowns, five goals thereafter and a safety accounted for the Oklahomans' tallies, the Washington score resulting from a field goal.

The Bears, ferrocious in their red helmets and green jerseys, took the lead in the first quarter, scoring the only points in that period. Late in the opening round, however, the Black sweatered and painted-faced Aggies' defense stiffened and prepared for a great offensive, which started in the second quarter, was not stopped. Two touchdowns were tallied before the half ended. Another one and the safety were annexed in the third quarter and two others came in the fourth.

Profit by Passes.

Forward passing featured the advances by each team. Nearly every score being made possible through aerial attacks.

Washington was on the offensive almost the entire first period, but later the threats were all by the Maulbetschmen. Two Aggie chances to score were lost, once on downs, once on an incomplete pass over the goal line, but in each instance the advantage was turned later into a touchdown.

Washington's field goal, kicked by Hayes, quarterback, from the 25-yard line midway of the first period, was made possible by a brilliant pass for 40 yards, from Harding, left half, to Senne, right half. Senne was downed on the Aggies' 10-yard line. Two smashes at the Black line were unavailing and Harding lost three yards trying to skirt right end. It was then that Hayes dropped back and dropkicked the ball squarely between the posts.

M'Lean Races 30 Yards.

On the first play in the second quarter, McLean, Aggie right half, broke through the Missourians and raced 30 yards, being halted 30 yards from the goal. Peery, quarterback, passed to Bowman, fullback for 8 yards. Bowman and McCoy advanced on line plays and another pass, for five yards, Peery to McCoy, put the ball on the 5-yard line. McLean clipped off four, Bowman failed on a buck over tackle, then McCoy rammed through tackle for the touchdown, the first scored on Lewis Field this fall. McCoy kicked goal.

In an exchange of punts, Washington lost, with Hayes matched against Peery, and the ball was put into play on the one-yard line by the Bears. A short punt gave the Aggies their second scoring chance. A series of passes, with Peery, McLean and Bowman as principals, put the ball on the one-yard line, where McLean was stopped after a 24-yard aerial gain. Bowman slashed through right guard for a touchdown. McCoy kicked goal, the Aggies apparently cinching the victory with a 14 to 3 lead.

Passes 24 Yards.

The third Aggie touchdown in the third quarter came from a 24-yard pass, Peery to McLean. McCoy kicked goal.

A 25-yard broken field run by Bowman had made the tally pos-

NOTRE DAME STAR IN HOSPITAL, IS IN CRITICAL CONDITION

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 6.—Arthur Parisien, Notre Dame star forward passer, injured in the first quarter of today's game with Indiana, was taken to St. Joseph's hospital here where it was said his heart had been affected by the injury and that his condition was critical. The exact nature of the injury could not be immediately determined.

Officials at the university said tonight that Parisien had apparently been hurt in the ribs which were probably affecting the blood circulation.

Bears Look Fine for One Quarter; Hayes' Kick Scores Points

After That Stillwater Eleven Completely Outclasses St. Louis Entry, Using Forward Pass for Great Results—Second Team Goes in Last Period.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

STILLWATER, Ok., Nov. 6.—Oklahoma A. and M. College maintained its perfect standing in Missouri Valley Conference football on Lewis Field here today by defeating Washington University by the astonishing score of 37 to 3.

It was the fifth consecutive conference loss by the St. Louis eleven, which came to Stillwater determined to break into the victory column. The Aggies were "loaded for Bear" and their aim was true.

Five touchdowns, five goals thereafter and a safety accounted for the Oklahomans' tallies, the Washington score resulting from a field goal.

The Bears, ferocious in their red helmets and green jerseys, took the lead in the first quarter, scoring the only points in that period. Late in the opening round, however, the Black sweatered and painted-faced Aggies' defense stiffened and prepared for a great offensive, which started in the second quarter, was not stopped. Two touchdowns were tallied before the half ended. Another one and the safety were annexed in the third quarter and two others came in the fourth.

Profit by Passes.

Forward passing featured the advances by each team. Nearly every score being made possible through aerial attacks.

Washington was on the offensive almost the entire first period, but later the threats were all by the Maulbetschmen. Two Aggie chances to score were lost, once on downs, once on an incomplete pass over the goal line, but in each instance the advantage was turned later into a touchdown.

Washington's field goal, kicked by Hayes, quarterback, from the 25-yard line midway of the first period, was made possible by a brilliant pass for 40 yards, from Harding, left half, to Senne, right half. Senne was downed on the Aggies' 10-yard line. Two smashes at the Black line were unavailing and Harding lost three yards trying to skirt right end. It was then that Hayes dropped back and drop-kicked the ball squarely between the posts.

M'Lean Races 30 Yards.

On the first play in the second quarter, McLean, Aggie right half, broke through the Missourians and raced 30 yards, being halted 30 yards from the goal. Peery, quarterback, passed to Bowman, fullback for 8 yards. Bowman and McCoy advanced on line plays and another pass, for five yards, Peery to McCoy, put the ball on the 5-yard line. McLean clipped off four, Bowman failed on a buck over tackle, then McCoy rammed through tackle for the touchdown, the first scored on Lewis Field this fall. McCoy kicked goal.

In an exchange of punts, Washington lost, with Hayes matched against Peery, and the ball was put into play on the one-yard line by the Bears. A short punt gave the Aggies their second scoring chance. A series of passes, with Peery, McLean and Bowman as principals, put the ball on the one-yard line, where McLean was stopped after a 24-yard aerial gain. Bowman dashed through right guard for a touchdown. McCoy kicked goal, the Aggies apparently cinching the victory with a 14 to 3 lead.

Passes 24 Yards.

The third Aggie touchdown in the third quarter came from a 24-yard pass, Peery to McLean. McCoy kicked goal.

A 25-yard broken field run by Bowman had made the tally possible. After the next kick-off, Washington again was forced back by punting exchanges. In trying to punt, Hayes let the ball roll past him from center. It rolled over the goal line, where McDonough tried to retrieve it. He was downed by Estep, Aggie guard, for the safety, the last scoring in the third period, which ended with a lead of 23 to 3 for A and M.

Two consecutive, successful passes, the first plays of the fourth quarter, gave the Aggies their fourth touchdown. Peery passed on 16 yards to McLean, then hurled another, for 20 yards to McCoy, who fell across the goal. Standard, substitute half, kicked the goal. Five minutes before the game ended, the fifth and final touchdown was attained by Whittenberg, substitute Aggie half, who broke through the Bear line and raced 48 yards to the goal. Danford, who had replaced Peery at quarter, kicked the goal.

Helen Wills Describes Backhand Drive—Its Grip and Mechanics

One in Which Thumb Is Extended Up Handle of Racquet Made by Lenglen and Johnston.

WHEN a ball is driven to the left of a player he returns it with the backhand stroke. The most useful type of backhand stroke is the drive. Most balls off the ground can be taken with this stroke, with the exception of very high, bouncing balls.

In learning the backhand driver, the first thing to be considered is the grip of the hand on the racquet. This grip varies with players. I can only describe accurately the grip which I use, because I am familiar with it. It happens that William Johnston and Mlle. Lenglen employ this same grip, which can be defined in a general way, as the one in which the thumb is extended up the handle of the racquet, William Tilden, on the other hand, uses a different grip—one in which the thumb is not extended—thus causing more wrist play in the execution of the stroke. Fewer players use this grip on the backhand, and while it is a very good one and produces marvelous shots, it is perhaps a little more difficult for the beginner to understand.

Thumb as Brace.

In the grip with which I am familiar or the one in which the thumb is extended up the handle of the racquet, there is a shift from the forehand to the backhand hold. The racquet is shifted in the hand so that the thumb is along one of the broader sides of the handle and [illegible] struck on the opposite side of the face of the racquet for the backhand ball.

The reason the thumb is raised along the handle in this way is that it acts as a brace. Very swift balls may then be returned more easily and more accurately.

The standing position; swing of the stroke, and body balance are the next considerations.

In making the backhand drive you stand with your right foot advanced towards the net. The body is in more or less of a sidewise position so that the racquet arm can move freely. You should avoid facing the net directly on this shot, as also on the forehand drive, because it makes a fast ball more difficult and harder to control, and graceful stroking almost impossible.

Shift Weight in Stroking.

Body balance and swing of the racquet are so closely interwoven in the action of the stroke, and are so important to each other, that they should be described together.

In making the backhand drive, first put your weight on your right foot, the one nearest the net, because the body is in a sidewise standing position, and hold your racquet in a relaxed position. Then bring the racquet back in a full circular swing on the left side of the body at the same time shifting your weight onto your left foot. Then as the racquet comes forward to meet the ball, the weight shifts again to the right foot, which is still in the advanced position. In this way, at the time of impact of racquet and ball, the body is coming forward in the same direction as the racquet, and the fight leg acts as a pivot upon which the whole turns.

Thus in shifting the weight naturally in making the stroke, a united movement in one general direction results, and there is no contrary motion which is liable to upset the smoothness and continuity of the stroke. With the continuity of motion in mind and its relation with the body weight, the beginner is bound to learn more quickly, and get better results from his strokes.

As the racquet is brought forward, and as it hits the ball, the face of the racquet is turned forward in order to give the soin necessary to bring the ball down into the opposite court.

After the ball is hit, the racquet swings forward and upward, and the arm is stretched out. The racquet is far out from the body, and is allowed to finish the swing naturally and easily. This is called the follow through. It the follow through is good, stroking is always more successful. After the ball is hit, if the racquet is pulled or jerked, or stopped suddenly, the resulting shot is rarely as satisfactory. Tilden, Johnston and Alonzo prove that a free follow through is one of the factors behind fine tennis.

At the end of the stroke, and the follow through of the backhand drive, the weight of the body is on the right foot, and the left foot is free and ready to carry the player in pursuit of the next ball.

I might add that the young beginner who is trying out the pointers which are the subjects of these articles in order to be sure that they are applicable and practical, is making good progress. He is now learning to serve.

HELEN WILLS.

CLEVELAND IS VICTOR, TAKES LEAGUE LEAD

Team Gains Only Two First Downs to Roosevelt's 11, but Wins, 12-7—Central and Soldan Tie.

Cleveland High School, although clearly outplayed in every department of the game, gained a 12 to 7 victory over its strongest rival, Roosevelt, in the feature contest of yesterday's High School League football double-header at Roosevelt Field before a crowd estimated at 7500. Cleveland, through the victory, takes the lead in the championship race with two victories and no defeats. In the opening game, Central and Soldan battled to a scoreless tie.

With a record of 11 first downs made against Cleveland's two, and of 144 yards gained in scrimmage, while Cleveland's total of 98 yards included a 68-yard run by Graham, the defeat was hard for the Rough Riders to swallow.

The first quarter was mainly a continuous exchange of punts, but toward the end, Roosevelt worked the ball to within 10 yards of the enemy goal on line plunges. When play resumed in the second quarter, Roosevelt failed to penetrate the heavy Cleveland line and surrendered the ball on downs whereupon Hornsby punted out of danger. A little later, after Broe of Roosevelt had punted to Cleveland's 27-yard mark, Hornsby hit tackle for five yards. On the next play, Graham playing close to the line, received Wilson's pass, faked a pass to the two other backs, each heading off different tackles, so neatly that the entire Roosevelt defense was deceived, and Graham started unmolested on his 68-yard dash for the goal. Hornsby's attempt at the goal failed. In the same quarter Hornsby intercepted a Roosevelt pass on the enemy 40-yard line and ran for a touchdown, again failing in the try for the extra point.

Roosevelt's Score Earned.

In direct contrast, Roosevelt's only score, coming in the third quarter, was the result of earned yardage. The Rough Riders started their march for the goal on Cleveland's 40-yard line after receiving a Cleveland punt, and advanced steadily towards the line by three and five yard plunges through center and off tackle. From the 7-yard mark, Sauselle tossed a short pass to Smith, and Carroll made it seven points with a neat placement. Roosevelt kept the ball in Cleveland's territory the remainder of the period and the quarter ended with the ball in Rough Riders' possession on Cleveland's 20-yard line.

Cleveland punted whenever it gained the ball in the last quarter and Roosevelt's desperate aerial attempts were fruitless. Carroll and Sauselle were the chief ground-gainers for Roosevelt and the entire Crimson line performed in good style against a big disadvantage in weight. Beckmeier and Mowry were the stars of Cleveland's defense.

Central and Soldan played a rather colorless game to a 0-0 decision. Soldan was in striking distance of Central's goal at the end of the first, second, and fourth quarters. The Central defense tightened on each occasion and the Red and Black eleven kicked out of danger. At the beginning of the second quarter, Soldan barely missed a touchdown when Schumacher grounded an enemy pass on his own goal line. Soldan's ends showed remarkable speed in getting down on Johanningmeier's punts, and Johnson, of Central was never able to gain more than two or three yards on runbacks.

GEORGETOWN HUMBLES SYRACUSE, 13 TO 7

By the Associated Press.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Georgetown, playing alert, aggressive football, defeated Syracuse, 13 to 7, today.

Georgetown made its scores on two field goals from placement by Bucky O'Neil and a touchdown by Thompson. Syracuse's touchdown was the result of a spectacular 64-yard run by Capt. Vic Hanson.

Greenleaf Wins From Woods in Pocket Tourney

Former Champion Gets High Run of 68 in Scoring 125-60 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—Ralph Greenleaf, New York, former pocket billiard champion, won the first round-robin match here tonight from Arthur Woods of Pawtucket, 125 to 60, beginning a tournament for the world's championship that will be in progress until Nov. 17.

Greenleaf had a high run of 68, made in the third inning of the 17 that were required to run out the string. Woods' high run was nine.

Twenty-two of the country's best known pocket billiard players are entered in the tournament, each playing the other in a 125-point match.

The Tournament Committee announced that Tommy Hueston of Chicago takes the place of Andrew St. Jean in the matches. The Minneapolis star, it was said, is not in form following upon recent tournament play.

Taberski Beats Ponzi.

In the second and final game tonight, Frank Taberski of Schenectady defeated Arthur Ponzi, Philadelphia, 125 to 91 in 15 innings. Taberski had a high run of 70, two points better than Greenleaf's biggest cluster, while Ponzi clicked off one run of 40.

Tomorrow afternoon Erwin Rudolph, Chicago, plays Harold Pindle, Appleton, Wis., and Woods meets Ponzi. At night Pasquale Natalie, Baltimore, plays Charles Harmon, Glendale, L. I., and Thomas Hueston, Chicago, plays Harry Oswald, Pittsburg.

St. Louis 'Frosh' Beat Charleston

Cornell and Drury Star for Billiken Juniors in 19-9 Victory.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHARLESTON, Ill., Nov. 6.—St. Louis University Freshmen eleven smashed through Charleston for three touchdowns and a last half victory 19-9 here today.

The first half witnessed a line attack by the Charleston team, which took St. Louis by surprise and accounted for nine points, the first scored against the visitors this season.

Fumbles ended two St. Louis marches in the opening quarter and shortly after the second period started another one gave Charleston the ball on St. Louis' 20-yard line. Fullback Sanders scored the touchdown after Cremer had reeled off 15 yards. Fenoglio drop-kicked for the extra point. Another fumble gave Charleston the ball on St. Louis' 40-yard line, a few moments later, but the drive for touchdown was halted on the 4-yard line. When Flynn attempted to kick out from behind his goal, he juggled the ball, and was downed for a safety.

St. Louis opened the last half with a rush and in four minutes had a touchdown. Cornell, fullback, carried the ball for practically every gain and went over for the score. A place kick for point after touchdown was blocked. On an exchange of punts, Flynn, St. Louis quarter, returned the ball 40 yards to Charleston's 25-yard line. Again Cornell smashed it over.

Flynn opened the last period by punting to Gilbert, Charleston safety man, and the ball got by him. The umpire ruled he had touched it and in the meantime Drury, St. Louis end, climaxed a fine afternoon's performance by grabbing it and galloping 35 yards for a touchdown. Purilla place-kicked the extra point.

NOTRE DAME STAR IN HOSPITAL, IS IN CRITICAL CONDITION

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 6.—Arthur Parisien, Notre Dame star forward passer, injured in the first quarter of today's game with Indiana, was taken to St. Joseph's hospital here where it was said his heart had been affected by the injury and that his condition was critical. The exact nature of the injury could not be immediately determined.

Officials at the university said tonight that Parisien had apparently been hurt in the ribs which were probably affecting the blood circulation.

TWO FIELD GOALS WIN FOR NEW YORK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—New York University's undefeated eleven, whose powerful attack had scored many touchdowns against six opponents, was held in check today by an equally powerful Carnegie Tech line, but the home eleven triumphed, 6 to 0, by virtue of two placement goals by Halfback Kenneth Strong.

England Defeats Ireland.

BELFAST, Ireland, Nov. 6.—England defeated Ireland by 3 goals to 0 in an amateur international soccer match today.

MICHIGAN STATE IS EASY WINNER IN TILT WITH CENTRE COLLEGE

By the Associated Press.

EAST LANSING, Mich., Nov. 6.—The light Centre College team was battered to 42 to 14 defeat today by a much heavier Michigan State College eleven. It was Centre's worst defeat of the year and the highest score State has made this season.

Centre scored a touchdown in the first period on a blocked punt but crumbled in the following periods as the State backs ploughed through or passed almost at will.

MISSOURI LOSES TO OKLAHOMA, 10-7

er there was truth or chiding in his boast.

Certain it is that Potts apparently made every effort to find a mate to whom to throw the ball and failing, in sheer desperation, with no other resource started to run with the ball. If it was a play premediated Frank Potts should take to the stage when he finishes his college career. He's an actor of merit.

But They Couldn't Go.

That play drilled the needed morale into the Sooner machine although there had been no lack of "Oklahoma fights" before. But the Sooners were rarin' when they came back for the second half and the third quarter found them booting a place kick from somewhere around the 37-yard line. That was the winning play.

In the fourth quarter Missouri got a passing and rushing offensive under way that carried the ball to within the shadows of the Sooner goal posts. It was Missouri's ball, first down and the goal to go—they couldn't go.

With four yards to travel to reach the goal on the fourth down the Tigers, spurning a kick that would have given them a tie, placed their faith in a forward pass. That pass seemed destined to win because there was a Tiger eligible almost on the goal line and the ball descending into his arms. But an alert Oklahoman leaped just in time, battling the ball to the ground just as it semed the Missourian was about to make the catch and win the game.

That was the end, although there were remaining thrills as the Tigers, taking Oklahoma's punt, started a series of passes that had the great Oklahoma stands praying for the timer's final gun.

Maryland Gives Yale a Surprise, Winning, 15 to 0

Eli in Vain Rushes in First-String Men in Final Quarter.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 6.—Maryland scored its first victory over Yale in the brief history of their gridiron rivalry today, 15 to 0.

Tumbling Tad Jones' second string players helter skelter with a brilliant running and passing attack, the Maryland eleven administered to the battered Eli forces their defeat in successive weeks. The Blue warriors, outgeneraled and outrushed, made a belated attempt to turn the tide in the final quarter after Foote, McGonigle and Ordway had been rushed into the lineup. But the Yale offensive lacked decisiveness and Maryland easily broke up a desperate aerial drive by which the Northern team hoped to avert a shutout.

While Yale supporters took comfort in the fact that their first string men were withheld for the Princeton struggle next Saturday, the victory of the supposedly weak Maryland team nevertheless was accepted as one of the season's outstanding surprises. The Blue defense apparently was readily punctured by the forward pass, the Southerners completing a big majority of their thrusts through the sky.

Captain Stevens, hero of the Maryland triumph, scored all the Southern elevens points, sprinting through broken fields for two touchdowns and dropkicking a field goal.

ST. CHARLES BEATS KIRKWOOD TEAM, 6-0

St. Charles High defeated Kirkwood in a County League contest yesterday, 6 to 0. Achepohl, St. Charles halfback, ran 20 yards from a punt formation in the first quarter for the only score.

Hutton, playing his first game, starred at fullback for the winners, along with Capt. Bruere, center. It was homecoming day for the St. Charles alumni.

LATONIA CUP AT 2 1-4 MILES, IS WON BY THE FILLY PERCUSSION

VICTOR BEATS HELEN'S BABE TWO LENGTHS

Winner, Third Choice in the Mutuels, Paid $19.60 for Each $2 Bet—Rothermel a Disappointment.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LATONIA, Ky., Nov. 6.—The colors of A. D. Hancock, well-known Kentucky breeder and owner, flashed past the judges' winner when Percussion, a 3-year-old filly by Omar Khayyam-Martha Snow, bred by her owner at Claiborne, accounted for the twenty-first running of the Latonia Cup, at two miles and a quarter, the feature of the closing day's program at Latonia this afternoon.

Two lengths back of the winner, H. P. Headley's Helen's Babe took second money, finishing 12 lengths in advance of Alloy, the third horse.

Liberty, Rothermel, Lady Von and Drowsy Waters, comprising the remainder of the field, finished in the order named all pretty well strung out.

The race was decided over a slow track, the winner negotiating the distance in 3:56 3-5. The winner was third choice in the betting and paid $19.60 for each two dollars. Her victory netted owner Hancock $7530, in addition to a trophy, the presentation of which was made by J. N. Camden, president of the Kentucky Jockey Club, and owner of Rothermel.

Rothermel went to the post a slight favorite over Helen's Babe, which was a good second choice. The pace in the race was slow.

Helen's Babe Sets the Pace.

Helen's Babe jumped into the lead at the start, and led by a good margin to the final sixteenth, where Percussion came along and, racing here into submission in the last sixteenth, went on to win easily.

Percussion, given a waiting ride by L. Craver, ran an excellent race. Laying off the pace, for the first mile and a half, she moved up in the final half mile and proved her superior staying ability before the end was reached. Alloy was a trailer for the first two miles when then moved up and was an easy third.

Webster Beats Maplewood, 33-0

Conquest Gives Victors Undisputed Lead in County League Race.

Webster smothered Maplewood, 33 to 0, yesterday, on Maplewood field, to go into undisputed possession of first place in the County High Schoo League football race, as Kirkwood was losing to St. Charles. Webster scored five touchdowns during the game, the scores being made in the first and last quarters.

Sample, Greene and Harvey Miller starred in the Webster backfield, all three making sensational end runs at various times in the game. In the last quarter Greene intercepted a pass and ran 60 yards for Webster's last touchdown. Maplewood, as was expected, was not strong. Senn, Webster left tackle, starred both on the attack and defense.

Webster pushed over three touchdowns in the opening period, and when two were added in the fourth quarter Coach Roberts sent in the reserves, in order to keep the first-string players fresh for the game with the Stivers High School of Dayton, O., at Dayton next week.

40-YARD DROP KICK WINS FOR PENN, 3-0

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—A drop kick from the 40-yard line in the first period by Paul Scull gave a victory to Pennsylvania over Penn State College today, 3 to 0.

State College, with a fighting team that lacked offensive drive, carried the ball within one yard of a touchdown in the second period, only to have Pennsylvania put forth one of its old stands and take the ball on downs.

After the game it developed that Scull severely injured a leg.

Jack of Clubs, away slowly, worked his way up on the outside and, responding gamely to urging, collared a good speed leaders down midway home stretch and just lasted to stall off Rock Thorn. The latter, a keen factor from the start, came again and was fast overtaking winner. Policeman Day saved up enough for a mighty belt on well when put to drive. Wandering Minstrel and Huffy were used up racing at a fast clip in the early stages. Valaday was away slowly. Miss Relvue tired.

Scratched: Jack of Clubs, straight $14.30, place $7.70, show $5.40; Rock Thorn, place $10.90, show $6.50; Policeman Day, show $6.50.

Dolan, away well, ran upon the heels of Lassa going to the first turn and almost went downed quickly after racing well up, responded readily and wearing leaders down was under pressure to the end. Easy Money, away slowly, improved position fast and finished strongly. Poly, favorably placed, responded when asked and finished strongly. Point Breeze finished resolutely. Grierson was used up racing with Lassa and tired. Wee Breeze failed to race wide all the way, tired from his efforts to get the contention. Alloy broke slow.

$2 mutuels paid: Dolan $11.50 straight, $8.50 place, $5 show; Easy Money, $20 6-5 place, $11 show. Poly, $8 show.

Marcellus, away with the first flight, raced close to the pace from the outset, and gaining the lead at the furlong pole, held on with good courage to outgame Dancer Signal. Later lacked early foot, gained rapidly the last half mile and finishing with a rush, just missed. Grand Boy came through on the inside in stretch run and closed fast. Martingale handled his impost well and showed a good effort. Miss Rosedale faltered when the real issue came. Upton stopped all effort to unite a contending move. Fleeting Time broke flat footed.

$2 mutuels paid: Marcellus, straight $8, place $3.80, show $2.50; Danger Signal, place $5.60, show $3.50; Grand Boy, show $2.40.

aRancocas Stable entry. bCrenettree Stable entry. cH. G. Bedwell entry.

Cudgeller, away well, raced well up in early stages, came to outside of his stablemate entering home stretch and, taking the lead with a rush, drew away without pressure the last sixteenth, displaying early speed. Rolls Royce responded quickly to submission, but tired fast the last furlong and had to be urged to the limit. Lodina finished with a high burst of speed the last quarter. Rolls Royce weakened in the final half mile. Nida made more or less of a bid for trouble. Sport Trail quit. Sabine broke well, but dropped back immediately. Crystal Domino raced wide all the way.

Taps outrun her field to the first turn and, opening up a good lead, raced under slight restraint until reaching the furlong where Fator shook her up to resist the fast-going Forever and Ever. Latter raced in hand until rounding the far turn and finished with a good effort. Cogwheel, a late bid, was well up in a long drive. Salta tired when the real issue came. Rejuvenation was repeatedly taken up going to first stretch and weakened when put to a drive. Crossfire showed a bid for the leak but stopped fast. Fire Clock stopped in contending position.

$2 mutuels paid: Taps, straight $3.60, place $3.10, show $2.90; Forever and Ever, place $8.50, show $5.60; Cogwheel, show $6.

SG. W. Foreman entry.

King O'Neill II, hurried in early racing, moved up to leaders gradually and, closing with splendid courage, wore down the leaders and, holding on gamely after assuming command, just lasted. Tomahawk IV, slow to get going, closed with a rush and was fast overtaking winner. Catrom, prominent in the early racing, was in close quarters rounding the far turn, came to outside and closed fastest of the old Gatewood fought it out stubbornly. Corinth tired after racing Hec into defeat. Sir Leonid closed a bid gap.

$2 mutuels paid: King O'Neill II, straight $7.10, place $4, show $3.40; Tomahawk IV, place $13.50, show $6.70. Catrom, show $4.

Bud Harnett Runs Back Opening Kickoff for 60 Yards.

Washington University's freshmen squad gave rise to roseate hopes for the 1927 season when they ran over the Grinnell frosh, 42 to 0, at Francis Field yesterday afternoon in a game for the benefit of the Walter Camp Memorial fund.

The Bear yearlings smeared the visitors' attack and themselves scored 20 first downs and six touchdowns, counting in every quarter

Passes were interspersed throughout with the running attack, six heaves out of seven being completed.

Bud Harnett, former High School League player, made the best run of the game, taking the opening kickoff and dashing 60 yards through a broken field. Grinnell scored only four first downs.

Score by quarters:

Dia Novia, hard hustled to keep up first part, saved much ground lost where he slipped through between the two leaders and, finishing strongly, raced into lead after 50 yards. Society Scandal began fast, lost ground in first three furlongs, but drew away opening up on the stretch, tiring last sixteenth. Dolly S. finished fast on inside. Cecile forced pace on inside first quarter, appeared beaten last turn, but came again only to tire in last furlong. Xcellenza lost much ground. Darting Ways quit at end of very wide journey.

$2 mutuels paid: Dia Novia, straight $8.60, place $4.40, show $4; Society Scandal, place $12, show $8.60.

Peacemaker raced far back in first half mile, but began moving up leaving back stretch after being forced wide last turn, finished with a rush and was ready to drive away. Vernon racing improved, was hustled into lead, saved ground and hung on gamely well the final furlong. Cloud Idoliser, after showing early speed, had no bear tiring last furlong. Jessie Belle quit after reaching the stretch. Henry Sommers broke slowly. Azure was weakly handled and had no speed.

Marconi	115	3	2	4d		4d	4	4	R. Barnett	3.45

Old Ship, away fast, racing in best form, raced clear of opposition quickly, saving ground going around turns and after opening up Huntsman, a factor in the final furlong. Huntsman was hustled into contention on outside leaving back stretch, made a gallant effort to reach the leader, but began tiring after reaching stretch. Sir Peter was taken back after first quarter and never steadily thereafter. Marconi was not a serious factor after a good first quarter.

Percussion, favored by her light weight and given a smur ride, moved up steadily after being restrained for a mile and three quarters and came away with ease in the stretch. Helen's Babe showed good speed and raced restrained for a mile and three quarters and was under pressure thereafter. Alloy moved up gradually and was going gamely at the end. Liberty made a threatening move after a mile and half but failed badly in last quarter. Rothermel was poorly ridden and showed dull performance and Drowsy Waters faltered after racing a mile and a quarter. Lady Von was done after going a mile and a quarter.

McBride Ties St. L. U. High 7-7; A. Kelly Stars

Little Billikens Score First but Fail to Hold Advantage.

McBride and St. Louis University High battled to a 7 to 7 tie in a Preparatory School League football game yesterday on the St. Louis University Field. Both touchdowns came in the second quarter. Amby Kelley was the outstanding star of the game, being responsible for McBride's lone touchdown, and he was instrumental in gaining at least 70 yards for Kamp's eleven. The attendance was estimated at 1000.

The first quarter was filled with exchanges of punts, until the last few minutes when the Billiken Juniors worked to McBride's 16-yard line, aided by a 30-yard pass from Hemp to Dawson. Arink carried the ball over on a plunge and Dawson made the try for the extra point good by drop-kicking.

McBride wasted little time in evening up the score, Koehler returning the kick-off to the middle of the field. A series of line plunges, in which the heaviest burden of ball-toting fell to Amby Kelley, saw McBride carry the ball to the young Billiken's five-yard line, from where Kelley went over. Doherty made his place-kick good for the extra point.

Western Defeats Country Day, 20-6

Victory Is Fourth Straight for Alton Eleven in Preparatory League.

Western Military Academy continued its march to the Preparatory School League football championship defeating Country Day on the local field yesterday afternoon, 20 to 6. It was the fourth straight victory for Western. The Cadets had a weight advantage over their Country Day rivals.

The Alton eleven took the lead in the first period, when Fullback Borah kicked two field goals, one from the 21-yard line and the other from the 29. Borah also was responsible for the remaining points for his team, scoring a touchdown in each the second and fourth periods and kicking the goals. Captain Crochett smashed the line for 9 yards for Country Day's only points in the final quarter.

Quarterback Joint was one of the stars for the Western eleven.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 6. — Harvard's dream of a return to "Big Three" championship heights this year was shattered today by Princeton's alert, aggressive eleven in a bitterly fought and raggedly played battle. The Tigers, staging a come-back, clawed their way to victory by taking advantage of the Crimson's misplays and rolling up a margin of 12 to 0 that was composed of a touchdown, a safety and a field goal.

Most of the vast and colorful crowd of 55,000 spectators, jamming Harvard stadium came in expectation of seeing the rejuvenated Crimson forces avenge the sting of the overwhelming setbacks at the hands of Old Nassau. Instead they saw the Cambridge eleven, in spite of a gallant stand, beaten largely by its own mistakes—"breaks" which a fiercely charging Tiger attack was quick to capitalize.

Crippled Stars Shine.

It wasn't a rout, as Harvard's last two games against Princeton have been, but it was a stunning setback nevertheless to the forward surge of Crimson hopes of a return to gridiron greatness. For Princeton it was a sensational return to winning form, a victory that starts the Tigers on the road to successful defense of the "Big Three" crown with Yale to be met next Saturday in the decisive test.

The Tiger stars who have been out of action most of the season, Sam Caulkins and Jake Slagle, returned to play leading roles in bringing about the downfall of the Crimson. Caulkins, on a brilliant 13-yard end run, following a triple pass, scored the touchdown that put Princeton in front in the second quarter while Slagle, constant a triple threat as he ran, passed and kicked with dazzling skill, added a field goal in the final quarter for the concluding Tiger points.

A safety in the second quarter, which when Clem Coady, Harvard captain, was tackled behind his own goal as he recovered a bad punt, gave Princeton its remaining two points, but the Tigers threatened on several other occasions with versatile drives into Harvard territory led by Slagle. The Indians were on Harvard's 7-yard line, threatening another touchdown, when the final whistle blew and sent a frenzied throng of Tiger rooters into a wild demonstration on the gridiron.

DOUGLASS SCORES 7 TO 6 VICTORY OVER SUMNER TEAM

Dawson's touchdown and Ferguson's kick enabled the Douglass High School of Evansville, Ind., to defeat the Sumner High School football team yesterday by a score of 7 to 6 at the Stars' Park.

Baker's broken field runs were the features for the local eleven, while Dawson, captain of the visiting team, starred for Evansville.

John Shelburne, all-America fullback for Dartmouth in 1920, coached the Douglass squad and Lewis and Beckett were the coaches for Sumner.

THE HUNTING - - CALL - - By ALEC MERMOD

DUCK SHOOTERS are still being disappointed on account of high water, although there are plenty of ducks in the country. Quail shooters are getting their dogs in condition and are looking forward to the opening day, Nov. 10.

Quail shooting should be good this season, for reports are coming in from Illinois and Missouri, stating that there are plenty of birds.

We had a dry hatching season, and, as last winter was mild, we should have a splendid crop.

While the exceedingly dry summer and early fall drove the birds from the uplands to the creek bottoms, the hard rains last month drove them back to the high ground.

Pleasure Is Lost.

Bottom shooting in cornfields is never very satisfactory, for the dogs are out of sight most of the time and one loses the pleasure of watching them work, besides the bottom lands always have a heavy growth of cockle burrs which bother a setter dog to such an extent he cannot do his best.

Notwithstanding the fact that birds are plentiful, the early shooting is going to be disappointing on account of the heavy growth which is still green. We need some killing frosts or an early snow.

As usual, a good many hunters wanting dogs have put off getting one and there will be a scarcity of good dogs.

Bad Year for Dogs.

Last year was a hard one on members of the canine family, for distemper and rabies worked havoc in a great many kennels.

We understand that Claude Oakley, from Mississippi, will be here this morning with a number of good pointers and setters to show to those who may be interested. He is coming at the suggestion of Louis Nicolaus, Boatmen's Bank Building, who is one of our prominent sportsmen.

Dr. T. L. Pepperling has returned from South Dakota, where he had some splendid sport among the pheasants.

The doctor did his shooting at Redfield, Spink County, which is in the heart of the pheasant country. The nonresident shooting license costs $25 and permits killing seven birds per day, but only two hens may be killed.

Hunters Turned Away.

Attached to this license are five tags, each one permitting shipping out of the State 10 birds.

Dr. Pepperling arrived at Redfield the day before the season opened and says that there were over 100 shooters turned away from the two hotels, so it is easy to imagine what a bombardment took place the next day, and it is hard to imagine anyone getting any birds, but notwithstanding the number of shooters there were birds enough for everyone.

We are told that in 1915 150 pairs of pheasants were liberated in three counties, and that they thrived and multiplied to such an extent that, in 1924, 300,000 cock pheasants were killed. This sounds like a fairy tale, but the Game Department keeps a very accurate account, and we believe the statement is about right.

Pheasants and Quail.

The writer has contended that pheasants should not be introduced in a quail or chicken country, and to prove that this contention is right, we have the fact before us that prior to the introduction of the pheasant in South Dakota prairie chickens were plentiful, and now there are no chickens left where the pheasants are numerous.

The farmers in Dakota have found that the pheasant is helping him to a great extent, for during the spring and summer they destroy millions of bugs and worms, so that these birds are protected during the closed season.

Wild Turkey.

This noble bird, once so plentiful in the Middle West, is fast becoming extinct and in a few years they will be a varity.

They are still to be found in our rough Ozark country, but each year are getting more scarce.

Fifty years ago they were plentiful anywhere along the Meramec River from Fenton up and many were killed in the hills on the site of the new suburb, Osage Hills. Forty-four years ago the writer killed his first turkey near the corner of Manchester and Geyer roads, evidently it was a stray bird stopping for a rest, for it was the only one even seen so far away from the river.

Two Methods Used.

There are two methods used in shooting wild turkey, one, which is not that of a sportsman, is to locate a roost, then arrive there before daylight ready to begin the slaughter as soon as it was light enough to see. Sometimes this is done by moonlight.

This method was more commonly used in the swamp country of Arkansas than in Missouri.

The more sportsman-like way is to scatter the flock from the roost, then hide oneself nearby and call the turkeys to you. However, a hunter must be an expert caller to meet with any success for the turkey is the most wary of any of our game birds and the first false note will drive them away.

In Arkansas gobblers were allowed to be killed in the late spring during the mating season when they were anxious for the mating call of the hen and were very easily called within range.

The season opens in Missouri Dec. 1, but many young birds are killed all through October and November before they have matured enough to learn to take care of themselves.

There is some talk of importing turkey from Mexico to replenish our stock, but unless the public can be kept from killing them during the closed season it is hardly worth the attempt.

Detroit U. Defeats Billiken Eleven, 28 to 7

ball was called back for offside. Connell and Maloney once more took turns and the latter took it over from the three-yard line. Flannery kicked goal.

With the resumption of play, Detroit's power manifested itself again and the Titans progressed to the one-foot line. Maloney went over and Flannery kicked goal. This ended Detroit's scoring for the half.

Detroit registered its first of two fourth period scores following a missed place kick by Captain Flannery. St. Louis rushed to the 41-yard line. Then Jordan tried passing and Murphy of Detroit intercepted on the Titan 35-yard mark. Janosky tore off 48 yards behing high-class blocking. Connell, Janosky and Murphy took turns at rushing and Detroit climbed to the one-yard line. Three times the Billilkens delayed progress but on the fourth down, Murphy went over from the one foot line.

Detroit scored again after Murphy had caught a punt on the 42-yard line without coming back a yard. On the first play, a delayed double pass which ended with a forward heave, Connell to Phelan. Detroit made 46 yards. Janosky, on the second play, circled right end for a touchdown. Once more, the blockers did the work. Flannery kicked goal. It was the final point of the day. Detroit was headed goalward again when time was called.

United States Beats Canada in Soccer Tilt, 6-2

Dominion Eleven Falters After Gaining 2-Goal Advantage Early in Game.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The United States soccer eleven defeated the team representing Dominion of Canada Football Association at Ebbetts Field, Brooklyn, this afternoon, 6 goals to 2, before 3000 spectators.

The Dominion kickers took advantage of the opening minute before the United States' defense had a chance to get set and netted when Galloway, former Boston booter, flicked the leather past Kerron on a pass from Baillie. Canada increased this lead at 24 minutes when Graham, observing the center half back in a fine scoring position, passed the leather back toward midfield and Williams made good with a rocket-like drive.

Just before the interval was reached a fierce scrimmage took place in front of the Canadian goal and Brown jostled Kennaway over the latter's goal line for the initial tally of United States.

After the restart, Smith, inside forward of Uncle Sam's team, was shifted to outside right and Burness took the inside position. This move worked wonders and after seven minutes Florie drove the leather at Kennaway, but the shot was too hard to handle and Aulde equalized on the rebound. Three minutes later, Florie put the Yankee eleven in the lead with the aid of Auld and Moorhouse.

Auld Plays Sensationally.

Marshall made good from a free kick just outside of the penalty area after 15 minutes and 10 minutes later Brown tallied again, making the score read 5 goals to 2.

Auld, who played a sensational brand of soccer in the second period, contributed the final goal for the United States team when Florie and Moorehouse worked the triangle game until the leather was set for the inside left, who ended the play with a well placed drive.

After the third goal registered for the United States the Canadians seemed to break up and their beautiful combination work which was conspicuous in the first half gave way to a kick and rush type of play.

The lineups:

United States (6).	Canada (2).
Kerr	Goal Kennaway
Marshall	Right fullback Barnes
Wilson	Left fullback Dinnie
Morris	Right halfback Clulow
Carnihan	Center halfback Williams
Burness	Outside right Faulkner
Smith	Inside right Galloway
Brown	Center forward Graham

Referee—C. Creighton.

Score at half time—Canada 2, United States 1. Goals scored for Canada—Galloway and Williams. Goals scored for United States—Brown (2), Auld (2), Florie and Marshall.

BENLD HIGH DEFEATS STAUNTON TEAM, 20-0

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BENLD, Ill., Nov. 6.—Benld High School, which is on the main highway leading to the state championship, traveled nearer its destination when the highly rated Staunton High School was defeated, 20 to 0, today. Saracco's 35-yard run brought the first touchdown in the second quarter; a pass, Saracco to Pentland, was responsible for the second and another forward, Saracco to Tenikat, scored the third. The first two touchdowns came in the second quarter, while the third one was in the fourth. Benld made 33 first downs and Staunton made three. The Benld backfield of Matarozzi, Rigodei, Saracco and Tenikat starred.

The Benld professional team will play Spring Valley tomorrow afternoon. Spring Valley is one of the leading pro teams of the State.

"HAIR-GROOM"

Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groom" is a dignified combing cream which costs only few cents a jar at any drugstore. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions. Even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; also helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair.

ABAD WINS DECISION OVER CANZONERI IN 10-ROUND CONTEST

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Davey Abad, Panama, won a 10-round decision over Tony Canzoneri, New York bantam, here tonight. Abad holds the flyweight and bantamweight championships of South America. He weighted 119½, Canzoneri 120½.

Eddie Anderson, Wyoming cowboy, knocked out Johnny Brown, English featherweight, in the first round of a 10-round match with a right smash to the heart. Anderson weighed 128, Brown 124.

NELSON AND STEIN WIN SPECIAL MATCH

Roy Nelson and Otto Stein Jr. defeated J. Pflueger and O. Whitehead in the final five games of their 10-game match, total pins to count, on the Washington alleys last night.

The winners had to shoot sensational pins in order to take the match, with Stein taking the honors for high single game with 250 in the fourth while Whitehead was second with 242 in the fifth.

The scores follow:

Roy Nelson—	213	188	207	212	221	—1041
Otto Stein Jr.—	212	182	213	250	181	—1038
J. Pflueger—	177	215	201	215	224	—1032
O. Whitehead—	218	186	190	194	242	—1030

INDIVIDUAL BOWLING LEAGUE WILL OPEN

The Greater Saint Louis Individual League will start play Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the Washington Alleys, with 12 of the city's star bowlers in action. Matches will also be rolled on Wednesday and Tuesday of each week.

This week's schedule follows:

Tuesday: E. E. Grubb vs. Joe Monnig; L. K. Arthur vs. Geo. Mueninghaus.

Wednesday: Wooster Lambert vs. A. J. Beckler; C. Sottrell vs. G. Pierson.

Thursday: Pat Spencer vs E. A. Schaefer; Ed. Apple vs. Hap Vierheller.

Hawkeyes Set Record.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 6.—Setting a new record for the Iowa cross-country run, the Hawkeye harriers defeated Minnesota, 21 to 35, today.

Bricklayers, Who Play Here Today, Chicago's Best Club

Addition of Young Stars, MacLean, Walker and Scott, Makes Scotch-Bred Eleven Serious Contender for Inter-City Soccer Championship

"The Bricklayers are the strongest Chicago Club I have ever seen," said Manager Billy Foley of the Ben Millers after he had witnessed the defeat of his own team last Sunday. "They will certainly make the White Banners or any other St. Louis team hustle.

Today the Bricklayers will appear at Sportsman's Park in the chief attraction of the intercity soccer league double-header. They will oppose the White Banners of this city and upon the outcome depends the league leadership. The St. Louis team holds the top rung now with two victories and no defeats but the Brickies have won one game and tied another so that only one point separates the two.

In the opening game of the program, the Wellstons, Tate Brady's fast eleven, will oppose the Ben Millers. The other St. Louis club, the Raticans, will play in Chicago against the Spartas.

Brickies Better Than Ever.

In all the years that St. Louis soccer teams have been battling with Chicago clubs, the Bricklayers have given the locals the toughest opposition. Others have scored an occasional victory over the local clubs but the Brickies alone stood up year after year as a dangerous foe. Now, with the acquisition of several outstanding young players, among them Tom Scott, formerly of the Vespers of this city, Willie MacLean and Bobby Walker, the Brickies are a more powerful aggregation than ever before.

An interesting feature about the visitors is the fact that they are almost entirely composed of journeymen bricklayers. Their actions on the field are marked by a real esprit de corps, something rarely found in foreign-born clubs. They know what to expect from St. Louis football and they must be considered Chicago's chief contender for the Western Soccer Cup Association championship.

Tom Scott, the former Vesper player, will be at center halfback, playing against his old teammates. George Cant and Bill Berryman are the Brickies' fullbacks. Pete Quinn, the former center halfback, has been shifted to center forward.

Willie MacLean is regarded as one of the cleverest dribblers in the Chicago district, although he is still a youngster. He plays outside right.

Brady's Team Has Promise.

The lineup of the White Banners looks much the same as it did last season, but the team has been strengthened in two spots. Gene Thumm, at inside right, the former German Sports Club star, has shown real talent, and McKenna, at right fullback, is a very promising prospect. Mike Delaney, in goal, is younger than La Barge, although perhaps not any better in stopping enemy shots.

The first game will start at 2 o'clock.

A Knothole Gang is being formed by the professional league through which youngsters will be admitted to the games free. The free gate will not be in operation today.

The Lineups.

Fort Sheridan to Play Jefferson Barracks Today

Gridiron Contest May Decide Championship of Sixth Army Corps Area.

Lieut. Guy M. Kinman's Jefferson Barracks army post gridiron eleven plays its biggest game of the season this afternoon on the barracks field against the Fort Sheridan eleven from Chicago. Starting time is 2:30 o'clock.

If the visitors win they will be champions of the Sixth Army Corps area, and if the locals are victorious, a game with the Scott Field aviators will decide the area title.

The visitors will be slight favorites, but the barracks players have shown good football in their recent games. Private Harris Webster is rated a heady quarterback and is probably the best open field runner in independent football circles in this vicinity.

Lieut. Stephenson, at right halfback, played on the West Point squad a few years ago. Lieut. Harbold formerly played on Kentucky State and Private Anaila, an Indian, is an ex-member of the Haskell team.

Lieut. Kinman has been assisted in his coaching work by Capt. Ralph Slate and Lieut. Jack Miller. Admission to today's game will be 50 cents.

MY LIFE AND RING CAREER — By Gene Tunney

Six Months in Woods, Calculated to Harden Gene, Put Fat on Him

Outing Served to Harden His Hands and Increase Their Size, as Well as to Lend Serenity to His Mind.

By Gene Tunney.
World's Heavyweight Champion.
CHAPTER XIII.

MY HANDS occasionally gave me trouble. I have told how I corrected my punching faults and that this study served to lessen the danger of broken knuckles. However, I sometimes lapsed into hitting habits that threatened to dull my pugilistic weapons.

A perusal of my record for three years prior to my title-winning bout with Battling Levinsky will show that I scored knockouts in about 90 per cent of my engagements. At one time my string of consecutive knockouts reached the somewhat pretentious figure of 11. I believe that Stanley Ketchel held the record, having delivered 21 knockouts while he was a buss boy in Butte, Mont.

All of my opponents during this run of knockouts were, if not great fighters, at least somewhat more experienced than I and strong, well conditioned athletes. When I struck any of them, however, with my dependable right hand, the evening's entertainment ended then and there.

During this "run," and after each contest, I was forced to lay off of my gymnasium work for a period of weeks to nurse my hands back into condition. They seemed as fragile as egg shells. Along about October, 1920, they were in such sorry shape that I could not punch at all effectively and three opponents went the distance with me. In addition to my hands crumpling, I suffered no little pain when I hit. I consulted specialist after specialist. I baked my hands. I bathed them in all sorts of ill-smelling concoctions, some of which would put to shame the contents of the witches' cauldron in "Macbeth." However, instead of repeating those Shakspearean lines, "When shall we three meet ayain?" I would look sorrowfully at my fists and ask, "When shall we three fight again—particularly you two?"

Six Months in the Woods.

VETERAN boxers had various and sundry remedies to suggest. Finally I decided to invade the Maine woods. I quit the ring for six months to wield an ax. I thought that exercise would prove beneficial to my hands and I also longed to get close to nature and again search my innermost mind to see if I indeed had what I call "a championship mind."

There is a "champion" in each and every one of us. In each one of us something dominates. Maybe it is an emotion, a trait or a characteristic, such as generosity, industry or sincerity. Or, unhappily, possibly it is greed, avarice, vice or a yellow streak. The biggest battle of all, the history of morals teaches us, is within the self rather than without. Just what my "championship mind" was and how good it was, was the thing that I tried to ascertain by introspection while I nursed my "egg-shell" knuckles in the woods.

On the success of my pilgrimage to the wilds of Maine depended my future as a pugilist. On the thoroughness with which I weighed and analyzed my character, my emotions, my desires and my whole spiritual being, depended my future as a man.

For six months, then, I remained in the woods. My life was almost that of a Thoreau. I, too, chanced on a little lake that became my "Walden." I, too, studied the woods, the birds, the creatures of the outdoors, and I grew to love the songs of the dawn and the chants of the wild creatures at sunset. Meanwhile, my hands grew larger, stronger. My mind attained an even more soothing serenity than ever before.

GENE TUNNEY, the boxer, and Gene Tunney, the man, often held serious conversations together. I met with this temptation up there: I wanted to linger forever among the trees, for my whole nature responded to the call of the countryside. But I felt that I had a mission in active life. I put away the axe and went to New York City. There I instructed get ring work for me. My hands were now as calloused as the business end of a steam shovel.

The experts had forgotten me. When it was announced that I was to box Soldier Jones of Canada in a preliminary to the Jack Dempsey-Georges Carpentier contest at Boyle's Thirty Acres, the news was barely good for two or three agate lines in the press—and not one of those lines was any too complimentary to me.

My showing, I am sure, was the most miserable in my entire career. I was awfully fat—the result of having eaten the lumber-camp and woodsman's heavy victuals with no time to train it off. I think I weighed 188 pounds that day, and that was 18 pounds too much for me at that stage of my career.

I whipped Jones, well enough, knocking him out in the eighth round, but I was a dub. I was woefully slow. My punches lacked the "plop" that spells fistic art My judgment of distance was atrocious.

Next day, buried away in the columns written about the "Battle of the Century" could be found a few lines in each metropolitan daily:

"Gene Tunney, light heavyweight champion of the A. E. F., and regarded, not so many months ago, as a most promising boxer, stopped Soldier Jones in the eighth round of the semi-final. It was Tunney's first appearance in some time, and probably marked his last bow. He has lost all the form which once stamped him as a comer."

Was I discouraged? I will tell you about it in the next chapter

Kennedy Wins Race.

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 6.—Ohio State won the annual triangular cross-country race against Illinois and Michigan today by placing five men in the first 10 to finish. Ohio State scored 27 points, Michigan 37 and Illinois 62. W. H. Kennedy, Ohio veteran, led from start to finish, covering the 4.9 miles in 26m 51s.

WEST VIRGINIA BOY ENABLES PITTSBURG TO BEAT MOUNTAINEERS

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 6.—A West Virginia boy, Gilbert L. Welch, of Parkersburg, playing left halfback for the University of Pittsburg, turned back, almost single-handed, the West Virginia University football eleven here today. The Panthers beat the Mountaineers 17 to 7, for the third time in as many years.

Welch pushed across two touchdowns for 12 of the 17 points tallied by the Panthers. After marching down the field on line bucks and end runs, Welch made his first touchdown in the second period. In the waning moments of the final period, he darted 20 yards around right end for his second touchdown, making Pittsburg's victory more certain.

Hardy, West Virginia fullback, starred for the Mountaineers. He scored a touchdown in the third period after Pittsburg had fumbled on her own five-yard line.

BRADLEY TEAM GAINS ITS TWENTY-FIRST SUCCESSIVE VICTORY

By the Associated Press.

DECATUR, Ill., Nov. 6.—Bradley defeated Millikin University here today, 20 to 10, for its twenty-first successive victory. Millikin led at the half, 3-0.

"Red" Bland, Bradley substitute, contributed two of the three touchdowns for the Peoria team. In the third quarter the only two bad punts made by Millikin during the game placed Bradley in position to score. A pass to Decremer followed by an end run by Bland scored the first touchdown. Bland recovered a fumble and heavy plunging through the line scored a second touchdown. Pope carried the ball over.

Marquette Trims Kansas Aggies

Golden Avalanche Wins, 14-0, Over Unbeaten Missouri Valley Team.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 6.—Marquette's Golden Avalanche turned back the invasion of the Kansas Aggies today with a brilliant 14 to 0 victory over the undefeated entrant in the Missouri Valley conference. Only once during the game were the Aggies in a position to score when they worked the ball to their opponent's eight yard line. There Marquette braced and gained possession of the ball on an incompleted pass.

"Infant Industry" Myth Even Alexander Hami... Opposing the Policy of... Bounties — Injusti...

By Paul Y. A...

"OUR SOLEMN FARCE" is the Knollenberg examines the pro... number of the Atlantic Month... strong. A farce which costs Amer... a year is solemn, indeed. It is not a... among those who pay for it.

Republican leaders who are resp... this singularly solemn farce doubtless... Alexander Hamilton quoted against the... has been popular among the protect... who said:

"The continuance of bounties on manufactures long established must almost always be of questionable policy."

The protectionist theory has always stood on three legs. The three legs are: (1) The "infant industry" argument; (2) the "American wage scale" argument, and (3) the "national defense" argument. Calmly and without heat or perspiration, Knollenberg kicks the legs from under it and leaves it sprawling in the dust.

To the first argument, of course, the answer is obvious. Infant industry? It is to laugh! Tell it to the United States Steel Corporation. Tell it to Henry Ford. Tell it to the motion picture industry. Tell it to the typewriter manufacturers, the shoe manufacturers and the manufacturers of agricultural machinery. To hear of such "infants" prompts the old question, "How big do the men grow where you come from?"

The Infant Industry Myth.

"The American infant industry argument," writes Knollenberg, "however sound originally, is today obsolete. Most of the protected American industries have been in existence so long that Hamilton's statute of limitations has run against them. If by this time they cannot stand on their feet unaided there is a strong presumption that the industry is unsuited to the United States.

"Moreover even in the case of new industries the basis for the infant industry argument has ceased to exist. This country today so abounds in capital that investments are sought by American business men in Russia, Germany, South America, China and wherever else profits are in prospect. If an industry in the United States gives reasonable promise of eventual success, ample capital is ready at hand for its development.

"In considering the second, the 'high wage' argument of the protectionist, it should be borne in mind that wages were much higher in the United States than in Europe long before the United States adopted a protective tariff."

In view of the fact that Republican campaign orators for more than 40 years have been "selling" protection to the American people the assumption that protection is responsible for the high standard of American wages, this is interesting news. We have always been told that high wages followed protection. Knollenberg makes it plain, however, that high wages existed first.

"The modern protectionist," he goes on, "disregards this historical fact. According to him, protection has created the high American wage; remove protection and the American wage, together with the high standard of living of the American workman, must fall. . . .

"In claiming that the American manufacturer needs tariff protection to make it possible for him to continue the high American wage scale, the protectionist not only forgets that the higher wage scale existed in the United States before protection, but also disregards the fact that in foreign markets, in which the American farmer and manufacturer are unprotected, they successfully compete with European and Asiatic competitors, despite the higher wages paid their employes."

DEMOCRATS' OPPORTUNITY LIES IN SHOWING UP THE PROTECTIVE TARIFF FARCE

"Infant Industry" Myth Now Unsound, and Even Alexander Hamilton Is Quoted as Opposing the Policy of Long-Continued Bounties — Injustice to Farmers.

By Paul Y. Anderson.

"OUR SOLEMN FARCE" is the title under which Bernhard Knollenberg examines the protective tariff in the November number of the Atlantic Monthly. The adjective is none too strong. A farce which costs American consumers four billion a year is solemn, indeed. It is not a thing to inspire light laughter among those who pay for it.

Republican leaders who are responsible for the continuance of this singularly solemn farce doubtless will be deeply shocked to have Alexander Hamilton quoted against them. The study of history never has been popular among the protectionists. Yet it was Hamilton who said:

"The continuance of bounties on manufactures long established must almost always be of questionable policy."

The protectionist theory has always stood on three legs. The three legs are: (1) The "infant industry" argument; (2) the "American wage scale" argument, and (3) the "national defense" argument. Calmly and without sweat or perspiration, Knollenberg kicks the legs from under it and leaves it sprawling in the dust.

To the first argument, of course, the answer is obvious. Infant industry? It is to laugh! Tell it to the United States Steel Corporation. Tell it to Henry Ford. Tell it to the motion picture industry. Tell it to the typewriter manufacturers, the shoe manufacturers and the manufacturers of agricultural machinery. To hear of such "infants" prompts the old question, "How big do the men grow where you come from?"

The Infant Industry Myth.

"The American infant industry argument," writes Knollenberg, however sound originally, is today obsolete. Most of the protected American industries have been in existence so long that Hamilton's statute of limitations has run against them. If by this time they cannot stand on their feet unaided there is a strong presumption that the industry is unsuited to the United States.

"Moreover even in the case of new industries the basis for the infant industry argument has ceased to exist. This country today so abounds in capital that investments are sought by American business men in Russia, Germany, South America, China and wherever else profits are in prospect. Can an industry in the United States show reasonable promise of eventual success, ample capital is ready at hand for its development.

"In considering the second, the 'high wage' argument of the protectionist, it should be borne in mind that wages were much higher in the United States than in Europe long before the United States adopted a protective tariff." In view of the fact that Republican campaign orators for more than 40 years have been "selling" protection to the American people the assumption that protection is responsible for the high standard of American wages, this is interesting news. We have always been told that high wages followed protection. Knollenberg makes it plain, however, that high wages existed first.

"The modern protectionist," he goes on, "disregards this historical fact. According to him, protection has created the high American wage; remove protection and the American wage, together with the high standard of living of the American workman, must fall. . . .

Typewriters and Shoes.

"In claiming that the American manufacturer needs tariff protection to make it possible for him to continue the high American wage scale, the protectionist not only forgets that the higher wage scale existed in the United States before protection, but also disregards the fact that in foreign markets, in which the American farmer and manufacturer are unprotected, they successfully compete with European and Asiatic competitors, despite the higher wages paid their employes."

For proof of this assertion, the writer need go no further than the outstanding cases—recently set forth in the Post-Dispatch—of American shoe manufacturers and typewriter manufacturers. Neither of them have any protection, either at home or abroad. Neither of them desire any. Yet both have been able, not merely to meet foreign competition at home, but to carry their fight abroad and outsell foreign manufacturers on their own ground. So much so, indeed, that one American typewriter company sells more machines in Europe than all the European companies combined.

"The American cotton planter," Knollenberg points out, "pays his men five times as much as the wage paid to the Chinese coolie or the Egyptian fellah, and yet American cotton dominates the markets of the world. The American automobile manufacturer pays a far higher wage than the German, but American cars outsell German cars wherever automobiles are sold in the world."

"The protectionist fails to explain why the wage scales of Germany and France, which have long had exceedingly high protective tariffs, are below that of England, which has long had free trade. He fails to explain how it comes about that the protective tariff makes it possible for the American workman to pull himself up by his own boot straps. Since no explanation is given, presumably none exists. * * *

"Unbiased students of the wage question hold that the high wage scale in America results from the greater productivity of the American workman; that so long, and only so long, as this is maintained, will the American wage scale exceed that of Europe; and that the protective tariff, by artificially diverting labor into fields less productive than those in which it would naturally be employed, tends, on the whole, not to raise, but to lower, the American wage scale."

Of course, he adds, it is not contended that American workmen are more industrious than those of Europe. It is simply pointed out that our natural resources are ampler and better developed, our machinery is more efficient, our industrial management is abler, and our workmen are more alert. This is not a mere patriotic boast of the sort uttered from flag-draped platforms. It is, on the contrary, well known that in 1924 the production of coal per miner was, in the United States, 734 tons per man; in Great Britain, 246 tons per man; in Germany, 234 tons per man, and in France, 167 tons per man.

That would seem to dispose, rather completely, of the outworn argument that protection is a prerequisite to high wages. The argument, as a matter of fact, has been disproved in actual practice time and again. It is persisted in only for the purpose of stampeding workmen into voting the ticket of the party which keeps the tariff going for the benefit of the interests from which it receives its largest campaign contributions.

War Time Essentials.

The third argument for protection is that of national defense. It is claimed that certain industries are essential to the safety of the country, and that these cannot be maintained in this country without a protective tariff. The question, therefore, is: Should all industries receive protection merely because a few which are essential to national defense cannot survive without it? Knollenberg writes:

"Well equipped chemical and dye plants might, for example, be a more valuable asset to the nation (in time of war) than many brigades of infantry. But it does not follow that the present all-inclusive protective tariff is sound. To maintain the present tariff in order to protect dependent war industries is using a truck for a job that requires only a wheelbarrow.

"A large majority of industries in the United States can be successfully carried on without protection. Of those which would be destroyed or crippled by free trade, many would have either no vital military importance, or, upon the outbreak of war, could and would be re-established in time to replenish stocks on hand when the emergency arose. Those which are really essential and which would be seriously crippled by the removal of the protective tariff, should be treated as an industrial arm of our military establishment, and given adequate protection. But in return for this subsidy, the Government should insist that these protected industries preserve their plants in readiness for war purposes."

The writer notes that the present unrest among farmers is due to the refusal of the present administration to extend to farm products the protection which it has extended so generously to manufactured goods. This discrimination has been doubly burdensome to the farmer, because it compelled him to sell his own goods at European and Asiatic prices, while compelling him to pay the American protective tariff on the manufactured articles that he bought.

The aim of the McNary-Haugen bill, defeated by the administration in the last session of Congress,

Mussolini, From the Top of the World, Discusses Italy, Fascism and Power

HAS RULED LONGER THAN AVERAGE ROMAN DICTATOR

"I Am Here to Stay," He Declares Four Years After March of the Black Shirts Upon Rome, Which Was Beginning of New Life for Nation.

(This is the first of a series of three articles written after an interview with Premier Mussolini. The second and third articles will be printed during the week.)

By SAMUEL DASHIELL,
A Special Correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and Philadelphia Public Ledger.

(Copyright, 1926.)

ROME, Nov. 6.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI has granted the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and Philadelphia Public Ledger an interview, which, at the completion of four years of his leadership constitutes both a personal recapitulation of Italy's domestic and foreign affairs and a survey of this extraordinary political phenomenon known as Fascism.

The fourth anniversary of the Blackshirt March on Rome has just been celebrated throughout Italy. In the light of the ancient Roman history, this itself is an achievement over the past as no less an authority than Gibbon asserts that the average life of the Roman dictator was four years. Mussolini knows this and the bare significance of such a statement caused him to smile.

"You can say to the American people that that is the least of my worries," he replied. "I am here to stay. This Fascist regime is here to stay. It has made its impress not only in Italy but on the world. Fascism is not only a party, a political philosophy, it is a new patriotism.

Any Anti-Fascist Traitor to Italy

"There has been a profound revolution in Italy. It is Fascism. It has succeeded; it has given Italy new life; it has once more enlightened the shores of the Mediterranean with a renascent Latin race. Under the impulse of Fascism, the Italian people are moving, working, building, saving, increasing, observing their honorable obligations to other nations and pursuing a clear-sighted, uncompromising, realistic program militantly straightforward in its preference for peace.

"I assert now that any Italian who is an anti-Fascist is a traitor to his country."

Mussolini expounded his views in the same great chamber which he always uses at the foreign office in the Chigi Palace and in which he has received many of the world's leaders. The personal statements of some of those distinguished men, Americans, such as Secretary Mellon, Thomas Lamont, Ambassador Fletcher, or Europeans such as Chamberlain, Briand, Benes, have invariably been marked with frank praise for the amazing and striking personality of this black-eyed, soft-voiced Italian dictator. Mussolini's own life record so far suffices to make him a unique figure in the roster of world statesmen.

He moves with the delicate agility of a prizefighter, yet he can hit almost as hard; his voice is extraordinarily low and well modulated, yet he can make a public square ring with his oratory. It is not mere guessing hero worship that induces people to praise him extravagantly. An accurate and impartial observer should put these things down because they are striking facts about Mussolini. Like Napoleon, Mussolini does have tremendous personality.

It is somewhat difficult to know what to call Mussolini on entering his big room. He has two methods of receiving callers. One is to remain seated at his flat desk, bid his guest to be seated on an immovable chair and hence to interview his sitter with short, commanding questions. The other is to meet his caller half way and stroll about the room toward the windows overlooking the Corso, talking as he goes.

Mussolini invariably knows what the business is about. One does not have to explain. "Your Excellency, I have come for an interview." Mussolini already knows why you have come and who you are, otherwise you wouldn't get in. You couldn't even reach the outermost red-carpeted anteroom without friendly credentials. However, this so-called scowling dictator is the most gracious of hosts. "Excellency" is, moreover, the conventional salutation, though he is at once chief of government, prime minister, secretary of war, secretary of navy, secretary of aeronautics, secretary of labor and industry, head of the Fascist party and, lastly, commanding general of the National Fascist Militia.

Colonial Empire Is One of Dictator's Aims

In this restless and intensive fight to rebuild Italy, Mussolini points to five essential features which best characterize the achievements of Fascism since its advent in October, 1922. They are:

Stabilization of Italy's finances.

Institution of a sound capital-and-labor program through syndicates.

Inauguration of a definite colonial empire policy.

Establishment of a powerful mercantile marine.

Consistent foreign policy of friendly treaties in which Germany and the old central empire are considered more in the light of the past than in the roseate glow of the future.

"We are realists," said Mussolini, "if our practices and experiments show originality, at the same time they are consistent with the experience of history. Again, Italy is ahead of the other nations, but at the same time it does not mean that we are out of step with the world."

For the people across the Atlantic, Mussolini's continental and German policy, and his African colonial expansion policy, are the most important developments. They are the savor of the great old Roman empire. There is no hint of a latter-day Punic war, but there is all the repetition of history in the spectacle of the German organizing genius menacing the ascendency of the Italic peninsula from the the Austrian side. Therefore, Mussolini, with the language of a twentieth century Cato, brusquely told the world that Germany must be watched.

Willing to Join in Disarmament When All Nations, Great and Small, Are Willing to Do So, But It Must Be Done Simultaneously.

With the exception of Poincare in France other statesmen do not share in this theory. But hard realism beats under the black shirt. On the African shore, due west from old Carthage, is the troublesome salient of Tangier, and along the palm-grown shore of Tunis to Egypt is an awakening Italian colony, an ancient Roman colony, again, after many centuries, a flourishing dependency of Rome.

Mussolini discussed briefly these two questions which concern the Balkans and the Mediterranean, from Spain, to the Bosporus, where Fascist policy is obviously gaining many footholds.

Mussolini put it diplomatically. He explained: "The relations between Italy and the Balkan or Mediterranean nations are inspired only by the desire to maintain peace and to develop an equitable harmony and a just international equilibrium. Nothing in this can be interpreted as opposed to the interests of Germany, with whom we have friendly and cordial relations."

Diverting the conversation to the Mediterranean, where England at least appears to acknowledge the justice of Italian claims, Mussolini said: "In the Mediterranean and elsewhere, Italy menaces no one, and its policies, moreover, do not constitute a peril for any nation.

"In the Mediterranean, as elsewhere, Italy wishes simply that its importance be recognized, that its prestige be respected and its rights be established and not suffocated by a systematic exclusion of the opportunities essential to the development of a great people."

Italy Has No Intention to Disarm

I ventured a word with the new general Mussolini regarding the arts of war and peace. His view of disarmament is consistent with his realistic views on other subjects. "When someone proposes a plan by which all nations will start to disarm there will be disarmament," he said, "but for the less powerful nations to take the lead, it looks like suicide."

Mussolini grew expansive on this subject which has been so characteristically lampooned in the Italian press. He continued:

"It would be impossible not to recognize that the idea of disarmament has a certain seduction, especially during the epoch immediately following the World War. But, because it must be absolutely imperative that the problem pass from theory into practice, it is necessary that disarmament be not only complete but general, that it be accepted by all nations irrespective of their size or importance. Such an eventuality is still far from being recognized.

"Inasmuch as this real disarmament has not yet even remotely appeared possible, Italy will be mindful of every act that might place her in an inferior position before other great nations. And since it so appears that this exalted idealism of disarmament does not reign throughout the entire world, Italy must still look for its defense in its soldiers and in its navy.

"That day in which all nations in complete sincerity, entirely renounce their aspirations to world hegemony and really disarm, if it should come, Italy will be among them. But not before then.

"Italy has paid only too dearly from time to time for its generous sentimentality. We have learned much from those lessons and that time is definitely passed."

MARSHAL FOCH DISCUSSES THE WAR FOR FIRST TIME SINCE THE ARMISTICE

Defends End of Conflict Without Invading Germany—Tells How He Won Pershing and Haig to His View When Outlook Was Gloomy.

FOR the first time Field Marshal Ferdinand Foch broke his silence concerning the management of the great war in an interview with his old friend Stephane Lauzanne. The Marshal, now 75 years old, is vigorous, alert and keen of memory. Some of the dramatic unwritten incidents of the conflict are disclosed in the interview which is published here.

By STEPHANE LAUZANNE,
Editor in Chief of the Paris "Matin."

PARIS, Nov. 6.

"IT IS a great wave of idealism and fraternity which, in 1917, brought the American soldiers from all corners of the wide American continent to fight on French soil. This wave of brotherhood must not be permitted to withdraw or to dry up. Idealism and brotherhood must remain as the link which welds America to France forever."

Thus spoke Marshal Foch in his metallic and abrupt tone of voice. I had been to see him because we were once again drawing near to the date of the 11th of November, which is his own special date, and I wanted to ask him if, on the occasion of the eighth anniversary of the armistice, he had no message for the people of France or for the people of America, who made the victory of France possible.

I had gone to seek him as far as the building at the back of the Invalides, where his office is situated. It is a poor, dull and low building. On a little door an old poster had been pasted upon which this faded inscription can be read. "Military Allied Committee—General Staff of Marshal Foch." I had mounted a dark and chilly staircase and waited in a dimly lighted hall, in the company of an elderly officer. Finally, I had been conducted into a very simple room where a man in civilian clothes was seated behind the most ordinary of desks. Thus I found myself in the presence of the conqueror of Germany. I was in the presence of Foch.

Foch Slim and Active Despite His Age.

He has retained that same slim and vigorous silhouette which was his during his journey in America in 1921, but his gestures are less abrupt. He still has the same grave and slow tone of voice which Americans have heard, but maybe it has grown somewhat feebler. Anyhow, his memory has remained prodigious; not a single instant, during the hour I remained with him, did I notice any relaxation in it. He remembers everything without any hesitation, and recollects all the names, all the facts and all the dates.

As soon as I had explained the purpose of my visit to him he leaned slightly back in his armchair, lighted his pipe and said:

"America! She knows all I feel for her. She knows that my affection equals my admiration. I thought I had understood her well during the war, because I had seen her soldiers fight beside our own. But I understood her even better during peace when I crossed the ocean to visit her and when, during six weeks I traveled across her vast territory. The cheers which rang along my way! I scarcely heard them then. My mind was elsewhere. I was ever recurring to this same idea:

"Four years ago men went away from here. They made the same great voyage which I have just accomplished to go and fight on the edge of a dich of the Meuse or the Marne. It was because an idea great as the world had inspired them; it was because an immense wave of idealism and fraternity had brought them from all corners of their vast continent to fight on our soil. And then I said to myself that this wave should not be allowed to withdraw, nor to dry up. I said to myself that, at all costs, idealism and brotherhood must remain the link which joins America and France forever!"

I told the Marshall that last year people had endeavored to create misunderstandings between the two nations. I told him that an American Senator had reported that the tombs of the American soldiers were being badly cared for. But he cut me short and exclaimed with vivacity:

"Leave all that talk alone! It is not worth attending to. Such words are naught but dust.

"I Like Pershing," He Says, Recalling Chat.

"Politicians muddle and confuse everything, but the combatants will not permit them to do so. Friends they have been, friends they will remain. I told Pershing so when he came to see me this summer in Brittany. I like Pershing. He is the very son of uprightness. He says what he thinks and thinks what he says. He asked me:

"'Do you think that it would be a good thing for the men of the American Legion to come over next year and visit the former French combatants? Are you not afraid of incidents? To which I replied:

"'I do not fear any incidents between former allied combatants; they will always understand each other.' Pershing objected to me:

"'But the men of the American Legion will number 30,000. Only think what that will be to have 30,000 American boys let loose in Paris.'

"'All right,' I said. 'their stay in Paris will be shortened and their visit to the battlefields prolonged; there a pure and calm atmosphere abides.' Pershing laughed, and we very soon agreed. Pershing and I were always very speedily in accord with one another because we understood each other very well. To understand one another, everything lies in that."

I ventured to say: "People should understand one another, sir, and one must know how to command"—

"Wait a bit," said Foch, using his own familiar form of speech, "wait. I did not command as much as is generally believed. I am not even certain of having commanded at all. I brought my own ideas to prevail upon those who surrounded me, which is a very different thing.

"Look here; on July 24, 1918—a few days after the Americans had made at Chateau Thierry the admirable stand which prevented the Germans from crossing the Marne—I summoned the three commanders-in-chief of the three Allied armies to my headquarters at Bonbon: Pershing, Petain and Haig. The Belgians were also represented at the meeting.

Winning Allied Generals To His Point of View.

"When everyone was seated around the table I read a document which I had previously prepared and I stated the urgency of taking the offensive, according to an alternative movement, of which I indicated the rhythm: viz, the British would begin, the French would continue, then the Americans would take their turn. When I had finished, I asked if anyone had any remark to make to me. They each had one:

"'The British army,' said Haig, 'no longer exists; how can you expect it to go forward?'

"'The French army,' said Petain, 'is exhausted; how can you demand yet another such effort of it?'

"'The American army,' said Pershing, 'is not yet ready; how

Conditions in Rumania.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE Queen of Rumania, who isn't a Rumanian, but an English woman with German ancestors, is being given a royal reception. According to the newspapers, our country is wild about her. And we read with admiration what she gives out for printing, as though it were something some naive Rumanian native expressed with great difficulty in an alien tongue (but which largely sounds silly when we get it straight in our heads that she talks English a darn sight better than most of us can).

In Rumania the tillers of the soil are tenants. They live largely in hovels of mud thatched with straw. In the one room are parents and elders, children, dogs, chickens, pigs, goats and primitive furniture. When the peasants cannot pay the tax gatherer in cash, he seizes the pigs, goats, chickens or chairs, if any. The women work in the fields. They sometimes bring in a new baby in their apron—and are not considered delicate enough to have to lay off from work the next day. They give up all their products but the black bread, for rent.

Count Karolyi of Hungary was one of the richest landlords in such a country. He gave up his enormous estates in order to get off of the backs of the peasants, and to cure such conditions. This country will not admit him, nor his wife. They are dangerous. They are not entitled to receptions by Mayors, Governors or President, or special trains free over transcontinental lines.

Rumania is a country in which people could be happy. But the Queen is not happy. The King is not happy. The peasants are not happy. For the Queen has Ferdinand, Ferdinand has the Queen, and the peasants have the Queen, Ferdinand and the landlords.

Tom Sawyer Anniversary.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THIS month we celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of "Tom Sawyer's", publication. We as Missourians ought to be very proud of the fact that Mark Twain, a native of our State, gave the world the greatest story of adventure since Robinson Crusoe. Andrew Lang, the famous English author, once remarked; "I have read 'Sawyer' five times and I am ready to read it again."

Is "The Single Tax a Dying Cause"?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

CAN our defense of truth become a lost cause, as you would have your readers conclude? Must not its nucleus, though crushed to earth, rise again? Since land is the basis of all wealth, which all men need in order that they may live, is it not clearly unjust that land should become the exclusive possession of the few? Must not the vast majority be deprived thereby of access to the means of living? And, since the proportion of land values to the total wealth always increases, isn't it more evident now than when Henry George wrote it, that the ownership of land is the great fundamental fact which ultimately determines the social, the political, the economic, and consequently the intellectual and moral condition of a people?

Clearly, it must be so. For land is the habitation of man, the storehouse from which he must draw for all his need. The voices of Henry George and Tom Johnson, of Jos. Fels and our own William Marion Reedy still tell of "that which abides amid all passing shadows, of something that does not yield to doubt, or fear, or earthly powers, and which, however baffled or delayed, cannot fail at last."

CHAS. LISCHER.

Bewildered by Prohibition Decision.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHAT is the "man in the street" to believe? In your issue of Nov. 1, on the front page appeared headlines telling us that "Supreme Court Upholds Double Punishment for Eighteenth Amendment Violation," "'Double Jeopardy' Plea Does Not Lie," and finally, "No Dissent From Opinion Holding That There Is No Infraction of the Constitutional Rule."

Then upon turning to the sacred editorial page, under the title "We Are Invited" we learn that "Except for double jeopardy, which is certainly not an American principle, there is nothing about the State dry laws that seems to matter."

It looks as if someone must be mistaken and we presume it is the Supreme Court. Are we right?

BEWILDERED.

(The editorial on "Double Jeopardy," in Tuesday's issue, may dispel your bewilderment.—Ed. P.-D.)

HUNGRY AND HOPELESS.

Hungry and hopeless are strange words to find in the vocabulary of prosperous America. Yet those are the adjectives with which Allen Nevins of the New York World describes the plight of the grain farmers of Indiana, Illinois and Iowa after a survey of those states.

The first fact to capture the observer's attention was the disaster caused by the excessive rains. He saw oats still in the shock "sprouting in lush green mounds," which the farmers were unable to thresh. "The best of it is good for cow feed," said one Illinois farmer. "The rest is good for nothing."

The damage to corn in Illinois and Iowa approximates the damage done in Florida by the recent hurricane.

If this situation were seasonal, if it were the result of the weather hazard which agriculture always must run, there would be no occasion for apprehension. Unfortunately, it is the climax of a long period of distress, with no prospect for relief on the horizon. Considered from any viewpoint, the farmer's present and future outlook are desperate.

Take a look at Iowa, statistically. In 1915 38 per cent of the land was mortgaged, the average debt being $56 per acre. Today 50 per cent of the land is mortgaged and the per-acre debt has increased to $95. There is tragedy back of those figures—the tragedy of impoverishment.

Look at the problem educationally. Eight years ago there were 1200 students in the agricultural courses of the University of Illinois. Now there are 500. A similar decline is reported at the University of Wisconsin and at the Iowa College of Agriculture at Ames. Further, we are told that less than one-third of the agricultural college graduates are found on the farms. The profession for which they equipped themselves obviously has not offered a fair chance for success. If men specially trained for this basic industry are deserting it and turning to other activities, how may the untrained man hope to succeed in it?

What is to be done about it? The teachers and the executives of the agricultural colleges have no faith whatever in the magic of legislation. Measures like the Haugen bill, for example, they reject as worthless. They are frankly pessimistic. They think that agriculture will for years yield minimum returns. The unusually efficient farmer, they say, will prosper moderately, but the majority will eke out a precarious existence, sinking deeper and deeper into the status of a peasantry.

The prospect is forbidding, but the process forecast by those experts is already under way. It is operative in Michigan and more markedly in New England, where the farms are largely occupied by foreigners of comparatively low living standards.

This slow, evolutionary solution of the agricultural college professors is incompatible with American genius. Nobody can question agricultural America's right to share in the abundance of industrial America. To bring about that participation is one of the pressing problems of American statesmanship.

MME. KOLLANTAY.

The unbelievable childishness of the State Department in its attitude toward "undesirable aliens" is again demonstrated in the case of Mme. Kollantay, Russia's new Minister to Mexico. What would we do if Russia should refuse to permit a high and duly accredited official of the United States to travel through Russia? We should consider it a gross insult and should begin drilling the home guard at once.

What possible harm could Mme. Kollantay do in a country where Communism hasn't the slightest foothold and Reds are treated like rattlesnakes? Mme. Kollantay may have fell motives, but the chances are she wants to see the New York skyline, the Woolworth Building, Niagara Falls and the Chicago stockyards. The State Department's manners are atrocious and its judgment worse. It fears a 125-pound woman more than our ancestors did a tribe of Indians on the warpath.

THE END OF COOLIDGE.

Mr. Coolidge will not have a third term. The elections of last Tuesday did not answer every question, but they answered that one.

Mr. Coolidge has now hopelessly lost control of Congress. Already weak in the Senate, he has seen the people turn that branch of Congress over to the Democrats and insurgent Republicans. These fraternizing gentlemen have now a total of 55 votes, whereas of the 96 votes in the Senate there are left for Mr. Coolidge no more than 35 upon which he can depend as regular.

This takes the matter of harmony between the White House and Congress out of the hands of Mr. Coolidge and lands it with his party. He is no longer eligible as the Republican candidate for President in 1928. The head of the ticket in that campaign will have to be someone who can command Congress in the perpetuation of Republican policies. If there is any doubt among us as to what that means, there is none among the beneficiaries of the tariff and those whose business it is to see that the antitrust laws are rendered null and void. Mr. Coolidge has become useless. He has a Senate which will not confirm his appointments to key positions upon Federal boards. He has upon his hands 55 Senators who will not do his bidding in anything. Every one of them protests against running the Government for the benefit of Big Business, making tax laws for millionaires and leaving concerns like Mr. Mellon's Aluminum Trust unwhipped of justice.

So Mr. Coolidge is done. The next two years will testify abundantly to why he is done. The party leaders must find somebody else—somebody who occupies that unexplored region between what Mr. Coolidge thinks and what the Democrats and insurgents in the Senate think.

They don't know who he is—but they know who he isn't.

WHY CALIFORNIA WENT DRY.

California didn't go wet after all. The commanding lead piled up around San Francisco by the wets was turned into a loss by the dry votes of Southern California. This seeming anomaly is easily explained. Grape growers have simply been coining money since prohibition went into effect, and the cellars of the nation are full of wine kegs. California grape growing interests are not so foolish as to kill the goose which is supplying them with golden eggs. Like the city bootlegger, they are as dry as the Antisaloon League.

A BIGGER AND BETTER STEEL TRUST.

Judge Gary, after many years' service as an obscure Chicago lawyer, first made his mark in the world in 1901, when he, Morgan, Frick and a few other resolute men organized the first billion-dollar corporation, the Steel Trust. In those days, a billion dollars was no trifling sum. The first billion-dollar Congress was to come years later. The movie, automobile, cash-register and baking industries were puling infants, and the startling sums necessary to run the country under Coolidge economy were not dreamed of.

If a vulgar phrase may be used in connection with this exalted subject, did Judge Gary shoot his wad when he made one big one out of the little ones in 1901? Evidently not. Speaking before the American Iron and Steel Institute, the venerable Judge sprang a new idea. He mentioned the possibility of an "amicable understanding" between the steel manufacturers of the United States and Europe. There has been some talk of competition between the two continents, and competition is just as odious to Judge Gary as a vacuum is to nature.

Why shouldn't all the boys get together? The Judge suggested that an international conference of all those interested might be held for a "full, open discussion" which would result in a "fair understanding." "Of course," he added, "no agreement * * * relating to prices could legally be entered into without sanction of our law administrators." But the Judge thinks such sanction might be obtained. He was always like that, foreseeing and forestalling legal objections to his plans.

It is a shimmering picture which the Judge presented to the imaginations of the steel men—a super-steel trust, a gigantic, colossal and stupendous structure to control the world trade in steel from great girders to tiny tacks. And perhaps a trillion-dollar corporation to supplant what has now become an anachronism—the little billion-dollar corporation of 1901. The Judge is a wonder. Turned 80, he is still looking forward. Let other men think of the accomplishments of the past. For him, he stands in the year 1926 for a Bigger and Better Steel Trust.

A SIGH FOR TIME LOST.

And to think that all the time there was something useful and needing to be done that Gen. Smedley T. Butler could do!

After trying to make Philadelphia dry, which he could not do, and then setting the world's record for rudeness by informing upon a fellow officer who gave him a homecoming dinner and served cocktails, he is now in command of the Marines who are guarding the U. S. mails.

It reminds us of what Mark Twain said about life. "It is all wrong end to," said Mark. "When I was young and my tongue clamored to speak, nobody called on me. Now I am old and my tongue cleaves to the roof of my mouth, everybody wants me to talk."

If Smedley does not make a record guarding the mails it will be because age has cramped his style.

MISSOURI ARTISTS AND THE WEST.

Men who painted the old West while it was still the old West went from Missouri. One of the last of them was Charles Marion Russell, who died a few days ago at Great Falls, Mont.

Russell was born in St. Louis. He left here as a youth to go out to the Niedringhaus ranch and become a cowboy. He never came back, but became in time one of the painters of an era that is now closing. His subjects were Indians, cowboys, bear hunters, etc. He was self-taught. At the height of his career he went to England, where some of his pictures were sold. He had the distinction of selling one picture in that period for $10,000. He was not, however, the peer of the modern Western painters who work at Taos. Like Frederick Remington, also a Missourian, who went west from Kansas City, he owed his career more to the subject than the quality of his painting. Remington was always a better illustrator than painter, and the pictures by Russell displayed greater familiarity with the West than with art. His paintings were more authentic than Remington's but hardly as good art as the latter's illustrations. He was a participant in, whereas Remington was almost an onlooker upon, the western drama.

Russell and Remington were contemporaries whose period came 50 years after that of George Bingham, known as the Missouri artist. Bingham was also a self-taught painter. The Mercantile Library in St. Louis has two of his paintings. He painted historical scenes as a rule, and was at his height in the time of the Civil War. He was less of an artist than either Russell or Remington. At about the same time Carl Wimar, a St. Louis painter, went out to paint the West. The Wimars are prized as historical pictures. They are not much prized as art. He painted some decorations in the old Courthouse at St. Louis, which are still to be seen there, done over by housepainters. Wimar had studied at Dusseldorf. He painted buffaloes, Indians, etc. It was said of his portrait, "Captain Boone's Daughter," now in the possession of August A. Busch of St. Louis, that the pioneers standing around are Dusseldorf art students.

Oscar E. Berninghaus of St. Louis is a member of the Taos colony. It paints Indians, landscapes, etc. Its technique is beyond that of all the old Missouri artists who did the West.

SUGGESTION FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE POET'S LOT.

Poets live a hard life. No, we do not mean that either. We mean poets do not have a soft life. Cruel fate—to sing of roses, and ever to lack the wherewithal to buy them; to rhapsodize love, and never to know its thrills, because while two can live as cheaply as one, who wants to live cheaply? To—but why continue? Our heart is touched by the unhappy fate of those whose only crime is rhythmical, and all whose faults are meter. We would do something for the poets, besides buying anthologies of verse. Poets use words; hence, any improvement in words automatically makes things easier for the poets. Take the word, "memory." There are three syllables in "memory." You need not look it up; we did. How many syllables do you put in it? No need to blush; we call it "mem ry." While a poet may not have any personal memories, memories are part of his stock in trade. Poets speak so much of memories that we are beginning to suspect them of keeping secret diaries. Take the couplet:

"The memories of girls I wooed in vain?
I think they'd make a rather lengthy train."

But do not take it too far; it's a weak couplet. What is the poet to do? He knows that nine out of 10 readers (assuming that he has 10 readers) will slur the word "memories;" will miss the fine cadences of his verse. If readers scan the line, it will not scan correctly. Then the poet gets a note: "Your alleged poem lacks sense, meter and rhythm, and the rhymes are punk." When the poet has a collection of such notes, he builds a fire. What shall he do? Shall he write for his readers or for the dictionary? This humanitarian department favors the reader. The couplet should be:

"The memories of the girls I wooed in vain?
I hope they never bother me again."

"Again" is another troublesome word, but this is not a lecture. There are two syllables in "flower," another favorite with the poets. That is, the dictionary says there are two syllables, but we know there is but one.

"The flowers bloom in gardens fair,
Beneath the golden sun;
The damn word has two syllables,
It ought to have but one."

Fellow bards, we have released two of your favorite words from the bondage of the dictionary. The rest is up to you.

"Since no one else would dare begin it, Reform began in Just a Minute."

AN AUTUMNAL TRAGEDY.

(As almost any Russian author would have written it.)

Scene: A deserted apple orchard in early November. It is drizzling, and the chill penetrates to the bone. A low, moaning breeze passes through the barren limbs of the trees. Drabness, desolation, oppressive loneliness, etc.

Dramatis personae: Two windfallen, semi-decomposed apples.

First apple: How dreary it is today, little brother. That chilly rain—it will only hasten our dissolution. But what's the use of reflecting thus? It is fate.

Second apple: Yes; we must not complain.

First apple: Still, I cannot help feeling that it would be ever so much nicer to be stowed away in a nice, dry barrel, with the rest of our comrades, than to lie rotting here amongst decaying leaves. We even might have been made into cider. Ours is a hard lot.

Second apple: It is fate.

First apple: We must not complain.

Second apple: To think that we owe our sad plight to a capricious wind! Why weren't we permitted to mature with the rest of our brethren, who, I suppose, are even now serving some useful purpose in life.

First apple: But you forget, my little one; it is fate.

Second apple: Aye; we must not complain.

First apple: Hello, there! Here comes a hog, rooting around among the leaves. Take heart, little brother, there is yet hope. Although we are indeed in a sorry condition, that is nothing to a hog, who is more concerned with substance than with quality. We might yet be served at some sumptuous banquet in the form of ham. Who can tell?

Second apple: What; Such impudence! He has poked at us with his nose, and passed us up, with a contemptuous sniff. Great Scott! To think that even a repulsive swine will have naught to do with us.

First apple: It is fate.

Second apple: We must not complain.

CARPE DIEM.

Beauty, joy and happiness—
Treasures fleet they are,
Vanishing from out our ken
As a falling star.

Roses bloom to fade and die,
Sunshine pales to night;
Little joys we know today
Swiftly pass from sight.

Seize the present happiness,
Grasp the beauty near;
Sigh not for tomorrow's dreams,
Love the joy that's here.

The MIRROR OF PUBLIC OPINION

FARMER AND FIVE-DAY WEEK.

From the Doland (S. D.) Times-Herald.

THE American Federation of Labor in session at Detroit has gone on record in favor of the five-day week, and will put forth every effort possible to bring this about. If this is accomplished it will show the agricultural dollar still lower in the scale. High cost of labor in manufacturing industries is one of the principal causes of the difference in the value of the dollar, and to get the same money for five days as is paid for six now will cut down production that much and force the price of commodities still higher. The agriculturists will continue to put in the usual hours a day for seven days in the week, which would mean about 100 hours of hard work a week, while the city fellow will only want to labor 40 hours. Too much difference, and the unions will find considerable opposition to their program.

MUSSOLINI "LIVING DANGEROUSLY."

From the New York World.

FOR the third time in seven months Benito Mussolini narrowly escaped death in Bologna when a bullet fired by a 15-year-old boy ripped his coat harmlessly. The would-be murderer was killed by the crowd, which took the law into its own hands. There is in Italy no capital punishment for murder, but Mussolini aims to have that penalty prescribed for attempts upon the heads of the State.

On April 7 Mussolini was slightly wounded by a demented woman. On Sept. 19 a young man threw an explosive bomb at him. A third escape in so short a time there have been six in four years strengthens the belief of many Italians that "Il Duce" leads a charmed life. He would himself in no such delusion. In his own phrase, he "lives dangerously." Those who know him best say that he does not expect to die in his bed.

No one but an insane person is likely to attempt Mussolini's life, with the inevitable penalty of being torn to pieces by the crowd likely to follow. But unfortunate for the Premier and for Italy, the spirit of repression in which the country lives invites mental aberration of that type. Kings know and Presidents have learned that there is more or less constant danger of murderous attacks. Mussolini is particularly and outstandingly endangered. The head of Fascism has no crown prince as successor. Who aims at him aims at the system.

NEW 2-CENT STAMP MARKS WHITE PLAINS BATTLE DATE

Shows Revolutionary Soldiers in Washington's Command in 1776.

A new 2-cent stamp is on sale at the St. Louis Postoffice, for persons who wish a change from the common red variety and the larger Liberty Bell issue. The new stamp was issued to commemorate the battle of White Plains, fought near New York City, Oct. 28, 1776, in which Washington commanded the American forces.

The stamp, which is oblong and smaller than the Liberty Bell and other commemorative issues, shows a group of revolutionary soldiers manning a field piece. In one corner is shown the flag inscribed "Liberty or Death," which was an emblem of the colonists at that time.

Foch Discloses Some Of World War's Secrets

can you think of throwing it into the conflict?'

"I could easily have replied by giving a formal and categorical command, but that is not my way of acting. I know only too well that one obeys badly if one has to obey unwillingly. I preferred to take the tone of an adviser rather than that of a chief. I preferred to convince each one of them that my plan was perfectly possible and feasible.

"To Haig I said that I would place a French army under his command, the army of Debeney, which could but flatter and stimulate him.

"To Pershing I declared that I knew very well that the young American army, full of ardor and vigor, was only too anxious to cover itself with glory.

"To the Belgians I promised to let them have both British and French troops, who would be placed under the command of King Albert; and, as they raised the objection that the King did not possess a staff officer's license, I replied: 'All right; I will send him a French licensed chief officer of the general staff —Gen. Degouette.'

"Thus each of them, finally, through pride or logic or persuasion, or perhaps merely because he was placed face to face with his responsibilities, rallied of his own free will to my ideas. And everything went far better than if I had simply imposed my authority."

The marshal drew a whiff from his pipe, and, continuing to let his reminiscences fall, one by one, he pursued:

How He Kept Allies From Abandoning Ypres.

"I have known far more difficult hours than that. For instance, those of November, 1914, when I prevented the Allies from abandoning Ypres. At that time I did not possess any document conferring the high command on me. Then I was not a commander in chief of the French army; I was only a simple general. In the conferences which I had with him, Gen. French said:

"'I am a Field Marshal and am alone responsible toward England for the fate of the British army. I am of the opinion that that army should retreat!' To which I replied:

"'I have no orders to give to you; I only take the liberty of tendering my advice to you, and I am just thinking of the fate of your army, which is very dear to me. If it retreats it is lost, for the retreat will turn into a disaster. No one can prevent you from commanding, but only just think of your responsibility.'

"On his side the King of the Belgians, during the conversations I had with him, said to me:

"The Constitution holds me responsible to my people for what remains of my army. I cannot sacrifice it.' To which I replied: 'Sire, just think of your responsibility and be certain that you will sacrifice your army if you attempt to retreat.' I left two documents drawn up in haste on the corner of a table with both of them which were conceived in almost identical terms: 'We shall remain on the spot. We shall defend the lines we hold.'

"These were not orders; they were counsels. I merely persuaded the King of the Belgians and the English marshal so well that the advice given was good that they issued orders in consequence. And I really believe that I, who had no right to command at that time, commanded them. Only I had discovered the right way of commanding.

"If the Peace Is Not Good Is it My Fault?"

"Yes, but you know sir," said I smiling, "that there are some people in the world who maintain that you have not discovered the right way of negotiating. They reproach you with that armistice which you signed, eight years ago, in the forest of Compiegne. They even say that you reproach it to yourself. If there had been no armistice, they say, the next allied drive would have reached the Rhine."

"Nonsense!" cut Foch sharply. "Have we not reached the Rhine without fighting? Listen here, and mind my words: What is an armistice? An armistice is a suspension of hostilities whose purpose is to discuss peace by placing the countries that have consented to the armistice in situation such as to permit them to enforce that peace. Did the armistice which I signed on Nov. 11, 1918, fulfill this purpose? Yes, since on June 28, after seven months of negotiation, Germany accepted all the conditions of the Allies. I said to M. Clemenceau, on Nov. 11, 1918, at 9 o'clock in the morning, when I brought him the document which had just been signed in the forest of Compiegne: 'Here is my armistice; you can now make any peace you wish. I am able to enforce it.' If the peace has not been a very good one, is it my fault? I did my job: it was up to the heads of the Government to do theirs."

Foch rose, and emphasizing each one of his words, as if to be sure of summing up the interview thoroughly, he said:

"To command is nothing. To negotiate is nothing. What is necessary is to understand those with whom one has to deal and to make one's self thoroughly understood by them. To understand each other is the whole secret of life!"

And Foch evidently also meant that it was the secret of the life of nations the same as that of individuals, the secret of peace and war, the secret of commerce and of friendship.

Opportunity for The Democrats to Show Up Tariff

proposed to make the tariff effective on wheat, corn, cotton, hogs and cattle. It proposed to do this by having the Government set up machinery which would buy up all the surplus, thus enabling the American farmer to fix his price in the home market. The surplus would have been sold abroad, and the cost apportioned among the farmers.

Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, opposed the bill, by pointing out that any plan which increased the price received for farm products would obviously increase their cost to American consumers. To use his own language: "It is, of course, apparent at once that the effect of this bill will be to increase the cost of living to every consumer of the five basic agricultural commodities in this country."

But, of course, that is exactly what the tariff does in the case of manufactured goods—such, for example, as aluminum articles. Mr. Mellon's argument was unquestionably sound, but he was the last man one would expect to hear it from. Any child knows that any sort of protection increases the price to the consumer; it is difficult, however, to see why it is wrong to give the farmer that privilege, but righteous to give it to manufacturers.

The Secretary Mellon who protested so indignantly against a proposal to let the farmers gouge the consumers, is the same man as Manufacturer Mellon whose aluminum trust enjoys a tariff which enables it to gouge the consumers. Naturally, the farmers, being neither blind, deaf nor dumb, observe this circumstance, and their temperature rises accordingly.

"If the progressive wing of the Democratic party should dominate the next Democratic national convention," concludes Knollenberg, "the logical swing of the Western farm group would be to Democracy. A Democratic party uniting the old South and the new West on a platform of tariff for revenue only, would revitalize American politics by transforming a mere party label covering factions as wide apart as the poles in principles and character, into a homogeneous and vigorous party."

Talk on Balfour Declaration.

"The Balfour Declaration, Nine Years After," is the topic to be discussed by David Reiss, principal of the Hebrew School system of St. Louis, before the allied Zionist Boards at their monthly meeting Thursday evening at Forest Park Hotel, Euclid avenue and West Pine boulevard.

Romance is calling you~

Would you step back thru the centuries to Yesterday? Then come to San Antonio!

Come to this land of enchantment —where the sun casts a golden glamour over crumbling gray missions... where the white magic of the moon silvers a forbidding wall... where the faint strumming of a guitar adds its plaintive note to the allurement of a soft Spanish air... where sleek motors pant impatiently as a serape-draped Mexican urges his indifferent donkey across a crowded street... where rustling palms whisper of another day.

Heed the call of Romance!—spend this winter in Sunny San Antonio, where the charms of Yesterday cling to the progress of Today!

Any railroad agent can quote you Winter tourist rates to San Antonio. Ten-day stop-over allowed on all through tickets, any direction.

SanAntonio

"The Winter Playground of America"

Things to See and Do

The Alamo
The historic mission-fort, where Davy Crockett and his little band of Texans held out against overwhelming odds and perished to the last man in defense of Texas Liberty.

The Missions
Built 225 years ago by the Spanish padres. Mission San Jose is the finest example of Spanish architecture in the Western Hemisphere.

Fort Sam Houston
By far the largest army post in the country. Infantry, Cavalry and Artillery all represented in an amazing array.

Brackenridge Park
Second to none in beauty, improvements and facilities for outdoor sports—golf—horseback riding—polo—tennis—picnics and other recreation.

Mexican Quarter
Quaint and interesting by day—see the native costume dances at night, to the tune of strumming guitars.

San Fernando Cathedral
In the heart of the city, adjoining a modern office building—a strange contrast of the Old World and the New.

Play Golf
On the finest and sportiest courses in the South—nominal greens fees and ample competition of the keenest sort. Texas Open Golf Championship, attracting national stars, played over Brackenridge Park municipal course.

Ride Horseback
16 miles of bridle path in Brackenridge Park—suitable mounts available at reasonable rates.

Hunt and Fish
Medina Lake—30 miles away by perfect road—is the paradise of the hunter and black bass fisherman. Paved roads to Gulf Coast points, where water fowl winter, and tarpon and deep sea bass abound.

Motor
More miles of paved road in Bexar County (San Antonio) than any county in U. S. Paved roads to Corpus Christi on Texas Gulf Coast, and to Laredo, Brownsville, Del Rio and Eagle Pass, all on Mexican border.

Play Tennis
On any of scores of finely kept clay courts—San Antonio residents play the year around—assuring adequate competition for the visitor.

Motion Picture Making
The war scenes of "The Big Parade" were filmed at San Antonio. "Wings" and "The Rough Riders", featuring Mary Astor, Clara Bow, Wallace Beery and others, made entirely at San Antonio.—New pictures constantly being filmed.

New sights . . new scenes . . new sources of pleasure and recreation await you here . . in this most delightful of all Southern resorts.

Here, surrounded by the atmosphere of Old World romance and adventure, you can pass your time out in the open . . in the invigorating air and mellow sunshine . . doing the things you like to do. You can saunter in flower-grown parks and plazas . . explore the winding streets of the old Mexican quarter . . motor over smooth roads . . hunt, fish and golf to your heart's content.

Your happy, restful, carefree days begin the moment you board the KATY for San Antonio . . and continue all the time you spend there. There's room for all at reasonable rates . . in fine hotels, furnished apartments and in private homes.

Go via the Texas Line

The principal highway to San Antonio lies through St. Louis or Kansas City and the Katy. Three fine, fast trains—the Limited, TEXAS SPECIAL and Katy Flyer offer choice of suitable hours for departure and arrival. Smooth roadbed, through Pullmans and dining cars —and attentive service add to the pleasures of your trip.

Miami by the Sea is ready.

That's the cheerful, unqualified assurance this message brings. Amazing speed in repairing, blessed with abundant health-producing sunshine, has overcome the effects of the September 18th storm. Many hotels and apartment houses were only slightly damaged and have continued operating without interruption. Other hotels, without exception, are ready now, or will be upon scheduled opening dates, with their usual comforts and conveniences.

It's still June in Miami—a l winter through, with the same friendly sunshine, balmy breezes, tropical surroundings, inviting seashore, enjoyable sports, healthful conditions, and the carefree life, that have made Miami the World's Greatest Winter Playground.

You'll find much that's new in Miami this winter. This year $250,000,000 from all sources has been spent in developing this section. Lofty buildings have changed the skyline in a few short months.

Miles of wide new boulevards and well paved streets have opened new routes of motor traffic and brought the suburbs closer in. New modern hotels and apartment houses add their welcome to the favored hostelries of former years.

New theatres, new schools, new churches, new homes, new stores, new industries, mark the continued growth of this ever progressive community.

A new railroad line, another double tracked; new steamship service, fast new boats on the older lines; new standardized hotel and apartment rates. New golf courses added to those for which Miami is famous. New diversions increase the entertainment features.

ARTHUR PRYOR'S BAND—Two Concerts Daily—Dec. to April— Royal Palm Park.

Millions of dollars have been spent this summer in improved motor highways to make your trip to Miami easy. Direct de luxe trains from New York, Detroit and Chicago. Through pullmans from all principal northern cities. Speedy ocean voyage in the finest coastwise steamship service in the world direct from New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

SHAKSPEAREANS SEEK U. S. AID

Memorial Theater Head Sails for New York.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Archibald Flower, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Shakspeare Memorial Theater, Stratford-on-Avon, sailed today on the Franconia for New York, accompanied by Mrs. Flower.

The purpose of the visit is to ascertain whether Americans are inclined to provide money to aid in building a new Shakspeare Theater in Stratford-on-Avon, to replace the one destroyed by fire some time ago. Of the $500,000 required, the English people only raised $200,000, including insurance on the old building. The American Committee of the Shakspeare memorial fund invited Flower to make the trip to the United States.

JEWELS WORTH $6000 TAKEN IN BURGLARY

Home of Paul B. Jamison Robbed When Family Slept; Couple Held Up at Their Home.

A burglar stole jewelry valued at $6079 in the home of Paul B. Jamison, 6105 Lindell boulevard, Friday night, without disturbing members of the family. The loss was discovered at 6:30 a. m. yesterday.

A ladder leading to the roof of a one-story conservatory at the rear of the house, used by the gardener to reach plants growing upon the roof of the conservatory, also was used by the burglar, presumably, after which he climbed to the roof of the house proper and went through French windows to the bedroom where Jamison and his wife were asleep.

In this and another room he took a pocketbook containing $57, a platinum bracelet set with 167 diamonds and 36 sapphires, valued at $2700; a platinum barpin set with 46 diamonds valued at $1800; a diamond ring valued at $600, another at $595; a wrist watch valued at $150 and another valued at $45; three strings of beads, $70; a small barpin, $49.

Jamison is manager of the Friedman-Shelby branch of the International Shoe Co.

An armed robber held up Mr. and Mrs. Lester L. Turley of 5028 Raymond avenue in the rear of their home at 7:10 p. m. Friday and stole jewelry valued at $5050, including a platinum dinner ring set with a 3½-carat diamond and 48 smaller diamonds, valued at $2800; a 3-carat diamond ring valued at $2200 and a wedding ring worth $50. The robber then got in Turley's sedan with Mr. and Mrs. Turley and forced them to drive him to a point on Raymond avenue, west of Academy avenue, where he transferred to another automobile and drove away. Turley is general agent for the International Life Insurance Co.

Her Hair Fairly SPARKLES Now!

The woman who knows what to do after waving her hair doesn't fear the effect of hot irons. Nor of frequent washings. A few drops of Danderine—on comb or towel—and the hair is soft and lustrous, and behaves beautifully.

A bit of Danderine rubbed lightly into the scalp, is the one sure way to dissolve every particle of dandruff. But a few drops more make a dressing that is simply marvelous. A sheen that rivals brilliantine, and no grease! Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when Danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

Ask Your Druggist

Get a bottle of Danderine and start its benefits today. Every drug store in America has it, for only 35c. For the finest dressing you could find, and the best aid to hair health yet discovered, just try—

MUNICIPAL LEAGUE TO HEAR "SERVICE-AT COST" ADDRESS

Prof. Martin L. Glaesser of Wisconsin University Will Discuss Utility Franchise Plan Wednesday.

EXPANSION OF CITY IS ANOTHER TOPIC

Limitation of Skyscrapers to 10 Stories Also on Program of Two-Day Session Here.

Several of the topics for discussion at the thirty-second annual meeting of the National Municipal League in Hotel Statler Tuesday and Wednesday affect pressing issues in St. Louis.

Prof. Martin L. Glaesser of the University of Wisconsin, on Wednesday at 10 a. m., will discuss service-at-cost franchises for public utilities. Mayor Miller now is proposing that the United Railways, when it emerges from receivership, shall be re-franchised upon this basis. There is the related topic, also: "Has State Regulation of Public Utilities Proved a Failure?" This discussion will be led by Mayor William E. Dever of Chicago and another phase of regulation will be taken up by John Bauer, a public utility consultant of New York.

Discussion on Annexation.

The opening discussion of the meeting has bearing upon the question of expansion of the city into the county. There are few who believe that the recent defeat of annexation of St. Louis County by the city settled the question of expansion. Prof. Thomas H. P. Reed of the University of Michigan will talk on: "Better Governmental Organization of Metropolitan Regions as an Aid to City Growth." He recently has returned from a study of London, Paris and Berlin and will apply European practice of treating satellite towns to American conditions.

Another question, not so pressing, but of importance to St. Louis where an 85-cent school tax rate furnishes the Board of Education with large sums for annual expenditure, is the discussion of Dr. A. Ross Hill, former president of Missouri University and now a trustee of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. His subject will be, "Are We Spending Too Much for Education?"

The street railway problem bobs up again in the paper of J. M. Shaw of the Philadelphia Transit Co., which now furnishes transportation by street car, subway, elevated, taxicab, motorbus and airplane. His subject will be "What Place Has a Street Car in a Modern City?" It is prophesied that he will be found in the ranks of those who assert that the motorbus cannot supplant the railway and that street cars for some years to come will be the chief dependence of the large mass of the public for transportation.

"The Skyscraper Menace" will be considered by Henry H. Curran of New York, who believes the height of buildings in cities should be limited to 10 stories.

Purposes of the League.

Purposes of the National Municipal League are stated by Isidor Loeb, dean of the School of Commerce and Finance in Washington University, as follows: "It is the most important association in the United States devoted to the investigation of the organization and problems of cities. Its work has largely been responsible for the improvements in municipal government of the last quarter of a century. More recently its field has been extended to state and national governmental problems and here its influence likely will be felt as beneficially."

The public is invited to the meetings of the league. Mayor Miller is chairman of the Executive Committee for the St. Louis meeting. Others upon the committee are C. W. Atkins, Paul Bakewell, Harland Bartholomew, Mrs. Louis H. Burlingham, Miss Leona Cahill, W. C. d'Arcy, Mrs. George Gellhorn, Isidor Loeb, Mrs. Virgil Loeb, Mrs. George B. Mangold and Mrs. Marion C. Blossom.

ARCHBISHOP TO DEDICATE NEW ST. LOUIS U. RADIO STATION

Speech Will Be Broadcast When Presentation Is Made by Catholic Laymen on Tuesday.

For the first time in the century of the St. Louis Archdiocese, the highest dignitary of the Catholic Church in this district will give a message by radio when Archbishop Glennon broadcasts the address of dedication over WEW of St. Louis University upon the formal opening of the new station at 7 p. m. Tuesday.

Francis R. Lowther, an alumnus of the school and head of the Catholic Laymen's Association, will make a formal presentation of the new station to the Very Rev. Charles H. Cloud, S. J., president of St. Louis University. It is through the efforts of the Catholic laymen that the new superpower station of 1000 watts was made possible. Heretofore St. Louis University, having the oldest radio station in the Mississippi Valley, had one of the lowest power and wave length.

Following President Cloud's acceptance, a musical program will be rendered by the Scholastic Choir and Orchestra under Prof. Dimichino and by the Knickerbocker Trio, comprising Ted Westhus, Leon Marion and James Barsalaux.

The new station will broadcast market and stock reports every day and special programs on Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday nights. The wave length will revert to the old one of 360 meters.

Negro Who Aided Executioner Free

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Nov. 6.—Frank Davis, 59 years old, a Negro of Savannah, Ga., who recently acted as assistant executioner in the garroting of two murderers in the Santiago jail, has been pardoned. Davis, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, in which he served as a sergeant in the Ninth Cavalry, was serving a sentence for robbery. It is understood the pardon was granted for his assistance in the garrotings.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 279 N. Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Don't Lose Night's Sleep

Nature's Danger Signal Relieved by Tenn. Man. Wants Others to Know

J. L. Church, Doeville, Tenn., says: "I was disturbed 10 to 12 times each night. Burning was almost unbearable. Had lasting results until taking Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula). I feel 100 per cent better. My friends say 'How much better you look.' Will tell or write of my experience to any one."

Lithiated Buchu cleanses the bladder as epsom salts do the bowels. It is a patent medicine. The formula is on the bottle. The tablets cost 2c each at all stores. Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsville, Ohio. Locally at Wolff-Wilson and other stores.

WASHINGTON U. TO START MUSIC APPRECIATION COURSE

Ernest R. Kroeger will begin a series of 20 lectures on "Musical Appreciation," at 4 p. m. Tuesday, at Washington University, under the auspices of the Division of University Extension.

These lectures are not intended primarily for the professional musician. Their purpose is rather to be intelligible to the layman, in non-technical language, the underlying principles of musical composition so that he may the better understand and appreciate the symphony, the opera and other forms of musical composition.

The course will consist of lectures, with piano illustrations, and will include the characteristics of rhythm, melody and harmony; folk music, dance forms, early church music, chorales and hymns; the song, the development of the sonata, the golden era of the sonata, chamber music, the symphony, lyric forms, descriptive and picturesque music, the symphonic poem, sacred music, the mass, the cantata, the oratoria, the opera.

Princeton Triangle Club to Give Musical Comedy Here Dec. 29

John Triggs Moss Jr., of St. Louis Designs Unique Sets — Miss Margaret Rumsey Makes Debut — Party for Misses Frances and Virginia Reilly.

"SAMARKAND" has been chosen by the Princeton Triangle Club as the title for its musical comedy, which will be produced at the Odeon Wednesday evening, Dec. 29. The scene is laid in an oriental land of the present day, and the plot centers around a conspiracy to dethrone an oriental potentate, and involves the marriage of his daughter.

Despite the football activities at Princeton, work on the production is well under way. The "chorus girls" are having rehearsals daily in the gymnasium and the principals are being coached. John Trigg Moss Jr., a St. Louis man, has devised a number of the sets, in which are used the principal of constructivism, that of adding a third dimension to the stage for chorus work. The effect is obtained by the disposition of platforms of various levels about the stage.

J. C. Sanford, '27, who wrote the music for this year's production, "Fortuno," is president of the club, and among the principals are "Bo" Slagle, gridiron star, who will again appear as a dancer; Franklin Gary, '27; J. C. Taylor, '28, erstwhile heroine of "Fortuno," and W. Brenton, '27, who has been playing leading roles for three years.

The itinerary of the club has been changed this season to include several Southern cities, including them Nashville, Memphis and Little Rock.

Miss Margaret Rumsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis M. Rumsey Jr., of 4372 Westminster place, and first special maid of honor to the Queen at the Veiled Prophet ball, was presented to society at a dinner dance given last night by her parents at the St. Louis Country Club. There were 70 guests.

The debutantes in the party were Miss Martha Love, Miss Elizabeth Scudder, Miss Dorothy Maxwell, Miss Elizabeth Allen, Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus, Miss Anne Kennard Wallace, Miss Mary Carter, Miss Anne Cox, Miss Ruth McElroy, Miss Julia Klipstein, Miss Edith Peters., Miss Ruth Bass, Miss Roccena Baldwin, Miss Gertrude Allen, Miss Kathleen Ryan, Miss Liliana Dyer, Miss Helen Martha Woods, Miss Florence Brooks, Miss June Morgens and Miss Genevieve Barnickle and Mrs. J. Porter Allen will give a luncheon at the St. Louis Country Club, New Year's Day.

One hundred and fifty guests have been invited to "Hill Top Farm," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Reilly on the Clayton road, to an informal mixed tea from 4 to 7 o'clock this afternoon for their daughters, Miss Frances and Miss Virginia Reilly.

Bronze and yellow chrysanthemums will be the autumn colors used in the decorations throughout the house. The young women, many of them debutantes, who have been invited to serve, include Miss Marian Green, Miss Helen Rule, Miss Minerva Carr Nichols, Miss Susie Singleton, Miss June Morgens, Miss Dorothy Ladd and Miss Margaret and Miss Jane Mahler.

Queen Marie to Be Guest of Honor At the Horse Show Friday Night

Occasion Will Be Brilliant Background for Display of Latest Creations of Modistes' Art—Many Interesting Parties Arranged for Week.

THE St. Louis Horse Show, to open at the Coliseum tomorrow night and continue throughout the week will serve as a brilliant background for a gathering of society, the display of beautiful gowns and the entertainment of royalty. Especially is this true of the opening night which has been designated as St. Louis night and Friday night when Marie, Queen of Rumania will honor the Horse Show with her presence.

The Coliseum will be elaborately and artistically decorated for the week, the colors of the Bit and Bridle Club, green and white, to predominate. Smart modes of the season and the bright colors of autumn will be reflected in the evening costumes of the beautifully gowned women occupying the boxes encircling the arena. Such feminine loveliness will add much to the attractiveness and interest of the show.

As a fitting climax of the opening of the show tomorrow night, the Bit and Bridle Club will give a supper dance at Hotel Chase for the exhibitors and out-of-town guests. The Palm room will be decorated in the Bit and Bridle colors and many interesting parties have been arranged for the evening. Among those who will entertain are August Busch, Philip S. Medart, William Lemp Jr., A. N. Engle, Edgar Gengenbach, Paul Bakewell Jr., and Edward L. Bakewell, Mrs. Marion Corliss Mersman, Frank R. Tate, John W. Gerling, Fred W. Holekamp, and A. Hill.

Rumania purple combined with green and white will be used in decorations at the Coliseum Friday night as a tribute to Queen Marie who will be a guest at the Horse Show and in whose honor the program for that night has been dedicated. Her Majesty will be accompanied by Miss Martha Love, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward K. Love, upon whose brow the prized crown of Love and Beauty was placed by His Majesty, the Veiled Prophet at the annual ball last month. Mr. W. Frank Carter and Mayor Miller, Miss Elizabeth Scudder, Anne Kennard Wallace, Margaret Rumsey and Dorothy Maxwell, four debutantes and special maids to the Veiled Prophet Queen will occupy the box with Princess Ileana. Boyle Rodes has been appointed as escort to Prince Nicholas during his visit to St. Louis.

Another distinguished guest at the Horse Show will be Ambassador Matsurdaira of Japan and Mr. Tamura the Japanese Consul of Chicago who with Dwight F. Davis, Secretary of War, will be guests of honor Wednesday evening.

In keeping with the spirit of the occasion the Horse Show gives promise to a full week of social activities in honor of the large number of visitors attracted here for the entertainment the week now affords. The popular Bit and Bridle Club has planned many social affairs in the spacious club rooms off the Horse Show promenade. A motor trip to Sunset Hill Country Club where a stag luncheon will be served to the exhibitors, is to be one of the important social affairs of the week.

Organizing Branch of National Club For Business Women

Arrangements are being made for a meeting at the Town Club, Tuesday night, to organize a business and professional women's club of St. Louis. Dr. Nancy Mead Hain of Sedalia, State president of the organization, which is national in its scope, is here arranging the preliminaries.

There are clubs in every state in the Union, embracing a membership of more than 50,000. The purpose of the club here will be to develop the interests of the business and professional women. Each club is self-governing. In the national organization 75 per cent of the members are actively engaged in business or professions. The various clubs have tea rooms, 20 activity classes and athletics. Ten per cent of all funds are applied to a scholarship fund.

Activities of Women's Clubs And Societies

ing Mrs. Myrtle Renard, Jefferson 1470.

The Welfare Committee of the Eighth District, Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, will meet at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, at Sherman Center, Kingshighway and Easton avenue.

The Pioneers meet Friday afternoon at the House Next Door, Kingshighway and Washington boulevards. The subject for the afternoon was "Primary Emotion," and the books discussed were "Growth of the Soil" and "Emperor Jones." Papers were read by Mrs. Bernard Greenfelder and Mrs. Max Jacobs. Miss Tillie Hellman was hostess.

A tea will follow the Members' day program of the Morning Choral Club, Thursday afternoon, Nov. 18, at 2:30, in the Wednesday Club, which opens the thirty-sixth season of the club. At the tea tables the following will serve: Mrs. Halsey C. Ives, Mrs. Benton H. Pollock, Mrs. Bessie Bown Ricker, Mrs. Willoughby Swingley, Mrs. F. B. Chamberlain, Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, Miss Grace Taussig and Miss Sara Tower. For the first time in St. Louis, the comedy, with music, "The Weeping Pierrot and the Laughing Pierrot," will be presented, the English version being by Amy Lowell from the French text of Edmond Rostand. The roles will be taken by Mrs. Hector Pasmezoglu, Mrs. S. B. Cowan and Mrs. C. E. Blankenship. A program by Max Steindel of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will proceed the comedy.

The Tuxedo Club, Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, met with Mrs. John L. Moss at her home on the North and South road, Tuesday. Reports from the different committees were read. The Tuxedo Club will give a card party early this winter for the benefit of the charity fund. Mrs. E. S. Williams and Miss Hattie Burton will entertain the club Nov. 16.

The third regular meeting of the Gertrude Charity Society will be held Wednesday at 2:15 p. m., at Temple Shaare Emeth. A board meeting will be held at 11:30 a. m.

The Girl Pioneers is the name of a new club for girls, 12 to 18 years of age, which is sponsored by a large committee of women of the Second Presbyterian Church, Taylor avenue and Westminster place, where the first meeting will be held tomorrow evening. Miss Margaret Shapleigh is chairman of the committee, and others interested are Miss Mildred McCluney, Mrs. C. F. Cartwright, Mrs. R. C. McCormack, Mrs. L. D. Haertter, Mrs. C. W. Pollock, Mrs. Oliver B. Zeinert, Mrs. Fred W. Woods, Mrs. A. H. Summers, Miss Maurine Johnson and Miss Margaret Freudenstein. The purpose of the club is "to keep physically fit, mentally alert, and spiritually true, in relationship to God and service to others."

A series of Sunday night teas, extending over a period of at least five weeks, will be inaugurated this afternoon at 6:30 o'clock. The tea will follow a new mission study class for young people, to meet at 5:30 o'clock, each Sunday afternoon. After the tea, the league service will be held at 7 o'clock.

The St. Louis Browning Society, under the leadership of Dr. William Laurence Sullivan, will hold its second meeting of the season Thursday at 3:45 p. m., in the parlors of the Church of the Messiah, Union and Enright avenues. The poem for discussion will be "The Return of the Druses." The meeting Dec. 9 will deal with Browning's attitude toward Spiritualism. Those interested in Browning may join the society.

The Uandi Literary Club met Thursday. The meeting was devoted to the study of France and rollcall was answered by the members naming French beauties of olden times. Mrs. George Bishop read a paper on "Paris the Fashion Center." Mrs. Ernest Walker read a paper on "Life in the Provinces." Mrs. G. Y. Mechin gave a talk on the biennial held recently. Mrs. Marvin Boisseau and Mrs. Myron Medsker were the hostesses.

The Parish Aid Society of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Ferguson, will hold its annual Christmas sale at the residence of Mrs. Clifford Day, 2 North Clay avenue, Wednesday, from 3 to 5 o'clock. The table of linens and fancy articles will be in charge of Mrs. Herbert Condie and Mrs. Frederick Williamson; baby things, Mrs. John Lodwick; candy, Mrs. Haywood Hunter and Mrs. Roy Johnson. Tea will be served in the dining room, Mrs. Howard Finney and Mrs. Eugene Hecker will pour, assisted by Mrs. E. G. Cherbonnier and Mrs. Frank Thompson.

The Delphi Delphian Chapter met Monday at Community Center. Mrs. Harry L. Salisbury presiding. The topic was "Dutch Art," under the leadership of Mrs. S. C. Dahman, all members taking part in the discussion. Mrs. George R. Weaver, formerly of Kirksville, Mo., was welcomed into the chapter. The next meeting will be Nov. 15 at the Art Museum.

The Ways and Means Committee of the Woman's Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a bridge luncheon to be given on the thirteenth floor of the Missouri Hotel, Thursday, at 1 o'clock. Mrs. P. M. Hucke of 3521 Park avenue, is chairman of the committee in charge.

Where the Samples Originate

They are gleaned from fashion showrooms of leading Eastern makers—from the foremost style creators—from the display rooms of prominent importers and designers.

What a Sample Sale Is in Reality

In most cases every garment is one of a kind, far superior in workmanship and combination of furs and fabrics than the usual coat. Designers vision and dream over their creation—the most skilled workers obtainable make them on an unlimited time schedule—even the furs have been more carefully selected than in most instances.

Sample Garments are conceded by many manufacturers to be 50% better than garments made for regular stock orders.

A Fashion as Well as Value Event

Hundreds of fashionably dressed women who seldom attend sales restock their wardrobes in this great event. These offerings are sponsored by the leading style creators.

Engagements and Weddings of the Week in St. Louis

Announcement has been made in Paris and Washington, D. C., of the engagement of Mlle. Youtana Romano Averrana, daughter of Baron Romano, former Italian Ambassador at Washington, D. C., and Vicomte Alain de Thieusies, counsellor of the Belgian Embassy in Paris. The wedding will take place in January at the Italian Embassy in Paris, where Baron Romano is now Ambassador.

The news is of interest here because of the prospective bride's late mother, who was Miss Jacqueline Taylor of St. Louis before her marriage. Mlle. Romano spent her childhood in Washington with her parents.

Mrs. Otto Gerdan, who was a recent visitor here, entertained with a dinner dance at her home in New York City Halloween when she announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Marguerite Gerdan, to Robert F. Raynolds, son of Mrs. Arjay Davies of Easton, Pa., and the late James W. Raynolds. Miss Gerdan is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ehlermann. She is a graduate of Miss Spence's School and is a member of the Junior League. Mr. Raynolds was graduated from Lafayette College, where he was a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Kreisman of 5787 Ridge avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lillian, to Manuel Siegel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Siegel, of Evansville, Ind.

Mrs. Sarah Johnson of 4111 Lindell boulevard, and Robert P. Patey of Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., were married Oct. 21 at the home of the bride, the Rev. L. R. Jenkins of the Grand Avenue Methodist Church officiating. They will make their home in St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman C. Waldman of 6 Arundel place have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Violet, to Mortimer J. Rosenblatt. The ceremony took place at the bride's home Oct. 27, Rabbi Leon Harrison officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Rosenblatt will make their home at 4409 West Pine boulevard after Dec. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. McClure of 5968 Wells avenue, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ruth, to Clarence E. Johnston, Oct. 19. The wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McClure.

The wedding of Miss Gertrude V. Hutchinson, daughter of the late James Hutchinson, to Sherwood Hinds, took place Thursday at the Holy Communion Episcopal Church. Among the guests were Mrs. Horace Roberts of Alhambra, Cal., sister of the bride, and Mrs. E. W. Baker of Flint, Mich., sister of the bridegroom.

A. L. Hawkins and Mrs. Veva Helen Harr of Jefferson City, Mo., were married Wednesday morning by the Rev. R. K. Keller of the Lafayette Park Baptist Church in the parlors of the Jefferson Hotel. Mr. Hawkins until recently was a resident of St. Louis. Mrs. Harr is the widow of the late Frank M. Harr of Kahoka, Mo., and formerly was Miss Veva Hume, daughter of the late J. R. Hume, pioneer banker of North Missouri.

The Central Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet tomorrow afternoon at the Kingshighway Presbyterian Church. Reports of the annual convention held in Kansas City will be read by Mrs. Keller Jarrett and Miss Fanny Robb. The organization will hold its annual bazar at the home of Mrs. James G. Nugent, 5847 Maple avenue, Nov. 19.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Hair Styles In Paris

By Edna Wallace Hopper

This is how girls and women were dressing hair in Paris when I was there last summer. Some have permanent waves, smooth and glossy. Some have one-week waves combed over the fingers. Some have sleek hair like a well-groomed boy's.

For all styles they use a new-type hair dress, such as I use. It keeps the wave or curl. Or it keeps hair fluffy, like my hair, if one desires. Or it keeps hair smooth and glossy without grease. At the same time it gives the hair a luster and enhances the color. I have never found a hair dress to compare.

All toilet counters now sell that hair dress as Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75 cents.

Whatever style of hair you like best, this is something you must try. It keeps the wave, the curl or the fluff. Or it keeps the hair sleek without grease. Then the added beauty it gives will amaze and delight you.

Jefferson Barracks

Capt. and Mrs. Carl A. Russell have arrived at Jefferson Barracks for duty. Capt. Russell has just completed his foreign service with the Philippine Department.

Mrs. A. T. Tully of Jacksonville, Fla., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. C. Garvin, wife of Lieut. Garvin, stationed at Jefferson Barracks.

The Sixth Regiment of the United States Infantry celebrated its regimental organization day last Thursday. In the morning a regimental parade and gymkana was held on the parade ground, and Col. Moor N. Falls, the commanding officer, gave a talk at the Post hall on the history of the Sixth Infantry.

A dance was held in the evening at the barracks for the enlisted personnel, and the officers and ladies of the regiment attended a supper dance at the Coronado Hotel.

Capt. and Mrs. Thomas S. Sinkler Jr. had a buffet supper at their quarters in Jefferson Barracks last Thursday evening before the organization day supper dance at the Coronado Hotel. Those invited were Maj. and Mrs. C. C. Staples, Maj. and Mrs. Charles A. Ross, Capt. and Mrs. Lloyd Zuppann, Capt. and Mrs. Frank E. Brokaw, Capt. Edward L. Moore, Capt. Ralph Slate, Mrs. Charles J. Goodfellow, Lieut. and Mrs. George J. Engelthaler and Lieut. and Mrs. John S. Miller.

Linen Shower for Newsboys.

The twentieth annual linen shower for Father Dunne's Newsboys will be held at the home, 3010 Washington boulevard, next Saturday afternoon from one to four. This shower is held each year to supply the Home with linen and clothing for the boys, about 100 of whom are usually quartered there. In 1906 Father Dunne established his Newsboys' Home for the care and education of destitute and friendless boys of all denominations. Although some money is obtained through sale of the Newsboys' Journal, a monthly publication printed in the home by the boys,

Best Way to Keep The Hair in Place

Whether your hair be straight or wavy, a few drops of liquid silmerine will keep it in place the longest time, even in most trying weather. And it is really beneficial to scalp and hair. Invigorates scalp, improves capillary circulation, and used before shampooing aids in eliminating dandruff, dirt, excess oiliness. This in turn helps keep the hair strong, healthy, beautiful, with a gleamy gloss as of "hidden sunshine."

Men and women alike who wear their hair straight find silmerine keeps it nice and smooth the entire day and evening, even where the hair is quite unruly. More effective, and cleaner than greasy, dust-collecting pomades. A boon to mothers.

To keep hair curly or wavy, silmerine is the ideal application, no matter in what style it is worn. The wavy effect appears so natural and lasts for days. Smart coiffures are more readily attained. Liquid silmerine gives a neat, well-groomed effect. At all druggists and beauty counters.

Why My Teeth Glisten

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Countless women ask me how I got my pretty teeth. I tell them simply what experts told to me. They told me to use Quindent.

Quindent, as the name implies, is five tooth pastes in one. It contains 16 ingredients. Some 50 experts collaborated in its development. It contains antacids, antiseptics, cleansers and polishers, iodides and deodorants. It is intended to supply, in one application, all that the teeth require.

They tell me that Quindent, developed by Quindent Laboratories, is the utmost in a tooth paste. And I believe it is. Certainly it has brought to me a beauty that I prize.

The makers supply me with samples, and I shall gladly mail a ten-day tube to anyone who asks. Please get that sample. I don't believe you will ever find a tooth paste to compare.

la Schanot, Miss Margaret Shreve, Miss Kathryn Cooper, Miss Dorothy Ruf, Miss Lucille Barton, Mrs. James C. Leigh and Mrs. Hamet Evans.

Prominent East St. Louis folk have three of the principal character parts in the production "The Giant Killer," which will be given the week of Nov. 28 at the Odeon in St. Louis. The Rev. Father Daniel A. Lord, the author of the play, is also directing the production which will be presented by a cast of 450 students of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade Conference. J. Jerry Kane Jr. of Veronica avenue and E. Fred Gerold Jr. of Washington place, have two of the principal male speaking parts, and Miss Thelma Coyne of North Eleventh street will also participate. Other East St. Louis talent will appear in the play.

Miss Florence Hardy of College avenue is visiting her brother, Ray Hardy, in Florida. Mr. Hardy will return to East St. Louis with his sister to make his home.

The Wednesday Club will have a concert in the lecture room of Ainad Temple Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 10.

Mrs. Henry B. Homrighausen of Lindorf Drive and Miss Winifred Gilligan, have issued invitations to a bridge luncheon to be given at the Forest Park Hotel Nov. 13.

Thomas P. May of Chicago was the guest during the past week of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Oswalt of Veronica avenue.

Of interest to both East St. Louis and St. Louis society was the wedding, Oct. 30, of Miss Helen Rhoades and Edward Schroeder. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Rhoades of 6221 Northwood street, St. Louis, and

Engagement Announced

MISS MARIE KANE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kane of East St. Louis, whose engagement to Henry Boehl of St. Louis was announced Thursday.

Mrs. Schroeder is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Schroeder of Brighton place, East St. Louis. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. S. Wilk of the Messiah Lutheran Church of St. Louis. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Gast of East St. Louis were the only attendants. Mrs. Schroeder is a graduate of Mary Institute and of Sullins College in Virginia. Mr. Schroeder has a degree from Washington University.

Mrs. Anita Hennessey, Mrs. J. Neville, Mrs. A. Studer, Mrs. J. M. Barnes and Mrs. H. Schonhoff were hostesses Friday afternoon at the benefit card party held at St. Patrick's Parish School Hall.

'The Giant Killer' Has Cast of 450

"THE GIANT-KILLER," a centennial mission masque, will be presented in six performances at the Odeon, beginning Sunday, Nov. 28. It was written by the Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S. J., playwright of St. Louis University, at the request of Archbishop John J. Glennon and in honor of the centennial of the Archdiocese of St. Louis.

The Rev. Mr. Lord recently returned from California, where he collaborated with Cecil de Mille in the production of "King of Kings," a portrayal of the last year of the life of Jesus Christ on earth.

Miss Josephine Bates of 4315 Westminster place and Miss Josephine Brinckwirth of 3742 West Pine boulevard are aiding in the preparations as graduate advisers to the Patroness' Committee of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade.

The Central Patroness' Committee is composed of girls of Visitation Academy, working under the direction of Miss Bates and Miss Brinckwirth, and is composed of Miss Mary Hayes, chairman; Helen Breck, Margaret Skinner and Josephine Flanigan.

Aiding them in the individual schools of the interunit organization are Miss Mary Powers of Webster College, Hortense Doyle of Maryville College, Agnes Reilly of Fontbonne College, Joseph Heffernan of St. Louis University, Dorothy Maurer of St. Mark's High School, Bernice Wolff of Loretto Academy, Thomas Marshall of Christian Brothers High School, Judith Heimer of St. Elizabeth's Academy, Mary Catherine Murray of Sacred Heart Academy, Rose Wackenheim of St. Anthony's High School, Marjorie Whalen of St. Joseph's Academy, Margaret Bronson of St. Alphonsus' High School, Elizabeth Dunne of Nerinx Hall of Webster Groves, and George Chopin of St. Louis University High School.

A cast of 450 students has been selected and is being instructed by 20 dramatic and dancing teachers in the various schools participating. The masque portrays in allegorical form, first the story of Jack the Giant-Killer, and then in realistic mode the struggle between Christianity and Paganism or unbelief.

Music and dancing are mingled with strong dramatic action throughout and in three stirring episodes the advance of Christianity in the Midwest and St. Louis in the past 100 years is shown by numerous tableaus and episodes.

Cornered!

Try your wits on a few questions the children ask!

Why does a ball bounce?
Why do the leaves change color?
What is the sun made of?
Why has water no taste?
Why is yawning catching?

The more they ask, the better, but be sure they have a way of getting the right answers for themselves, because if curiosity is discouraged the bright boy or girl may become stupid or indifferent. Over a million parents have already given their children

Children's Book Week

Make it a memorable week by giving your children The Book of Knowledge.

"If at just the right moment we present to the child just the right food for his curiosity and eagerness—folklore, fairy tale and fable, song, science, adventure, handicrafts and games, each when the appropriate faculty is unfolding—then we can keep him curious and eager all through his childhood. Nothing better can happen to a child.

"If, on the contrary, we provide insufficient reading matter we starve clamorous faculties. If we provide the wrong books, the child can't digest them and his appetite for reading may quickly be ruined. But if we follow the now available expert advice on the care and feeding of the child's mind we shall find that the average youngster is as well able as an adult to consume 'a book a week,' and we shall find that he thrives on the diet."

Trip To Keokuk For Late Fall Motoring

Great Water Power Project That Harnesses the Mississippi River Is Climax of 465-Mile Jaunt.

By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF.

He who thrills to the tug of motor power under foot when spinning along a highway may gain a new sensation of force by turning his wheels northward from St. Louis to Keokuk, Ia., just beyond the Missouri border.

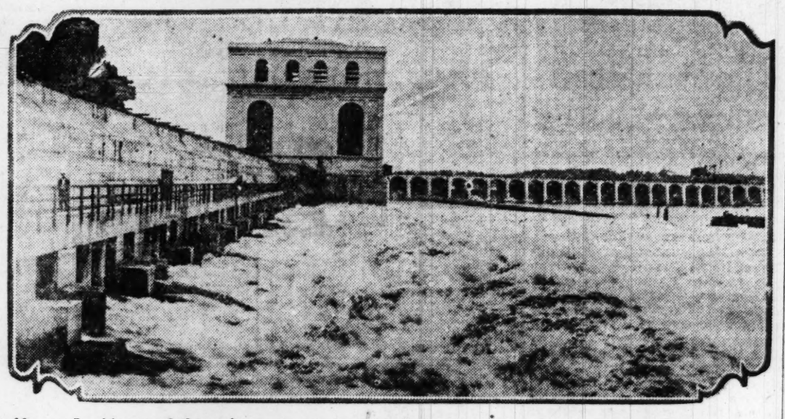
Let him approach through Illinois, glide down a bluff road and out on the jetty below the great dam there, leading to the bridge into Keokuk. Let him pause at the bend of the jetty and watch the swirling water, with ear attune to its swishing, wild music.

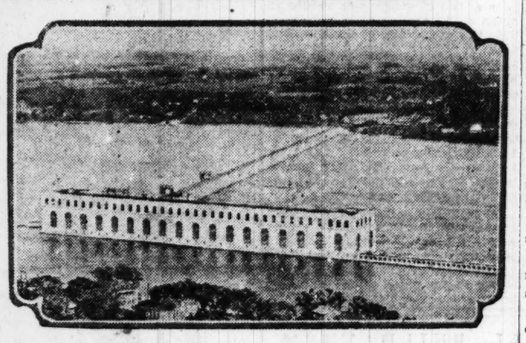
Force, restless force, plunging, pounding force it is; power to shame the Fearless Four, a straigh; eight or purring 12. Skidamaree, gypsy car of the Post-Dispatch stopped beside the torrent not long ago, like the discoverer of the Pacific, "silent upon a peak in Darien."

Majestic Spectacle.

Flung for a mile or so across the mighty Mississippi is the straight, stolid line of the concrete dam, ere, almost, is the irresistible force and the insurmountable object. But Keokuk is not impregnable. It achieves its object by letting the water pass under control. Through several score gates in its huge archesa the stream cascades into whirls, foam and waves, dashing against the rock-lined jetty and then resolving into level current on the way to the Gulf.

So much for a first and lasting impression of this triumph of man over nature. Keokuk is not the sole attraction of the round-trip tour of about 465 miles described here. There are interesting scenery, picturesque towns and the advantage of a circuit to avoid retracing any road. The city of Keokuk is a lively Iowa center, with good accommodations for the traveler. It has utilized the beauty of its river front for residences and a park in much greater proportion to its size than has St. Louis, where some still dream of a lengthy Mississippi parkway.





Above—Looking north from the downstream end of power dam in Mississippi River at Keokuk Ia. Below—Aerial view of lock, power house and dam at Keokuk.

Good Route to Keokuk.

A good route to Keokuk from St. Louis runs over about 250 miles of Illinois concrete. Follow the old familiar No. 3 through the Tri-Cities and Alton, thence over the pleasant hills of Jersey County and past quiet, old towns to the north. Jacksonville, the largest city in our neighboring State on this trip, after leaving Madison County, is 90 miles away. No. 3 jogs east at Jacksonville, then turns back for Beardstown, recently the victim of flood, where a new bridge across the Illinois River was opened a few days ago. It is followed north to Macomb and thence due west to Hamilton, a town looking down on Keokuk.

Much of this trip is over Illinois prairie, but that countryside has a certain charm, particularly now ere autumn color is wiped out. Descending into the river bottom from Hamilton, the motorist crosses an ancient covered bridge at a ravine and then Keokuk bursts upon him "Beneath the Great Water," ran an Indian legend, "are frightful monsters who devour travelers and their canoes, great demons whose roaring can be heard a long distance."

Such were the rapids at Keokuk which white pioneers named for the Des Moines River, which flows into the Father of Waters just downstream. Less than two decades ago a noted engineer, Hugh Cooper, built the dam and its accompanying powerhouse and locks. Force of the water accumulated behind this wall drives turbines in the house. Steamboats ply the locks. Today, the "great demons" of Keokuk are whirring dynamos held tight in metal cases of a bright building, but they are good genii, not frightful monsters, and their power moves the street cars and elevators of St. Louis, lights the lamps of Quincy, makes the glass of Crystal City and produces the

WOULD CANCEL LICENSES OF ALL DRUNKEN DRIVERS

Chairman of Automotive Men's Committee Urges Giving Police Necessary Power in All States.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Nov. 6.—David C. Fenner, chairman of the Motor Vehicle Conference Committee, speaking before the National Safety Congress here, urged that all states give their police the means of depriving drunken drivers of their licenses.

He pointed out that intoxication leads all other causes in the revocation of licenses in Michigan, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania.

If this condition now prevails in those states where drivers are first selected, and where the shadow of suspension and revocation hovers always over their heads, it must be more serious in states having no such laws, said Fenner. Only 19 states, he said, now require the licensing of operators.

Objection to extension of the requirement appears to be based on the notion that licensing may be used, as a means of taxation, or that the law may be unfairly operated. He believes that laws can be so drawn as to meet these objections.

The committee, of which Fenner is chairman, is a joint group from the American Automobile Association, the National Automobile Dealers' Association, the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers' Association, the Rubber Association of America and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

SURVEY OF HIGHWAYS IN SOUTHEAST MISSOURI

Conditions On 15 Federal and State Routes In Division No. 10 As Reported By Automobile Club.

By ROBERT H. HALL,
Press Bureau Automobile Club of Missouri.

The second of the surveys of the highway divisions in Missouri being undertaken by the Automobile Club of Missouri is based on Division No. 10 with headquarters at Sikeston. This division is of interest to St. Louis motorists secondary only to that in division No. 6, which includes St. Louis and 14 counties adjacent to it.

Three United States highways traversing Division No. 10 are Nos. 60, 61 and 67. There are 12 secondary highways—Nos. 21, 25, 34, 42, 51, 53, 55, 55A, 70, 74, 82 and 84.

Detour on No. 60 Off.

Of prime interest on Highway No. 60, Division No. 10, the announcement that the 10-mile detour from two miles east of the St. Francis River to a mile north of Dudley was eliminated yesterday when the main highway between the St. Francis River point and Dudley was opened to traffic.

Highway No. 60, from the Carter County line, which is the beginning of division No. 10, to Poplar Bluff, is a high type gravel road of 20 miles. Maintenance on this section is excellent from Dexter to Sikeston, where Nos. 60 and 61 intersect there are 14 miles of good gravel road and 10 miles of recently laid concrete on No. 60. From Sikeston to Charleston, a distance of 14 miles, there is concrete. From Sikeston to Charleston, a distance of 14 miles, there is concrete. From Charleston to Bird's Point there are 16 miles of good concrete. Birds Point, on the Mississippi, is immediate opposite Cairo, Ill. There is a ferry service every half hour during the day to the later city. This ferry service is to be maintainer throughout the winter.

Conditions on No. 61.

Considerable reconstruction work has been carried out on U. S. No. 61—the St. Louis-Cape Girardeau-Sikeston-Blytheville-Memphis route—75 miles from the St. Francis County line to Fredericktown. This stretch is finely maintained gravel.

From Fredericktown to Jackson, a distance of 40 miles, No. 61 is concreted, except for two miles north of Jackson, which is graveled. From Cape Girardeau through Sikeston and into New Madrid, a distance of 55 miles, No. 61 is graveled, except for seven miles of concrete immediately out of Cape Girardeau. From New Madrid through Portageville and Hayti to the Arkansas line, a distance of 58 miles, No. 61 is concreted, except for 20 miles of fair gravel immediately out of New Madrid.

Of prime interest on U. S. No. 67 is the new detour between Silva and Greenville, a distance of 14 miles. This detour runs west from Silva on No. 34 to Patterson, then south and east over a country road to Greenville. The country road section of this detour is graveled and passable, except that hard rains may cause inconvenience at fords. No. 67, from Fredericktown to Silva, a distance of 35 miles, is of gravel, in good condition. From Silva to Poplar Bluff, a distance of 44 miles, including the detour between Silva and Greenville, this highway is gravel, except for three miles of concrete. From Poplar Bluff to Neelyville, to the Arkansas State line, a distance of 24 miles, the highway is gravel, in good condition.

Many detours are found on State highways division No. 10, due to the extensive construction and reconstruction program.

Most of the work is graveling dirt stretches which have proved impassable when wet.

On No. 25, the Festus-Perryville-Jackson-Kennett highway, there is a detour between Jackson and Dexter. Due to construction south of Dutchtown, traffic is being de-

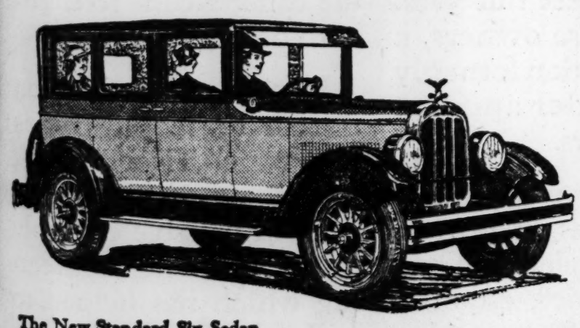
Chandler's new low prices astonish everybody!

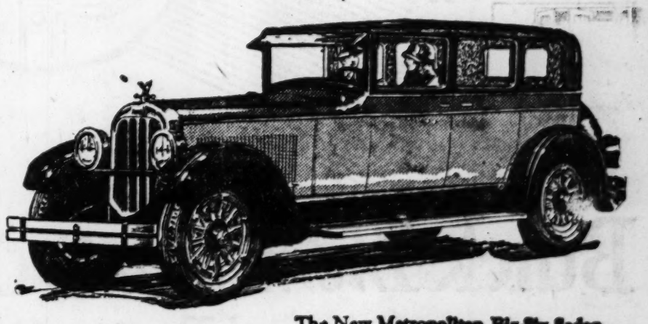


REFINED, improved, beautified—the finest cars that ever bore the name of Chandler—yet greatly reduced in price!

That is Chandler's message to the quality-car motorists of America.

After a demonstration of Chandler's lightning pick-up—Chandler's brute power—Chandler's endless endurance—nothing else could hardly satisfy you.

And Chandler, don't forget, is the only car in its price class that offers you the priceless advantage of centralized chassis lubrication. Every one of the nineteen new models has the Chandler "One Shot" System, whereby a mere press of your heel on a plunger lubricates the entire chassis!



The New Standard Six Sedan

Other great advantages offered in all models (without a penny's extra cost) include such features as an air cleaner; an oil purifier; 4-wheel brakes; thermostatic cooling; self-adjusting spring shackles, etc., etc., etc.

The new Chandler prices extend from $945 to $1795. Chandler certainly proves that the finest cars are not always the costliest—nor the costliest cars always the finest. Bring in your present car for appraisal.

WORK ON $7,600,000 PONTIAC PLANT AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

PONTIAC, Mich., Nov. 6.—The entire steel structural frame of the new $7,000,000 Pontiac six factory, that will contain 30 acres of floor space, has been erected slightly ahead of schedule, and work is now being rushed to cover the skeleton steel frame.

Previous to the laying of the foundation, practically a month was spent in leveling veritable mountains of dirt to produce a flat, level terrain. From the start of operations two tracks were laid for carrying the more than 100,000 tons of raw material. The 40 acres of cement and tile roof that has been ordered is said to be the largest order of this type ever placed in the cement and tile industry.

For the framework, 12,000 tons of structural steel were required and 500 tons of reinforcing steel.

The force rushing the factory to completion has been gradually augmented until at the present time there are 2000 men employed.

SURVEY OF ROADS IN SOUTHEAST MISSOURI MADE BY AUTO CLUB

toured from Jackson through Cape Girardeau to Sikeston on No. 61, thence to Dexter on No. 60.

From the Perry County line to Jackson, a distance of 17 miles, this highway is of gravel, in good condition. From Dexter, the end of the present detour, to Malden, a distance of 21 miles, the highway is graveled for 16 miles, the last five being dirt, in fair condition.

From Malden to Kennett, a distance of 34 miles, there are nine miles of concrete and 25 miles of gravel, in good condition. On this stretch a short detour over a gravel country road is encountered to Malden to Clarkton. From Kennett to Senath, a distance of 12 miles, the highway is concreted. From Senath to Cardwell to the Arkansas State line, a distance of 16 miles, concrete is traversed.

Route No. 21, the Ironton-Centerville-Doniphan highway, 26 miles in length, is almost wholly of dirt, except for 5.5 miles of good gravel south of the Carter County line and two miles of gravel south out of Doniphan.

There is also a very bad stretch on State Highway No. 53, from Poplar Bluff southeast to the St. Francis River. From Poplar Bluff to Dunklin County line the road is under construction and the old country dirt road is being used. This road is impassable when wet. It is recommended that any contemplating traversing this road consult the Touring Bureau of the Automobile Club in St. Louis or its branch at the Poplar Bluff Chamber of Commerce. From the St. Francis River to Holcomb, a distance of 17 miles, Highway No. 53 is of gravel, in good condition.

On No. 82, from Malden through Risco to United States No. 61 at Marston, a distance of 20 miles, the last nine miles are of graded dirt, very slippery when wet. The balance of the highway is six miles of concrete and five miles of gravel.

No. 84, from the Arkansas line to Hayti, is in very good condition. From the Arkansas line east to Kennett and to Hayti, a distance of 19 miles, the highway is concreted. From Hayti to Caruthersville, a distance of six miles, gravel is traversed.

No. 70, from Ironton to Fredericktown, a distance of 16 miles, has been graveled, as has Route No. 74, from Dutchtown to Cape Girardeau, a distance of 10 miles. No. 42, from Alton through Doniphan into Poplar Bluff, has been graveled in its entirety. This highway is 50 miles in length.

No. 51, from Perryville to the Bollinger County line to Advance, is impassable when wet.

No. 55, from Benton to Wolf Island, a distance of 40 miles, is in good condition. Three miles of this route out of Benton is of concrete, and the 16.5 miles to Charleston is graveled. From Charleston to Wolf Island, a distance of 20.8 miles, an excellent combination of gravel and concrete road is found.

TRIP TO KEOKUK MAKES INTERESTING LATE FALL TOUR

lead of Flat River.

Unseen, unheard, the transformed force of Keokuk moves down the Mississippi Valley on wires supported by towers like Martian soldiers of a Wells' imagination, which really are sentinels of commerce. The "Great Water" no longer devours travelers and canoes, but motorists may park their "boats" and have a guide show them the machinery the current operates.

South Through Missouri.

The Union Electric Light and Power Co. of St. Louis now controls and operates Keokuk as a unit of its widespread power system. The dam and auxiliary structures could they be laid down in St. Louis, would cover Olive stree from Broadway to Grand boulevard. The locks are as big as those of the Panama Canal. The turbine and revolving portion of each of the 15 generators weighs as much as 25 trolley cars, yet every time the motorman of the Spalding avenue "dinky" starts or stops, the generators' speed is changed. Keokuk, it may be perceived, catches the fancy.

But southward in Missouri lie the tourist's remaining 215 miles, over United States Highway No. 61. Skidamaree made this trip with ease a few days after torrential rains, but there are sections to be avoided when wet.

Go out Keokuk's bustling Main street, turn south on Fifth street, watch for a Burlington Railroad grade crossing and, 3.0 miles from "downtown," finds the highway slung on the sides of the railway's bridge over the Des Moines River. There Iowa ends and Missouri concrete greets the car. Two miles farther excellent gravel surface begins, in a fertile bottom. Wayland is the first Missouri village, at 12.6.

Th road improvement ends at 17.2, where a rather rough marked detour to the west is encountered State highway maintenance men keep the ruts fairly well dragged, and 25 to 30 miles an hour is possible. The countryside is woodsy and secluded. Fine gravel begins again at 38.0 and at 39.8 is Canton, home of Culver-Stockton College.

Continuing, the traveler sees the Mississippi half a mile to his left and a row of hills to his right. All around, the signs of late autumn and approaching winter, some bright, some somber, mark the landscape. La Grange, an old river town, is at 46.3. Skidamaree had the unusual experience, going south from there, of slipping through a flock of 2500 sheep on the way to pasture. Sheep follow their leader, but shepherds on this occasion were troubled by a hundred leaders. And don't think Mr. Ram will hurry for an automobile.

Through Mark Twain's Home.

The surface changed from gravel to a road of good, sandy nature at 53.7, and at 54.4 come the junction of the road running east to the bridge into Quincy. Gravel is resumed at 58.6, and concrete is a welcome sight at 64.5, entering Palmyra. Hannibal's business center is at 79.7.

As well speak of gasoline without thinking of John D. as mention Hannibal without reference to Mark Twain. The spirit of the great humorist and writer pervades the place and the scenes of his boyhood abound there. Notable are Becky Thatcher's cave, the new monument to Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, Twain's statue in Riverside Park, gazing over the river he loved; his old home and the printing shop where he gained the lure of type.

Fair gravel continues south on No. 61 to New London, a little county seat, at 90.3, and a dirt detour to the west at 91.0. Construction of new concrete pavement has been going forward steadily south of New London, and the detour crosses this work a number of times before ending at Frankford at 106.0. The detour is good enough driving when dry or fairly so, and traverses a pleasant country.

The old Pike County toll road is followed from Frankford to Rolla because of construction work on the highway. No toll is charged now. There are a few miles of rough dirt at the northern end and then excellent gravel. At 120.7 there is a view of the Mississippi and of Illinois from a hilltop that is hard to surpass. Louisiana, a river town whose citizens promoted a new highway bridge across the stream, now being constructed, is at 122.7.

There is a well-dragged dirt surface, with some rock and gravel, on No. 61 from Eolia (139.3) to 154.5, then good gravel to 154.5. Troy, seat of Lincoln County, is at 158.4, with more of the good dirt road to the south. A detour on good gravel begins at 162.9, Moscow Mills, turning into well-dragged earth, which the State has begun to gravel, at 168.5. This detour winds up in Flint Hill (171.0), and a narrow gravel stretch allowed to the junction with the Kansas City highway, at The St. Charles toll bridge 195.0, and then home is 30 to an hour away for St. Lo One route into the city pas Page avenue substation ceives the power of Keokuk

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT, BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

Buick Thermostatic Control provides smooth Engine Performance at 0° or 90° in the shade

Thermostatic Circulation Control is a new reason why the Buick engine is so easy to start and so pleasant to drive, in all kinds of weather.

Summer conditions prevail all year, under the Buick hood. At 90 degrees, or at zero, this valuable Buick improvement reduces the warming-up period to less than three minutes!

No water circulates through the Buick radiator until 120 degrees Fahrenheit, the best operating temperature, is reached. Then a valve automatically opens and circulation starts.

But the valve snaps shut, circulation quits, if for any reason the temperature drops below 120 degrees. Engine heat is thus stored for quick starting on cold days.

For this, and many other vital reasons, the 1927 Buick is the Greatest Ever Built. The engine is vibrationless beyond belief. Drive it and see what that means.

The PONTIAC SIX is Nationally Known for Inexpensive Upkeep

PONTIAC SIX $825 SEDAN OR COUPE

Today, only ten months since its introduction, the Pontiac Six has twice as many owners as any other new make of car ever won during its first full year. And of those owners, a large proportion formerly drove smaller and less powerful cars.

That they are enjoying the qualities of power, stamina, acceleration and comfort which establish the Pontiac Six as such a revolutionary value, goes without saying. But in addition, they are discovering that it either costs less to operate the Pontiac Six than smaller cars of less recent design, or that the difference is so slight as to be negligible.

In view of the thrilling performance abilities with which it is combined, such inexpensive upkeep is an impressive example of the brilliant engineering which has helped to make the Pontiac Six the most popular car of its type ever introduced.

"Yours or any other car will do well to climb the hill at all in high gear," he was told.

Frank Randall, service manager for Anthony, was at the wheel of the Packard eight for the test. He turned into Micheltorena street at 25 miles per hour and, entering the start of the grade, pushed his accelerator to the floor board. The car leaped up the 25 per cent grade with the two traffic officers in pursuit. At the top of the hill it was making 58 miles an hour.

Heinzelman Brakes give the Ford equalized braking power on all four wheels—as good as the best brakes on the most expensive cars.

They make your Ford safe in any emergency—

On slippery streets, at trolley or railroad crossings, in case of a broken rear axle, burned out transmission bands, or a sudden stop in traffic, you can always depend upon Heinzelman Brakes to stop your Ford quickly.

With Heinzelman Brakes you can stop in 15 feet when going 20 miles per hour, less than half the width of the ordinary street.

They stop your Ford without side skidding even or slippery streets. Eliminates brake band chatter and you stop quickly and quietly.

INNOVATIONS ON 1927 CARS VITAL IF NOT OBVIOUS

New Autos Not Greatly Different in Looks From Older Models but Operate More Easily.

Never were there fewer new features to be seen on a new array of automobiles, but never were there more innovations to be experienced in the actual driving and ownership of cars. The new improvements are something to be experienced rather than to be seen.

There are no radical and impressive changes, but when one climbs aboard the new car, one finds that it performs in a remarkably new way. The new car carries an extra supply of unexpected luxuries. It is the easiest car to take care of. It is the most economical to operate.

Against the six major automobile innovations—the self-starter, vacuum feed, enclosed bodies, full pressure lubrication, four-wheel brakes and balloon tires—weigh the six innovations for 1927:

Twenty-five miles to the gallon with an eight-cylinder engine.

Oil change only four times a year.

Closed car ventilation in a rainstorm.

Collisions without injury.

Air-cushioned upholstery.

Evidences of the coming of the greaseless car.

Better All-Around Design.

These six innovations have been achieved by the adoption of a long list of ingenious and practical appliances as well as through better design all around. Not all of these features are to be had on any one make of car, but the distribution is generous enough to make every buyer of the new models an enthusiast.

Great improvements in gasoline mileage have been made possible by a number of engine developments. One reason for the increase in mileage is the use of oil rectifiers and crankcase ventilation systems. In the case of rectification the gasoline that used to stay in the crankcase to contaminate the oil is now boiled out and passed back into the carburetor as useful fuel. In one crankcase ventilating system, a third of the air drawn into the engine through the carburetor comes from the crankcase. Naturally it uses much gas vapor that passes the rings and which otherwise would be wasted.

Another manufacturer has gone back to aluminum pistons. For a time aluminum seemed useless as a piston material, but this was due largely to injudicious design. Several manufacturers have met with singular success with aluminum alloys. Lighter pistons reduce the burden of the heat units in compressed and ignited gas vapor. They make for quicker acceleration and less vibration.

Rainproof Ventilation.

One car now is equipped with a special windshield which can be kept open during a rain storm without admitting water to the car. It fulfills that long-felt want for better closed car ventilation.

Collisions without injury sounds fanciful, but it is true. All-steel bodies can roll down embankments without crushing the occupants. With safety glass all around another of the many cars with low center of gravity can withstand a terrific impact without cutting up the occupants.

Cushions in one of the new models are equipped with air valves so that one is treated to the comforts of upholstery shock absorption. And this brings in the long list of comfort features.

The greaseless car is presaged in the adoption of rubber spring shackles. Rubber is taking the place of grease. The rubber spring may be next. Already several motors are cradled in rubber, which saves lubricating the trunnion support in the case of three-point suspension.

One of the most interesting innovations is found on a car that just has been announced. Flat springs are placed between the driven member of the clutch and its hub so that when the turning force of the engine is applied the clutch action is surprisingly cushioned.

New Steering Gears.

New type steering gears make parking simplicity itself by providing a means of making the wheels turn easiest when there is a maximum resistance. Another manufacturer has adopted a front wheel shimmy arrestor.

Two cars now are offering worm drive and a third has a great improvement over the conventional bevel gears. All this makes for silence in operation.

For the first time in many years, the improvements on the new models cannot be appreciated simply from visual inspection. Merely kicking the tires or lifting the hood gives no hint as to the real number and caliber of improvements. One must get at the wheel and get the feel.

SECRETS OF NEW AUTOS GUARDED BY THE FACTORIES

special creations reserved for the New York Automobile Show.

It amuses dealers, manufacturers and persons in close touch with the trade to hear the misguided prophets discussing the "disclosure" of automotive secrets.

It is customary for newspapers to receive publicity matter on new models and surprises about a week before release date.

Automobile trade papers do not give advance information, as the motorist generally believes. This impression is gained from the fact that persons not in the automobile trade are not entitled to subscription privileges. This ban on public subscriptions has nothing to do with keeping the public in the dark. It's just a matter of limiting subscriptions to the trade so that advertisers can get the sort of readers they prefer. These trade periodicals can be purchased from news dealers by order.

Trade Papers Uninformed.

Manufacturers do not give advance information to the trade papers because they do not want such knowledge to get into the hands of all of their dealers, particularly those handling competing cars. Only a few dealers know exactly what is coming in the line of new models and then the information usually is given only after the publicity department is ready.

A clear case of secret keeping is found in the recent springing of the Erskine Six at the Paris salon by the Studebaker Co. Everybody knew that the Willys-Overland organization was to bring out the Whippet because the Willys-Overland Co. wanted the fact to be publicly known. The Studebaker move, on the other hand, was a real coup. The secret was so closely guarded the trade was taken by surprise and hasn't quite recovered from the fact that this conservative organization is out with the first genuine European-type car.

Several Surprises Sprung.

What Ford finally does in a way of meeting his new competition will not be as the rumor mongers say. To say that Ford is going to adopt a three-speed transmission helps all of his four-cylinder competitors. To say that he is going to put out a six helps manufacturers of small sixes.

These experimental cars one sees in and around Detroit are a most effective camouflage. Several years ago, a big Detroit company placed an order for materials for an automatic transmission. The company that got the order told the world and the secret was out. So the car manufacturer sprung the surprise by canceling the order and not adopting the automatic device.

Since several manufacturers have done away with the yearly model business surprises are sprung in a most unexpected way. New and clever devices are on the cars and in use before competitors know anything about it. Several recent changes in the Dodge car illustrate this.

Where the public or the trade is let in on a secret, it is only because the manufacturer knows that he needs all the publicity he can get. One of the new cars to be announced very shortly has been known to the trade for quite some time. Nothing about the car is designed to put competitors into a spasm, but the public doubtless will be impressed. Thus, the manufacturer prefers to have rumors broadcast. To gain the attention of the public as he would like to probably will require, in addition a million or so spent in advertising.

ALL CARS ROYAL PARTY USED IN CAPITAL WERE PACKARDS

Sheridan Circle, Washington, had the appearance of an outdoor automobile salon during the visit of Queen Marie. Motor cars transported the Royal party to Mount Vernon, Annapolis and Baltimore and the United States Government, as host, had a fleet of machines waiting at the Rumanian Legation which was the home of the Royal party while there.

There were nearly as many body types as there were cars and all were Packard eights. Given an opportunity to select a type best suited for the occasion each time she left the Legation Queen Marie rode in open cars, standard limousines and different types of custom Packards.

From the station to the Legation on the arrival of the Royal party a standard sedan limousine was used. A Rolston cabriolet sedan carried the Queen to the White House on her visit to President Coolidge. For the White House dinner a Dietrich town car was selected. A fair day called for an open car for the tour to Mount Vernon and the Queen rode in a five-passenger phaeton. Vision, so that many points of interest could be seen, and protection from a drizzling rain were called for in the trip to Annapolis and Baltimore and a seven-passenger Holbrook inside drive limousine was chosen.

Packard cars were the vehicles selected by the City of New York for the reception to the Royal party. More than 20 Packard eights formed the procession from the Battery to the City Hall and after the reception there, to the Pennsylvania Station.

MORE ST. LOUISANS GO TO CALIFORNIA IN CARS

Winter Exodus Due to Publicity of Florida Hurricane, Says Auto Club Official.

The greatest exodus of St. Louisans to California for the winter months in the last five years is being made this year, according to George E. Drummond, manager of the touring department of the Automobile Club of Missouri. During the last four weeks an average of 53 St. Louisans have daily consulted the club's touring department relative to touring to California, and a check made by the club has shown that most of these motorists had Los Angeles, San Diego and other Southern California points as their objective.

The cause of the winter motoring trend to California is the result of the publicity given to Florida because of the hurricane which struck that part of the country, and the South has thus lost a great quota of its winter tourists, Drummond said. Last year and for several years previous Florida and other Southern Atlantic and Gulf points led in attracting local winter tourists, with California in third place.

The route most frequently used by tourists to California is from St Louis to Little Rock, thence to Dallas, and from there the Bankhead highway is traveled to El Paso. From El Paso, the junction of the Old Spanish Trail, and the Bankhead highway, the motorist tours to Phoenix, Ariz., and thence through Yuma to San Diego and to Los Angeles. This route is given preference over the Santa Fe trail to the North during the winter because less dirt is on the Southern route, and because of the warmer climate and lower altitude. Both routes have the same mileage. The distance from St. Louis to Los Angeles on each way is 2200 miles.

SPRINGFIELD-JOPLIN ROUTE TO SAN ANTONIO RECOMMENDED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Nov. 6.—One of the two routes from St. Louis to San Antonio, Tex., to be recommended for motorists by the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, passes through Springfield and Joplin, Mo., William H. Furlong, Director of the Highway Department of the San Antonio body, said here.

NEARLY HALF OF DODGE CAR BUYERS PAY CASH

This Is Treasurer's Statement After Check of About 40,000 Recent Sales.

DETROIT, Nov. 6.—Nearly half of the purchasers of Dodge Brothers cars pay cash, according to R. P. Fohey, treasurer of Dodge Brothers, Inc., after a statistical study of practically 40,000 recent sales made by dealers throughout the United States and Canada.

"To get an average of the prevalence of installment buying," said Fohey, "we took 39,095 sales of new cars made by our dealers over a period of several weeks and analyzed them. We found that 17,629, or 45.1 per cent of the buyers laid down the full amount when they took delivery of their cars and trucks.

"No exact figures are available for the industry as a whole, but the commonly accepted estimate is that only 20 per cent of motor car will turn out between 12,000 and 13,000 cars, against 6300 in 1925 and 3900 cars in 1924.

The success of both sixes and its buyers pay in full at time of delivery. For this reason I think the result of our analysis will surprise a good many people, particularly bankers."

In not a single district throughout the United States and Canada did the amount of cash transactions fall below 23 per cent, and in some districts cash sales amounted to more than 65 per cent of the dealers' total business.

Installment buying was found to be more prevalent in the New York district, with its large urban population than in the Omaha district, which includes much small town and rural territory. The average cash sales reported by Canadian dealers was 51 per cent, about 6 per cent higher than the figure for the United States.

"The conservative policy of Dodge Brothers dealers requiring a large down payment and not more than 12 monthly installments, has contributed to sound expansion of its business," said Mr. Fohey. "Dealers' total sales have in the first nine months of this year increased 41.5 per cent over the same period last year. True enough, if easier terms were permitted this increase in sales might have been larger. But the risks involved in a too loose credit policy are not worth taking.

"Theoretically, Dodge Brothers, Inc., has no interest in whether the dealer sells for cash or on installments; or whether the installment contracts are paid. This is because Dodge Brothers, Inc., gets its money from its dealers before cars are delivered."

ANTIFREEZE PREPARATION HAS GLYCERINE-ALCOHOL BASE

Whiz antifreeze (glycerine and alcohol base), is said to be a safe and most reliable preparation for preventing automobile circulating systems from freezing. It can be used with absolute safety, it is said, in all automobiles, including those having Knight sleeve valve motors. It will not injure or clog the circulating system of any automobile, or prevent the operation of thermostats. It will not attack aluminum or any other metal or damage rubber hose connections or gaskets.

Whiz antifreeze will prevent freezing at any temperature as low as 20 degrees below zero.

The preparation is distributed from a St. Louis branch by the manufacturer, the R. M. Hollingshead Co., Camden, N. J. C. A. Clennin is branch manager.

60 PCT. INCREASE IN SHIPMENTS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 6.—A 60 per cent increase in shipments for October, as compared with the same month in 1925, is reported by the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. The total shipments last month were 3150 cars, both Paiges and Jewetts. October's gain over September was 14 per cent.

The Paige factory is in full production, after delays incidental to the changing of its lines and the procuring of new bodies in quantity. It is now manufacturing three series of cars, the Jewett 6-45, the Paige 6-65 and the Paige 6-75, with a price range for five different models of five-passenger closed cars from $1195 to $1695.

KEEPS ENGINE OPERATING AT EFFICIENT TEMPERATURE

Driving with the "choke" out in cool weather is one of the chief causes of engine wear. Many motorists are obliged to do this in early fall, winter and spring to get their cars to run smoothly.

Investigation shows that the flood of gasoline pumped into the cylinders is not ignited by the explosion and drains down the cylinder walls into the crankcase and dilutes the oil. The oil is reduced in effectiveness and the waste gasoline washes away the oil film on the cylinder walls and causes metal to rub against metal. Scoring of the cylinder walls and other costly damage results.

As soon as the weather becomes so cool (60 degrees Fahrenheit) that it is necessary to use the "choke," drivers should remedy this situation. To assure complete combustion, the engine should become heated immediately. This is impossible in cool weather because the rush of cool air which the fan supplies to the motor on starting prevents the engine from obtaining its proper temperature.

A method of controlling this situation is by controlling the air which comes through the radiator. This can be accomplished by means of the Pines Automatic Winterfront which controls the air supply. The shutters are connected with a thermostat which on cool days allows the shutters to close until the engine has attained its proper heat. When this is accomplished, the shutters are automatically opened, but close again if the temperature of the motor becomes too low.

In the "One Shot" filing system of chassis lubrication used by Chandler, oil is strained through finely-meshed brass screens before entering the durable copper lines.

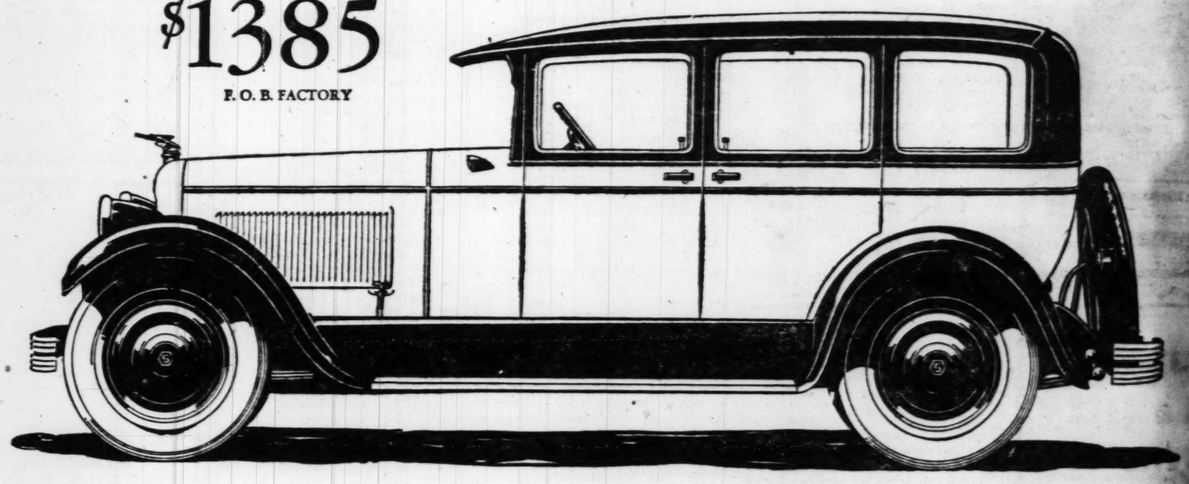
A New One-Profit Value
—most powerful sedan of its size
Studebaker Standard Six Custom Sedan

$1385
F. O. B. FACTORY



THE Studebaker Standard Six Custom Sedan is a signal example of the benefits of One-Profit manufacture.

In this new custom creation, Studebaker stamina and performance are cloaked in luxurious beauty. The long, low-swung steel body—full-visioned for safety—is custom in line and symmetry, and custom in its color scheme of gleaming duotone lacquers.

Its custom interior is a symphony of soft color tones—carried out in rich Chase mohair upholstery, broadlace trim, silken curtains—even in its two-tone lacquered instrument board.

To assure a custom total, Studebaker has added over $100 worth of extra equipment without extra cost. An exclusive feature is the patented Studebaker ventilating windshield—draftless, rainproof even in a severe storm, but insuring a constant circulation of fresh air.

The Standard Six motor is of the quiet Studebaker L-head type with vibration reduced to a minimum by Studebaker's big crankshaft fully machined and dynamically balanced. This famous motor is the most powerful in any car of its size and weight, according to the ratings of the Society of Automotive Engineers—and its long-life is attested by more than 900 Studebaker owners who have driven their cars from 100,000 to 300,000 miles.

Until you have ridden in this Studebaker Custom Sedan, you will never know how much your automobile dollar will buy. Come in now and see this crowning triumph of Studebaker One-Profit value.

EDICTS NEW AUTO PRODUCTION RECORD

tional Auto C. of C. Manger Foresees 1926 Beating 1925 by 160,000 Vehicles.

utomobile production this year exceed that of 1925 by 160,000 icles, according to Alfred eves, general manager of the tional Automobile Chamber of mmerce.

Addressing the Washington apter of the American Institute Banking, Reeves also predicted the total motor car production in 1926 would be approximately 4,500,000, of which 550,000 uld go to 95 foreign countries. tember production, he said, was per cent greater than last year. Contradicting recent statements Senator Couzens of Michigan, t installment selling is bad business policy, Reeves told the Washton bankers that installment ng greatly aids national prosrity. He declared that of $6,000,000 worth of goods bought nually on a credit basis, $3,000,000 is for automobiles.

eeves declared that 90 per cent the buying in the automobile stry is sound economically and t the industry itself, for its own tection, is endeavoring to eliminate the 10 per cent that is unund.

t is interesting to note, he said, t since the beginning of the od of huge installment buying automobiles, all records have broken for the number of savbank depositors and the number of homes built.

$2,000,000 IN SALES OF NEW PIERCE-ARROWS IN 30 DAYS

Sales within 30 days of over $2,000,000 worth of Series 36 models, Pierce-Arrow's new dual valve six cars, have been announced by L. E. Corcoran, general sales manager of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Co.

This record is all the more remarkable, said Corcoran, because the new Pierce-Arrow has not been on the market long enough to enable the factory to supply display cars to all dealers.

The new Series 36 develops over 100 horse-power, yet it is said to be extremely economical in gasoline for a car of 138-inch wheelbase. Many refinements have been made in the dual valve engine, including an improved hot-air stove which heats the air before it goes to the carburetor.

Six-ply balloon tires, 33x6.75, cushion the car, in addition to the unusually long springs, controlled by Houdaille shock absorbers. Pierce-Arrow air-cooled safety brakes, operated by a vacuum booster brake which gently releases a pressure of 280 pounds with a light touch on the pedal, provide greater safety.

Series 36 bodies are custom built in Pierce-Arrow's body factory at Buffalo. Tough Northern white ash is used for the frame, covered with thick aluminum plates. Body frames are joined with triple-strength laminated joints.

A durable exterior surface is obtained by a nictrocellulose lacquer process which has all the beauty and gloss of paint, but is more resistant to scratching and marring. It may be obtained in any color combination.

The interior of the Series 36 car is furnished with gold-plated hardware, inlaid vanity and smoking cases and the costliest of fabrics.

Unusual features include a dual windshield wiper which cleans the entire glass, battery box and tool box built in the fenders, a patented oil filter and a gasoline filter.

Prices of the 15 body types range from $5875 to $8000 at Buffalo, plus tax.

PIONEER AUTO SERVICE CORP. MOVES ITS GENERAL OFFICE

The Pioneer Auto Service Corporation has moved its general offices from the Planters Building to the Pioneer Building, at 4917-23 Delmar boulevard, which it purchased. The Pioneer Battery Station also has been moved from 3977 Delmar boulevard to 715 Aubert avenue, around the corner from the general offices.

These offices will be open day and night to give service to members of the organization. Officers of the corporation are: L. H. Kern, president; M. Goldberg, vice president, and C. G. Rodin, secretary and treasurer.

BUICK RETAIL DELIVERIES IN 1926 ALREADY EXCEED 1925

Although retail deliveries for the last three months of 1926 are yet to be compiled, the Buick Motor Co. has already sold more cars this year than were delivered to owners during 1925.

This new record for any calendar year was announced by E. T. Strong, Buick general sales manager. Strong said the total retail deliveries from January to September, inclusive, amounted to 202,368 cars. The record for the entire year 1925 was 200,041 cars.

Strong also announced that this nine months' record exceeds by 57,416 cars the record of Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1925. It shows a gain for 1926 far in excess of the gain registered by the industry as a whole.

Strong predicts a new 12-month record by the end of December as a result of the demand for the present Buick model.

Stutz Official Visits St. Louis.

W. O. Hopkins, district sales manager of the Stutz Motor Car Co., Indianapolis, was in St. Louis last week looking over the territory. He visited the Benjamin Motor Car Co., distributer of Stutz cars, and said prospects for increased business were excellent.

"BIG SIX" VICTORIA ADDED TO STUDEBAKER CUSTOM LINE

A Big Six custom victoria, the latest addition to the Studebaker custom line of closed cars, is being shown by the Weber Motor Car Co. This newcomer to the ranks of custom quality combines with the beauty, refinement and comfort of the custom sedans, the intimacy and smartness of the coupe—and in addition, the power of the "Big Six" engine.

In this victoria there is ample seating room for four adult passengers, yet there is not the slightest suggestion of bulk in its trim lines. Two passengers may be carried in the wide lounge seat which is at the right and in the rear of the driver's seat. A third passenger may ride in the auxiliary seat.

Directly behind the driver's seat is a compartment for small parcels, a notable shopping convenience. Under the rear deck is a commodious locker for baggage.

The body has a lacquer finish of Croatan green with ebony belt striped in ivory. The interior is finished in rich, harmonizing tones. Upholstery is in fine Chase mohair with broadlace trim. Butler finish hardware, opal iridescent dome-light, silken window shades and toggle grip reflect the completeness of appointments.

The instrument board carries an engine thermometer, hydrostatic gasoline gauge, speedometer, ammeter and oil pressure gauge grouped under glass and illuminated by indirect light. On the top of the steering column is the control lever for the two-beam acorn headlights. A coincidental lock to ignition and steering gear is controlled by the key which unlocks the door, spare tire lock and rear deck compartment.

Standard equipment on the Big Six custom victoria includes four-wheel brakes of Studebaker design, disc wheels, full size balloon tires, front and rear bumpers, automatic windshield cleaner, rear vision mirror and rear traffic signal light. On the radiator cap is the silvered figure of Atalanta, the Studebaker emblem.

'SINCLAIR MOBILENE' BEING SOLD BY PURITAN OIL CORP

The Puritan Oil Corporation, distributors of Sinclair products in this district, are marketing a 100 per cent Pennsylvania oil known as "Sinclair Mobilene" to meet the demand of motorists for a high heat resisting oil.

Sinclair has for years recommended an entirely different basis for the application of motor oil than that found on the usual recommendation charts. Many companies on their recommendation charts hold that a certain body of oil should be used in the winter and a heavier one for the summer. Sinclair, however, insists that where oil is to serve the lubricating and sealing compression, heavier oil should only be used as per the degree of wear that the engine has had. An engine that has gone 10,000 miles would need a heavier oil to give perfect lubrication and absolutely seal the compression than one that had been driven 1000 or 2000 miles. It is also claimed that on a very cold morning after the engine has been run but a few blocks, the temperature is virtually the same as it would be on the hottest day, and that before the motor is thoroughly warmed, a heavy bodied oil is needed because of contraction of the metal.

$84,939,373 TAX ON AUTO 'GAS' PAID IN SIX MONTHS

Taxes on gasoline used in motor vehicles amounted to $84,939,373 in the first six months of 1926, according to the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. This amount was made available as follows: $54,981,677 to State highway departments, $19,338,976 for county and local roads, $6,329,413 for State and county road bonds and $4,140,998 for miscellaneous purposes.

A total of 3,560,987,586 gallons of gasoline were taxed and it is estimated that an additional 856,450,000 gallons were consumed in the four states in which taxes are not collected. All of the states, except Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York imposed a gasoline tax, the rate ranging from 1 to 5 cents with an average of 2.39 cents per gallon. Since 19,697,832 motor vehicles were registered in the six months period, the gasoline consumption per vehicle averaged 225 gallons.

Gasoline taxes were first imposed in 1919 when four States adopted the tax and derived a revenue of a little more than $1,000,000. The practice is now general and the revenue derived is one of the most important sources of highway income.

HARDEST DIAMOND USED IN MAKING CHEVROLET CARS

The hardest diamond in the world is the property of the Chevrolet Motor Co., which has used the big diamond continuously during the last 10 years in the dressing of abrasive wheels for precision grinding necessary to meet the Chevrolet standards of accuracy.

Due to its extreme hardness, "C-66," as the gem is designated in Chevrolet records, has outlived probably $200,000 worth of diamonds used by the company.

F. W. Smith, grinding engineer of the General Motors Corporation, and inventor of a patented method for setting grinding diamonds, contends that "Old C-66" is a freak.

"It is a South American black diamond originally weighing about 30 carats," he said. "Today, after 10 years of continuous service in trueing the grinding wheels used on piston jobs, it still weighs 25 carats. An ordinary grinding diamond would have worn out years ago. 'Old C-66' is so hard that it requires resetting only about three times a year. Only diamond trueing will give the absolute accuracy essential on a wheel used in sizing such important parts as engine bearings and pistons."

NEW STUTZ EIGHT WON THREE BIG EVENTS IN FIRST YEAR

"The New Safety Stutz," a publication gotten out by the Stutz Motor Car Co., received by the Benjamin Motor Co., Stutz distributors, tells of the success achieved by the new Stutz eight in its first year. Its achievements include winning of the Yosemite run by a Stutz sedan, and of the Pikes Peak climb by a Stutz special, and of the Spokane style show grand prize by a Stutz brougham.

"From all over the country," said Jerome J. Benjamin, president of the local firm, "we are receiving good news about our car. Owners in St. Louis who have driven Stutz cars for eight or 10 months are writing us and telling us how well pleased they are with them and how wonderfully they perform."

Benjamin said that at his recent visit to St. Louis, Graham McNamee, nationally known radio announcer, chose a Stutz touring car during his stay here. A. W. McMahon, advertising manager for the Benjamin Co., was driving McNamee from his hotel to the Coliseum where he was to speak at the radio exposition. After several minutes McNamee said, "Say, don't let's go to work—let's ride around in this car."

Car Driven 71,700 Miles in 10 Months.

The Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. reports that it purchased an Oakland two-door sedan in September, 1925, for tire testing. The car was loaded with dead weight and up to July 1 had been driven 71,700 miles at a maintenance cost of $129, including $10 for repairs following a collision.

"They Like The Whisper of The Eight"

"Here's what people like about the Jordan—that smooth—velvety—fascinating power-without-fuss—all cylinders in silent unison with an irresistible pull. Soft—positive—noiseless—the sensation of steam—the whisper of the Eight."

—from a letter from a Jordan owner

OF course they like the feeling of cozy warmth—the broad, unobstructed vision—the satisfying comfort—the sensation of all-steel safety—the cleanliness—the simplicity—the rich fabrics in pleasing colors—the old New England hardware—the optional colors—all the things that good taste dictates.

People have learned to expect them in the Jordan.

But the motor with a smoothness you have rarely felt—yet with a wallop that thrills you the moment that you touch the throttle—that's the thing.

It's the kind of a car that women like to drive—that seasoned owners never tire of—that the small boys point to in the traffic.

Balanced—low to the ground—fast. Steers at a touch. Parks with pleasing ease. The most economical car to operate and service, that we have ever built.

That's the Jordan.

Ask us to arrange an hour's drive for you. That's all we ask.

NEW CONCRETE ROADS INSPIRE ILLINOIS TOWNS

Business Necessity Causes Many to Pave Routes to Link With Highways.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Nov. 6.—Civic pride and business necessity are driving many of the villages and smaller towns along the new concrete roads in Illinois to a policy of "sprucing up," to use a colloquialism. Where one of the new pavements goes through or near a town, in most instances, it had the effect of stimulating a desire for more. In scores of instances in Central Illinois, either a new pavement was laid to connect the community with the new state highway, or if the latter went through the center of the community, parallel or intersecting streets were paved. When route No. 10 of the state bond issue, skirted the village of Cerro Gordo, the residents appeared to realize for the first time the need of pavements. The main street of the village, as well as several intersecting streets were paved, thus bringing the roadways upon a par with the State improvement, thus inviting motor tourists to drop in, and eliminating the isolation certain had the community remained in the mud.

Windsor is another illustration. Two of the State roads were built a short distance from the town. Immediately a municipal pavement system was authorized and the streets of the village were connected with the new hard roads.

One of the State bond issued roads missed Milmine by ½ mile. The residents lost no time in building a connection.

In Moweaqua, Route No. 2, of the State system goes through the center of the village, but the taxpayers paid the additional expense to have the highway widened so as to supply ample room for traffic, while other streetfs were improved to connect.

Monticello, after getting one of the hard roads, launched a campaign for paving many blocks in the business and residential districts.

Fairbury and El Paso, on Route 8, also paved numerous blocks after the hard road came through. The list of villages and towns which took similar action, could be multiplied indefinitely.

The improvements to farms is also noticeable. Concrete driveways connecting the homestead with the new pavement, are becoming more frequent, while fences are being painted and kept in good condition and premises generally improved where they face upon the new highways.

In addition, counties all over the State are awaiting the location of the second series of bond issue roads so that they can launch a comprehensive system of concrete or gravel construction to connect with them. Many thousand miles of important laterals of this nature will be laid in the coming years. The suburban area of the larger cities, is also being extended more rapidly due to the construction of the new pavements, primarily in the direction of these arteries of traffic.

MARBLE MAP OF MISSOURI PRESENTED TO AUTO CLUB

Engraved Slab of Carthage Stone to Be Shown by Touring Department.

A four-foot square slab of Carthage marble upon which has been engraved a map of Missouri showing the entire highway system of the State, has been presented to the Automobile Club of Missouri, by the Carthage Marble and White Lime Co. of St. Louis and Carthage. The map was given to the Auto Club through the courtesy of Geore S. Beimdiek, eneral manager of the marble company with offices in St. Louis. It will be placed on permanent display in the touring department of the club.

The marble map, the only one of its kind in the State, with the exception of one recently presented to the State museum in the Capitol Building at Jefferson City, has been a feature of the stoneworkers' display at the Greater St. Louis Exposition at Forest Park. The greater part of two months was consumed in the engraving of the map on the face of the slab.

RACES WITH WOMEN DRIVERS ON SPEEDWAYS SUGGESTED

Proposal Made to A. A. A. Contest Board to Admit Them to Events in Bowls.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—An enlarged program of automobile racing activity looking to the promotion of the sport, the betterment of driving and the improvement of automobiles generally, was adopted here at the first meeting of the new Contest Board of the American Automobile Association.

One suggestion was that the board sanction races which would enable women drivers to compete and to promote greater interest in racing and in driving among the millions of women car owners.

The Society of Automotive Engineers was requested to make a technical study of major A. A. A. racing events and report on the operation of various makes of cars and accessories. This data would be available to the manufacturers and such of it as would interest the public would be published.

POSITIVE AUTOMATIC LOCKING DEVICE IS ON NEW OLDSMOBILE CAR

POSITIVE automatic locking device on the new Oldsmobile series "E" cars is on the instrument panel within easy reach of the driver. It is built with the ignition switch and induction coil, all protected in a sealed steel housing. The construction is such as to baffle and discourage thieves and prevents their "cutting over" the switch by rewiring.

After the key has unlocked the ignition, it becomes an obstacle to turning on the ignition switch. Therefore, the key must be removed from the lock to start the engine. This is the first safeguard forcing the driver to pocket his key before he starts his engine and preventing his putting it back in the switch until the ignition has again been locked as a steel disc closes the keyhole when the switch is turned on. The final safeguard is the fact that the switch automatically locks the car when the ignition is turned off.

Owing to protests of many automobile owners against having to protect their cars, Oldsmobile found it necessary to modify the lock with a "curb stop" position for the switch. This requires so sensitive a touch that care must be taken not to lock the car when the "curb-stop" position is desired. When the switch is completely closed, the car is safely locked against the most expert thieves.

STUDEBAKER TO BUILD NEW ERSKINE '6' IN DETROIT PLANT

Plans for production of the new Erskine six of the Studebaker Corporation are rapidly being formulated. It has been decided to carry on production in the company's Detroit plant, and thus there will be no heavy expenditure for new equipment. The present schedule calls for an output of 100 cars a day. The new car will be shown in this country for the first time at the New York show, when it will be presented in three body styles: sedan, coupe and touring.

Studebaker dealers are in exceptionally good condition. Despite sales of 30,000 cars in the third quarter, making a total volume of sales of 80,000 for the three quarters, stocks in dealers' hands are extremely low. At present the cars on hand with dealers totals 15,679, against a peak of 23,497 in March. The low for the year was 12,997, while at this time a year ago the stocks were 18,540.

ALCOHOL SAID TO BE EFFECTIVE FOR WATER PLUGS IN WINTER

In support of the advantages of denatured alcohol as an antifreeze the Industrial Alcohol Manufacturers' Association has issued a statement citing a recent finding of the Fire Underwriters' Bureau of New England.

"This fire underwriters' association," the statement says, "made an exhaustive study of various antifreeze solutions in their efforts to combat the fire menace caused by frozen water plugs and fire extinguishers in cold weather.

"In their Bulletin No. 122 the statement is made that denatured alcohol is very effective for the purpose.

"Denatured alcohol has no injurious action on metal or rubber.

"It was found that 5 per cent of alcohol in water lowered the freezing point to 30 degrees Fahrenheit. Thirty-five per cent of alcohol shot the freezing point down to 10 degrees below zero Fahrenheit."

LARGE ADDITION TO REO MOTOR FACTORY COMPLETED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LANSING, Mich., Nov. 6.—To speed up shipping and to provide additional warehouse accommodations, the Reo Motor Car Co. has completed a large addition to the factory.

The building was erected at a cost of approximately $50,000, is 576 feet long, 200 feet wide and three stories high. The framework required 2100 tons of structural steel and 1,500,000 bricks were used in construction.

The special flooring material, for the second and third stories, is three-inch dressed and matched yellow pine and more than 60 freight cars transported the 700,000 board feet required. It took 230,400 board feet of maple flooring to surface the two upper floors. The first floor is covered with treated wood blocks.

WORK ON NEW HIGHWAY TO MEXICAN PORT TO BEGIN SOON

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DURANGO, Mexico, Nov. 6.—Construction of a highway between Durango and the port of Mazatlan, on the Pacific Coast, is to be started as soon as the contract is awarded and equipment and materials assembled, it is announced by the State Government. This road will cross the Sierra Madre at an altitude of 7000 to 9000 feet, and will afford some of the most magnificent scenic views in Mexico.

HOW TO GET CAR READY FOR WINTER EXPLAINED

Neglect Now Means Costly Repairs for Motorists in Cold Weather.

By GEORGE W. SUTTON JR.

It means greatly increased expense if one neglects to take precautions now to protect his automobile from a winter which, it is predicted, is to be unusually cold and unpleasant. The first precaution is to make sure that the water in the cooling system cannot freeze. A neglect of this detail until after the first sudden cold snap may result in heavy expense. This means either that the radiator must be emptied every night and whenever a long stop is made in cold weather, or that some anti-freeze solution must be put in the radiator. There are several of these. Alcohol is well-known to the average motorist. There are several new ones, however, including glycerine, which have much to recommend them for engine protection in cold weather.

Glycerine, a by-product of soap manufacture, has been suspected of a tendency to eat into metal and rubber hose connections. This is not true, according to a report by the United States Bureau of Standards, when the glycerine is of the chemically pure neutral type, as prepared for radiator use by the larger soap makers. The fallacy is doubtless due to the fact that glycerine will seep out of tiny openings through which water could not pass or, if it did pass would be evaporated immediately by the engine heat and the air. Glycerine will not evaporate and therein lies one of its greatest values to the motorist. You can fill your radiator with the proper solution of glycerine anti-freeze solution and water and never give it another thought throughout the winter except to replenish with a pint or so of water every few weeks.

Advantage of Glycerine.

The great precaution that must be taken before glycerine is put in is to have the water circulation system completely tightened and, if necessary, new hose connections installed.

Several other advantages of glycerine are that it has an extremely low freezing point, a boiling point somewhat higher than water so it will not cause engine overheating, it will not harm body finish at all and is free from objectionable odor. Its flow, even in the coldest weather, never becomes sluggish enough to interfere with the cooling properties of the solution.

There are several other commercial anti-freeze mixtures on the market which have similar advantages but have as bases other chemical compounds.

Racing an engine to get it warmed up on a cold morning and running with open choke are two of the high crimes of motoring which are costing car owners millions of dollars annually. When the engine is cold the oil in it is more or less congealed and, for several minutes after the start, many of the parts are rubbing against each other practically without lubrication, a dangerous condition for cylinder walls, pistons, bearings and other expensive parts.

Preparation Cost Small.

Somewhat the same situation is produced by running it with the choke open. In this case the cylinders receive an overabundance of raw gasoline which works down past the pistons, taking much of the lubricating oil with it and forming in the crankcase a weak, watery mixture which has little lubricating value. The remedy for both these ills is to run the engine slowly with the spark retarded and radiator shutter closed in the garage for five or six minutes before starting out. But be sure that the windows and the doors of the garage are open. Deaths from the carbon-monoxide poisoning of automobile exhausts are increasing annually and are unnecessary and easily avoidable.

To have your service station prepare your car for the winter will cost a very few dollars but will return to you a great many dollars in satisfactory winter motoring and in the avoidance of the damage which carelessness causes at this time of year. A cleaning and winter adjustment of the carburetor, the installation of an automatic or hand operated radiator shutter if your car is not equipped with one, a complete cleaning out of the water system before the anti-freeze solution is put in and of the crankcase before the lighter grade of oil is put in for winter use, a cleaning of the spark plugs, the oil purifier, the distributer and the gasoline tank and fuel lines are some of the inexpensive things that should be done in order to secure placid and trouble-free winter driving. On account of the greater number of cold starts in winter the oil should be completely changed every 500 miles, even in most of the cars equipped with thermostatic water control, oil filters and crankcase ventilation systems.

Battery Requires Care.

The battery will make a lot of trouble in winter if abused. Starting more frequently in winter and using the lights more makes the battery work overtime. The water should be kept constantly at the proper level and the battery should be kept charged, to avoid its freezing or quitting cold some night.

It pays handsomely to leave a car in the garage when the roads are full of jagged ice and deep frozen ruts and to use a taxi-cab for necessary errands. Winter is a particularly hard time for tires, and driving them at high speed over sharp ice and ruts costs a lot of money. Wet rubber cuts more easily than dry rubber, and a weekly inspection of the tires should be made and all small cuts and scratches filled with rubber cement. Tires are much better than they used to be but even the best of them can have thousands of miles of service taken out by careless treatment in winter. Proper tire inflation becomes especially important in the cold season.

A garage heater to take the chill off the car, an easily installed tonneau heater to keep passengers comfortable, lap robes, foot warmers, automatic windshield wipers with double blades, radiator anti-leak solutions, spring covers, winter tops for open cars and, most important, loosely applied skid chains for slippery days—all increase comfort, safety, economy and efficiency of winter driving.

A Laxative to Rely On

Take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for Constipation. Mild and Gentle. Never Loses its Good Effect

YOU know how much more difficult it is each year as you get older to avoid the ill effects of chronic constipation. The stomach and bowel muscles relax as age advances, and as you are naturally less active, in time they work only with stimulation. You try dieting and exercise,—then take medicine. All medicines, however, are not suited to elderly people any more than to children, so you will be glad to know of a particular medicine that acts as near to nature as has yet been found. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin. It acts mildly, gently and without griping. It so trains the stomach and bowel muscles that in time medicine of all kinds can be dispensed with. When people learn of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and see how wonderfully it acts they realize how unnecessary it is to use drastic salt waters, pills and powders, for these do but temporary good and are weakening to most constitutions. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, on the contrary, is so natural and safe (it contains no narcotic or strong drugs) that generations of mothers have given it to their babies.

Take a spoonful the next time you are constipated, or have any ailment due to constipation such as biliousness, headache, bad breath or indigestion. If Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should ever fail to do as claimed, you can have your money refunded. More people use it than any other laxative in the world.

5000 PICTURES EXHIBITED IN PARIS AUTUMN SALON

Financial and Economic Situation Fails to Affect Production of Ultra-Modern Art.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—The financial and economic situation in France seems to have left the production of ultra-modern art untouched, as there are more than 500 canvases before the jury passing on the autumn salon, which opened today.

Cubists, futurists and impressionists, have been about 50 per cent busier during the last year than in 1925, when only 3600 canvases were offered and less than 3000 shown. The severity of the jury's judgment has increased in even a greater proportion because this years' show comprises a more than usually liberal representation of retrospective art. There is less room for freaks.

The retrospectives include an important exhibit of the works of Meryon, the water color artist, whose productions already have been shown in New York. Other retrospective collections are those of Ramon Pinchot, Felix Valloton, Georges Doringer, Roger de la Fresnaye, Leon Bakst and Maxime Maufra.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ANIMALS INDICATE LENGTHY WINTER

By the Associated Press.

LIVINGSTON, Mont., Nov. 6.—If birds and animals know anything about the weather, it's going to be a long winter, predicts M. P. Skinner, field naturalist for Yellowstone Park.

"Ground squirrels began to hibernate 10 days earlier than usual," says Skinner. Wood chucks went into seclusion two weeks before their ordinary winter bedtime and red pine squirrels started to gather pine cones much sooner than customary. Such nests of hibernating animals as I have opened are a good deal deeper this fall, indicating they are digging to get away from the frost.

"Birds from the north are coming in greater numbers and considerably in advance of the expected time."

Grand Opera on Horseback.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Grand opera on horseback, made possible by the horsemanship of Mosjoukine, the Russian tenor, who takes the title part in the revival of Massenet's "Don Quixote," is the hit of the Paris season. Mosjoukine sings an entire scene on horseback, ending it by charging the windmill with as much zest as a Rosinante, which really looks the part, can be expected to show. The Opera, Comique stage is quite small, and Mosjoukine handles his steed with a skill which would do credit to an experienced circus rider.

Four-Ounce Dog Costs $1500.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—A dog worth £75 (about $375) per ounce was exhibited at a recent kennel club show. It is a kind of dog never bred before the war, never bred, at least, for exhibition in England, called the papillon (French for "butterfly"). There were half a dozen in this year's show. The smallest of all, called "Piccolo de Flandres," weighed about a quarter-pound and is priced at $1500. There were at least four other breeds shown, which were unknown for exhibition in England 10 years ago—the Alsatian wolf-hound, the Afghan hound, the Persian Saluki (a sort of greyhound), and the little blue Kerry terriers.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY AND GIRL SCOUTS

SCOUTMASTERS HOLD LEADERSHIP SESSION

Four Courses Include Work on Nature Study and "Boyology."

The first meeting of the St. Louis Scoutmasters' Training School was held last Tuesday evening at the Bryan Mullanphy School, Shaw avenue and Klemm street, 77 scoutmasters and assistants attending. Four courses were given—an introductory and an advanced leadership course, a nature study section and a course in "boyology," or the relationship between a scoutmaster and his scouts.

Twenty-eight men were organized into a troop in the introductory course, which deals primarily with the function of a troop as a whole. North District Field Executive Jack Wright acted as scoutmaster. The advanced course, dealing with patrol work, and with the theory added to the practical points of scouting, was conducted as a troop divided into patrols, the 24 men present being formed into three of these. Scoutmaster A. W. Lantz of Troop 76 was appointed scoutmaster, and patrol leaders were elected from the "students" in each group.

Case for Specialists.

Because of the technical nature of the "boyology" course, a permanent leader was not appointed, but the various phases of the subject will be dealt with by specialists in that line. William Puffer, educational director of the St. Louis Council, presided at the first meeting, which concerned the mental traits of boys of scout age. Methods of measuring intellectual capacity, and of establishing norms, were demonstrated and applied to the men in the course.

Richard Mansfield-Jones, Camp Irondale naturalist, led his class of 16 men ni the study of flowers, including a general survey of the technical terms and methods of identifying them.

Course Is Divided.

The course is divided into two parts: one the study of the natural object from the general information standpoint, and the other a discussion of the ways the knowledge gained may be presented in an interesting manner to scouts, by means of games. Trees, including their identification through leaves, old and new bark, twigs, buds and fruit, will be studied next Tuesday.

Capt. John R. Hall, medical officer of the student R. O. T. C. at Washington University, and an officer in the army Medical Corps, will present the general subject of "the physical life of the boy" at the next class of the "Boyology" course, Tuesday.

A local scout rally was held yesterday afternoon in Overland. Troops 1 and 2, Overland, Troop 1, Pattonville, and Troop 197, St. Louis, participating. Contests in string-burning, signalling, obstacle racing, and first aid were held. The rally was planned by Scoutmaster George Newcomb of Troop 1, Overland.

Armistice Day Service.

There will be a community armistice day service Thursday noon from 12:05 to 12:45, in Christ Church Cathedral, Thirteenth and Locust streets, with an address by Rabbi Leon Harrison of Temple Israel. All churches of the city of all denominations have been invited to attend the service, and a number of the clergy will have part in the program.

News From Neighborhood Troops

North District.

Troop 1, of the Arlington Methodist Church, has a new scoutmaster in Walter Winius, former scoutmaster of Troop 33. Nineteen scouts and three visitors were present at the first meeting under his leadership last Tuesday night.

Troops 72 and 220 are hiking together in the county today. Le-Roy Dillender of the former troop, who won a flint and steel fire-making contest at the Merit Badge Exposition, and came in second in two others, although he has been a scout but a very short time, has been appointed patrol leader of the Cobra patrol of Troop 72. At the last meeting of the troop Troop Committeeman Harnish, manager of the Neighborhood House, talked on "Thrift."

Troop 29, of the Benton School, who had the Seamanship merit badge booth at the Merit Badge Exposition, is preparing a petition from the first-class scouts of the city to the executive board for the organization of a Seascout troop in St. Louis.

The scoutmaster, assistant scoutmaster, and one of the troop committeemen of Troop 55, of the Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church, are attending the Scoutmasters' Training School conducted by the St. Louis Council. The first two have already attended former training courses.

Troop 84, of the Salvador Evangelical Church, will hold their annual Fathers and Sons' Night next Friday evening. A program of stunts, games, and songs will be given, with refreshments as the finale.

Troop 122, of the Sherman Park Community Center, whose booth illustrating "Craftwork in Leather" won fourth prize in Class A at the recent Merit Badge Exposition, is reregistering this week, the troop being just one year old. Two scouts from the troop won individual prizes for their work at the exposition.

South District.

L. A. Lang has been appointed Deputy Commissioner of the South District, with the following troops under his jurisdiction: 97, 140, 180, 183, and 200. Lang made his first visit to these troops last Friday evening.

New officers of Troop 143 were elected at a patrol leaders' meeting at the home of Assistant Scoutmaster Eugene Jones a week ago Wednesday, Frank Kalina becoming Senior Patrol Leader, and Earl Shoemaker Junior Assistant. Both Kalina and Shoemaker are former patrol leaders, Kalina's patrol being the winner of the Parents' Trophy cup in the last inter-patrol contest. Ewald Hartman was elected patrol leader of the Silver Fox patrol. Edmond Ruhlman of the White Eagles, and John Darby of the Wolves. Former Senior Patrol Leader Lester Van Damme has become an associate scout, as he is unable to attend the meetings regularly. Assistant Scoutmaster Jones is helping reorganize Troop 215 of the Carondelet School.

Troop 143 has extended an invitation to all Scout troops to visit them at their new meeting place at the Hancock High School on Monday nights. The troop will hold a Parents' Night and exhibit tomorrow.

A Halloween party was given Troop 157 Tuesday evening, as a surprise to the Scouts. The party was reached by a devious route through the dark basement of the church, where traps and obstacles had been plentifully sprinkled. A prize awaited each Scout at the end of the trip. The evening was spent playing games, at the close of which cider and gingerbread were served.

Troop 216 hiked to Cliff Cave a week ago yesterday. While there intertroop games were played with several troops from the North District, who were also visiting the cave.

West District.

Troop 11, of the Y. M. H. A., is meeting temporarily at the Shaare-Zedek Temple, 4600 Page boulevard, until the new Y. M. H. A. building is ready for occupancy.

A code hike, one of the first to be taken in the city, was held by Troop 21, of the St. Louis Ethical Society, a week ago Friday evening. The troop was divided into three groups, stationed on Art Hill, Pavilion Hill, and at Jefferson Memorial, respectively, and flashlights used to transmit messages from one group to another. Several messages were transmitted, received, and relayed, without error. After the signalling, a treasure hunt was held.

This troop takes an average of two hikes a month. Scoutmaster Schmidt, and Assistant Scoutmasters Kohler, Kiessling and Brenner are taking the advanced course at the Scoutmasters' Training School.

Troop 49, of the First Presbyterian Church, took a five-mile hike from Kirkwood, where they met their former scoutmaster H. H. Seidell last Sunday. Several boys passed fire-building and cooking when the noon lunch was prepared. After dinner a game of Hare and Hounds was played.

Troop 59, of the Eden Immanuel Evangelical Brotherhood, gave a program a week ago Friday, in which every boy in the troop participated. A minstrel show, instrumental solos, and pieces by the troop orchestra opened the entertainment. These were followed by demonstrations of the tenderfoot and second class tests, and a short Investiture Ceremony for tenderfoot and second class scouts. S. C. Reaves, West District executive, spoke on "What It Means to Be a Scout." A Council Fire ceremony furnished a conclusion.

Suburban District.

Assistant Scoutmaster Albert Prack of Pattonville Troop 1, formerly of Troop 4, St. Louis, is taking the Scoutmasters' training course given by the St. Louis Council. Pattonville 1 is composed of boys from the town of Pattonville and from the orphans' home there. The troop takes special pride in the fact that it is 100 per cent uniformed.

Assistant Scoutmaster Charles Knabel is now in charge of Troop 1, Home Heights, succeeding former Scoutmaster A. L. Hilleman.

Clarence Duenke's Eagle patrol is leading in an interpatrol contest being conducted by Troop 3, Webster Groves, having nosed out the Wolf patrol in a fire-by-friction contest. The Scoutmaster, one assistant scoutmaster, and Senior Patrol Leader George Harris are attending the Scoutmasters' training school.

Troop 10, Webster Groves, of the St. Louis Protestant Orphans' Home, has reorganized with a new Scoutmaster, Anthony Ward. Council fires in the woods, and other outdoor activities are being planned.

Troop 14, Webster Groves, has started its annual individual achievement contest which ends at the beginning of the camping season. The scout doing the best and most scouting work by that time will win a trip to Camp Irondale for a section or 10 days.

LECTURES BEFORE GIRL SCOUT COUNCIL

Mrs. Frederick Edey Gives First of Three Addresses on Commissioners' Duties.

A three-lecture course on the duties of Girl Scout Commissioners and Council members was given here last Thursday, Friday and Saturday by Mrs. Frederick Edey, chairman of the National Field Committee of the Girl Scout organization. Mrs. Edey came to St. Louis especially to give this course as the opening portion of an extension educational campaign that will be carried on by the local council this winter. She also spoke Thursday afternoon on the general work of the Girl Scout organization before the Junior League.

Fifty girl scout leaders attended the course, which dealth with the duties of councils, the formation and function of committees, and executive work in general. The lectures were held at the Junior League Club rooms, Maryland and Euclid avenues.

Mrs. Edey has been in Girl Scout work seven years, being first attracted to the organization by the work of New York City Girl Scouts in selling Liberty Bonds during the war. She was leader of a troop in Belport, L. I., for four years, from there becoming commissioner of the Manhattan Council. She was made field chairman about a year ago because of her experience in organizing troops.

GIRL SCOUTS

Miss Lauris Baldwin, the new Girl Scout Field Captain, took charge of the last meeting of Arrowhead Troop 7, in the absence of the captain, Miss Eckleman. Tenderfoot tests were passed, and rope games played. Girl Scout songs were also sung.

Troop 21 gave a costume Halloween party at the West Park Baptist Church last Monday. Dancing and games, especially one game called "Dead Cat," occupied the evening. Linda Pellarin, Margarte Henze, Anna Mae Baxter, Lucille Emery and Bernice Baker were the committee in charge of the party.

The scouts of Conea Troop 56 visited the City Infirmary a week ago Thursday evening, taking cake, fruit and magazines, as their contribution to Girl Scout Good Cheer Week. They also gave a playlet, and sang troop songs and "old-time" songs, the old folks joining in the latter. The girls took charge of their homes the day before, while their mothers went to the theater, for Mother's Vacation Day of the Good Cheer Week. The Troop is planning to give a Christmas entertainment and play at the infirmary.

A new tenderfoot, Rosalia Ebert, joined the troop last week, going into a new patrol, the Lion, whose slogan is "Always Alert," motto, "Helpful to All," and colors black and orange. Girl Scout song books were received from New York at the same meeting, and Lorraine Roche was appointed troop pianist. Dorothy Sexaner took charge of the meeting.

Thirty-five scrap books, made by the girls of Troop 2, Webster Groves, were given by the troop to children in the Bethesda Hospital a week ago Friday, in observance of Girl Scout Good Cheer Week.

A costume Halloween party was held last Monday at the Hagerty M. E. Church under the direction of the patrol leaders, Marion Breen, Ruth Richardson, Ruth Bedell and Alice Field. Cider, doughnuts and apples were served.

300 BOY SCOUTS TO ASSIST AS USHERS AT HORSE SHOW

Neatest and Most Efficient Will Be Selected for Duty From 18 Troops.

Three hundred of the neatest and most efficient St. Louis Boy Scouts will be picked to act as ushers at the Horse Show to be given at the Coliseum this week. Forty boys will be on duty each night of the week and for the matinee next Saturday afternoon. Four will be selected each performance to serve in the center ring as orderlies and aids to the judges.

This will be the third time the scouts have assisted at the Horse Show. Interest in horses has been stimulated among the scouts by the institution of a course in horsemanship at the Ranger Camp at the Irondale Reservation, the summer camp of the St. Louis Council. Last summer 400 boys were taught the principles of handling horses.

Troops that will furnish ushers to the show are 1, 2, 19, 21, 28, 33, 35, 59, 60, 63, 77, 88, 101, 130, 155,

GOITRE

A new treatment for goitre has been developed by the W. T. B. Laboratories, 942 Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Battle Creek, Michigan, which many believe will prove to be the long-sought specific for this unsightly and dangerous disease. Many of the largest and most hideous goitres begin to recede almost in a day. They gradually get smaller, and in many cases are entirely gone in a few weeks. It is equally efficient in cases of toxic and so-called inside goitre. The treatment is harmless and anyone can use it with perfect safety at home.

A 48-page illustrated booklet on the Causes, Dangers and Non-Surgical Treatment of Goitre, issued by the Laboratories, fully explains the new treatment and will be mailed free to any interested sufferer.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Bisurated Magnesia to Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach, accompanied by the full, bloated feeling after eating are almost conclusive evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition as this, when with ordinary digestive aids you can have no neutralizing effect on excess stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water shortly after eating. This will drive off the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent further formation and there is no overcoming gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia is a powder or tablet form—never a liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their food with no more fear of indigestion.

NEW LOWER PRICES place the Chrysler "60" further than ever beyond comparison with the ordinary type of light six

ANY attempt to compare the Chrysler "60" with the ordinary type of six is like comparing the modern dirigible with the old-style balloon—impossible, because the two are fundamentally different.

The difference begins with a black-and-white difference in engineering, the Chrysler "60" being designed and built under the plan of Standardized Quality, as if required to give 60 miles an hour for every mile and minute of its life.

Necessarily, the difference stands out even more sharply in performance—the extraordinary power reserve of the "60" giving it a smoothness at average speeds that you recognize at once as unattainable in the ordinary type of six built by ordinary manufacturing methods to ordinary performance standards.

Just as pronounced is the difference in comfort, agility and handling ease—in gasoline economy, dependability and long life—in every single feature that makes for complete motoring satisfaction.

Try out the Chrysler "60"—discover for yourself why, at its new lower prices, it is the inevitable choice of every purchaser who searches for utmost value in the light six field.

WILSON DEPI... IN CON...

Slogan "He Kept Us Out of War" and G. O. P. Blunders Won Second Term in Race So Close That Wilson Actually Congratulated Hughes as Victor.

FOLLOWING is the sixth installment of "The Political Education of Woodrow Wilson," written by James Kerney, close friend of the late President, and director of American Publicity in Europe during the World War.

By JAMES KERNEY,
Owner and Editor of the Trenton (N. J.) Times.

(Copyright, 1926.)

IT WAS Wilson's habit during his first term to write out important state papers himself and to have Bryan sign them. The frequent storms that broke over the head of Bryan apparently disturbed Wilson very little. He recognized that without Bryan's support and influence it never would have been possible for him to have reached the White House and, having arrived there, to get the currency, tariff and income tax measures through Congress, and those were his outstanding domestic achievements.

Bryan was a believer in the political theory that to the victor belong the spoils. While Wilson had long been a civil service reformer he was quite indifferent to the practice, especially where he desired to repay services rendered to him by personal friends at the University. Political obligations did not fare so well. And he sometimes displayed the rough methods of the hot and heady Jackson in his treatment of political enemies.

Bryan's notion of the foreign service was extremely practical. Whatever his faults, Bryan was a firm reliever in the capacity, integrity and sound common sense of the average American. He was never carried away by the high-sounding and well organized propaganda of the professional diplomats and was quite content to trust our affairs to every-day folks. Wilson's own view was not so very different, although he did hold to Roosevelt's executive order keeping Consuls under the civil service. Results count. The Wilson-Bryan selections were quite up to the average. There was never a time when our representatives abroad were put to a harder test during the World War. And the work, in the main was well done.

Helped Mitchel to Beat Tammany for Mayor.

Once the inauguration was out of the way there began an intense struggle over naming the collector of the port of New York. Perhaps it was because Wilson, Tumulty and McAdoo had all lived long in the shadow of New York that the attempt to control things there bulked so large in the first two years of Wilson's regime.

Senator O'Gorman of New York had a list of several candidates for this office. McAdoo wanted Frank L. Polk. O'Gorman successfully blocked that. Wilson told me it was not his desire that either Tammany or McAdoo should have any political control over the New York custom house. He decided to appoint John Purroy Mitchel which, he thought, would bar the organization crowd from repeating any silly charges of religious bigotry, as Mitchel was a Catholic. He wanted me to go to New York and name Mitchel, then under the tutelage of William Randolph Hearst, who was training him to beat Tammany for Mayor. There were no strings to the appointment and I was to assure Mitchel that he might go on with his political ambitions. Wilson then wrote in his own hand a letter authorizing me to speak for him and setting forth that whatever I promised would be fulfilled.

I saw Mitchel next day. We discussed the possible advantages and disadvantages that the honor might bring him. He had not only the powerful Hearst support but was flirting with Theodore Roosevelt, and it looked as if he might be the fusion candidate against Tammany. He didn't want to take any chance of losing and asked 24 hours to discuss the matter with his partner.

Without waiting for the final word from Mitchel, the President had once sent the name to the Senate, and it was confirmed. The President wrote me that the development took his breath away, and that he was very happy about it. I subsequently assisted Mitchel to secure the nomination for Mayor. At the proper time, in the late summer of 1913, and by Mitchel's request, the word was sent out from Washington that he had the administration support against Tammany for Mayor of New York. He swept everything before him and at the opening of Congress, after his election he was a guest at luncheon at the White House. But he did not make a particularly good impression on Wilson and no tears were shed when he subsequently lost favor with Hearst and was beaten by Tammany. Wilson, for once, was inclined to agree with Roosevelt who had remarked that the trouble with Mitchel's administration was that it contained too much Fifth avenue and too little First avenue."

PRESIDENT AND MRS. WILSON AT A BALL GAME.

Helped Mitchel to Beat Tammany for Mayor.

Once the inauguration was out of the way there began an intense struggle over naming the collector of the port of New York. Perhaps it was because Wilson, Tumulty and McAdoo had all lived long in the shadow of New York and at the attempt to control things were bulked so large in the first two years of Wilson's regime. There were no strings to the appointment but I was to assure Mitchel that he might go on with his political ambitions. Wilson then wrote in his own hand a letter authorizing me to speak for him and setting forth that whatever I promised would be fulfilled.

I saw Mitchel next day. We discussed the possible advantages and disadvantages that the honor might bring him. He had not only powerful Hearst support but was flirting with Theodore Roosevelt, and it looked as if he might be the fusion candidate against Tammany. He didn't want to take any chance of losing and asked 24 hours to discuss the matter with his partner.

Without waiting for the final word from Mitchel, the President once sent the name to the Senate, and it was confirmed. The President wrote me that the development took his breath away, and that he was very happy about it. He subsequently assisted Mitchel to secure the nomination for Mayor. At the proper time, in the late summer of 1913, and by Mitchel's request, the word was sent out from Washington that he had the administration support against Tammany for Mayor of New York. Mitchel swept everything before him and at the opening of Congress, after his election he was a guest at luncheon at the White House. But he did not make a particularly good impression on Wilson and no tears were shed when he subsequently lost favor with Hearst and was beaten by Tammany. Wilson, for once, was inclined to agree with Roosevelt who had remarked that the trouble with Mitchel's administration was that it contained too much Fifth avenue and too little First avenue."

End of Wilson's Career in "Practical Politics."

Dudley Field Malone, son-in-law of Senator O'Gorman, was named Mitchel's successor as collector of the port. The appointment was personal and not favored by Tammany. The Malone and Mitchel forces went to work with great zest to drive Tammany off the face of the earth. Somebody always is putting Tammany out of business. But Tammany somehow manages to go on despite all, somehow managing to give America's greatest city a safe, good-natured municipal government with the minimum bother to the comfortable citizen who pays most of the taxes.

The ensuing political year proved very busy for Wilson. The feud between Tammany and the so-called friends of Wilson was at white heat. By attempting to outwit Tammany in making Mitchel Mayor he had started something in New York. And he could not very gracefully get from under. When the primary was held the Tammany candidates walked away with the nominations. And a few days later I was asked by the President to go to New York and make a survey of the land, with a view to healing the breach. Thomas F. Smith, secretary of Tammany Hall, and some others told me that the organization had no particular quarrel with Wilson, although everything had been done to humiliate it.

It was agreed that Wilson should give his complete support to the organization ticket and that there should be an end to further meddling so far as the White House was concerned. Wilson wrote me a letter expressing his satisfaction at having the situation adjusted. The President dispatched a cordial message to Governor Glynn voicing the hope that he would "win with an emphatic majority."

But when the ballots were counted the discovery was made that the Eastern Progressives, typified in Roosevelt, had disappeared from the face of the earth. The Democratic ticket in New York lost by 145,507. The President's home district returned a Republican Congressman by nearly 3500, and there was a landslide over the whole Eastern section. That is about where Wilson's personal interest and participation in old-fashioned practical politics ended.

Wilson found his disgust for the newspapers on the increase. This was especially so after the widespread publicity that came with the sudden announcement early in 1914 of the engagement of his daughter, Eleanor, to the elderly McAdoo.

Soon thereafter Mrs. Wilson had collapsed in her bathroom. She never fully recovered. Naturally there was much mystery and gossip about family affairs. Announcement that another daughter was soon to wed so incensed the President that he threatened to decline to meet representatives of newspapers that indulged in speculation about his family.

Despite the fact that he had deliberately chosen a public career he could never understand why the public should be interested in his personal matters. His failure to give the newspaper men his confidence even in public affairs had produced an atmosphere of suspicion. There was a feeling of genuine sympathy for him on the part of the newspaper men themselves, however, when he met them on March 14 for his daily conference and solemnly unburdened himself to his feelings and made an appeal for their co-operation.

Death of Mrs. Wilson a Blow to President.

The death of Ellen Axson Wilson in August, 1914, during the very outbreak of the World War, was a terrible shock to the President. Mrs. Wilson had made a deep impression upon those with whom she had come in contact in her husband's career. She was recognized as having given the best years of her life in unselfish devotion to his advancement. While she was a quiet, modest woman, she was a sound politician, as well as a fine wife. Her good judgment saved many situations, and her loss was serious for Wilson.

It was a tragic blow at a tragic hour in his affairs. Ahead of him was the greatest fight of his life. Wilson was very lonesome and very low in spirits. He isolated himself. It became more difficult than ever for those about him to stir his political interest.

The World War was increasingly occupying his attention. He gradually withdrew until even his Cabinet members saw less and less of him. A daily round of golf with Grayson provided physical and mental relaxation. Otherwise he preferred to go away by himself and "plow his lonely furrow." The dull routine of government and politics he was willing to leave to Tumulty and House, while he gave his attention to thinking of the more engrossing world tragedy.

Wilson's fierce and unlovely side began showing in the battle after Mrs. Wilson's death. Almost immediately after he went to Washington he had begun to ignore Martine (J. E. Martine, Senator from New Jersey) for whom he made such a strenuous fight in the first instance against Smith.

Joseph R. Wilson, brother of the President, had been put forward for Secretary of the Senate by Senator Luke Lea of Tennessee, in which State the President's brother at the time was city editor of a leading paper. Martine's frank opposition to the appointment was regarded as ungracious. He insisted such an appointment would be extremely embarrassing for the Senate as the Secretary is the only non-Senator who attends executive sessions, to which all presidential appointments go.

Ever after Martine got scant recognition at the White House. As a rule he voted for legislative measures supported by Wilson, including the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill, the Federal reserve bill and preparedness. On principle he opposed Wilson's repeal of the tolls provision of the Panama Canal act. But he was given shabby treatment in the matter of New Jersey appointments. In return he stood against the confirmation of Wilson's nominations, often succeeding in blocking them.

Wilson sought to punish Martine by preventing his renomination in the Democratic landslide in the Democratic senatorial primaries of 1916. Martine gave Wilson a drubbing at the primaries and at the election in November he ran less than 20,000 behind Wilson, who lost the State to Charles E. Hughes by 57,000 plurality.

His Early Remarriage Scared Politicians.

A few months after the death of Ellen Axson Wilson the President met Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, beautiful and charming widow of a Washington jeweler. It was a case of love at first sight.

Dr. Cary T. Grayson, the President's physician and a friend of Mrs. Galt, had introduced her to Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, Wilson's cousin who, after the death of Ellen Axson Wilson, had acted as mistress of the White House. Miss Bones and Mrs. Galt walked much together and Mrs. Galt dined at the White House and met the President.

When he set out to be Wilson was especially fascinating to women, with a store of amusing anecdotes which he used with equal effect on the platform and in the drawing room. He did not care for male company, but he enjoyed the admiration and adulation of women. In his courtship of Mrs. Galt, Wilson displayed all the ardor and intense eagerness of a boy.

Coming so soon after the death of the first Mrs. Wilson it gave the Democratic politicians a great fright. But none in the Cabinet dared to speak to the President of their misgivings. Tumulty intimated that it might be well to delay the marriage until after the 1916 Presidential election, with the result that he never again enjoyed the favor of the family circle.

In common with all who had come to know and appreciate the good sense and public usefulness of the first Mrs. Wilson, Tumulty had a deep reverence for her memory. He was frequently depressed at the new order. The country, too, was somewhat shocked at Wilson's speedy courtship. The situation was not improved by Wilson's making his physician a Rear Admiral, jumping him 117 numbers over the heads of other Naval officers. Dr. Grayson married Miss Gordon, an heiress and ward of Mrs. Galt. These romances naturally attracted wide attention.

It was partly at Garrison's insistence that the first Lusitania note was made so stiff. Wilson at first was inclined to agree with Bryan. The note was written by the President in his private study at the White House. He devoted Sunday and Monday, May 9 and 10, to its preparation. After it had been presented and read to the Cabinet Bryan signed it, although it concluded with what the country regarded as the equivalent of a declaration of war.

In justice to Bryan it should be pointed out that while the note was in course of preparation he had sent to Wilson a letter urging that ships carrying contraband for the allies be prohibited from carrying passengers. Bryan had insisted that the Lusitania carried ammunition valued at $152,400 and wrote that "Germany had a right to prevent contraband going to the allies, that a ship carrying contraband should not rely on passengers to protect her from attack any more than putting women and children in front of an army."

President Did Not Want Bryan to Resign.

When the second Lusitania note was sent in answer to the unsatisfactory reply that came from Germany, Bryan felt that Wilson was heading for war. He resigned on June 8. Wilson frankly did not want him to resign and sent McAdoo to talk with him. Tumulty was of the opposite opinion. He felt Bryan's influence was at an end, that the administration was fast losing caste with thoughtful people because of Bryan's conduct. Others on the inside agreed with Tumulty.

When Wilson got Bryan's final decision he hurried to Tumulty's house. It was Sunday morning. Tumulty was at church. He left word for Tumulty to come to luncheon at the White House and there told him of Bryan's determination. Tumulty strongly urged against any delay in accepting the resignation. It was accepted Tuesday, June 9, and was announced at 6 o'clock that evening. It came as a great surprise even in face of persistent rumors that Bryan was to quit.

Bryan's childish simplicity had endeared him to Wilson just as it had given him a tremendous popular following. Bryan's attitude towards war was strangely inconsistent. In the Spanish-American war he recruited a Nebraska regiment and was always exceedingly proud of his rank as Colonel. Moreover, this ardent pacifist, firmly insisting that war was not in keeping with Christian statesmanship, requested that he be buried among the nation's military heroes in Arlington Cemetery.

Renomination at St. Louis Convention.

At the Democratic National convention in St. Louis in 1916 at Wilson's special urging former Gov. Glynn of New York made the keynote speech. His promise for a continuing peace was so ardent that, so Bryan declared, the Democracy needed no other platform. Emphasizing Wilson's hostility to the World War Glynn stated that "Wilson stands where Gen. Grant stood when he said there never was a war that could not have been settled better some other way."

Next to the thrill that Glynn gave the delegates, the biggest hit of the convention was a reference in the speech of Ollie James who said "I can see the accusing picture of Christ on the battlefield, with the dead and dying all around Him, with the screams of shrapnel and the roll of cannon, and I can hear the Master say to Woodrow Wilson, 'Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God.'"

Hovering over the assemblage was the specter of the preachings of Bryan who received a tremendous ovation, although he was not a delegate. He was there in his old capacity of newspaper reporter. Whenever he appeared in the press section, the convention rose and cheered him with much feeling. He was introduced by Ollie James as "America's greatest Democrat," and when he addressed the convention he said:

"I have differed with the President on some points of the policy in dealing with the Great War, but I agree with the American people in thanking God we have a President who has kept and who will keep us out of war."

Bryan was put to work in the Western States, where, night and day he hammered home his hatred of war and played no small part in turning the tide to Wilson for the second time.

Hughes' Resignation Offended President.

The Republicans, after much wrangling, named Charles E. Hughes of New York for President, and the Western Progressives angrily turned from Roosevelt to Bainbridge Colby, who took the stump for Wilson and shared with Bryan the burden of winning the necessary states.

There was much bitterness in the campaign. Before the conventions the Wilson and Hughes families had enjoyed an intimate social relationship. Wilson was annoyed at the very abrupt manner in which Hughes tendered his resignation as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Almost immediately after the word had come to Washington on July 10 of the nomination of Hughes at Chicago a Negro messenger appeared at the White House bearing a note containing the brief announcement: "I hereby resign the office of Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States."

There was no pleasant word of any kind. The resignation was merely addressed "To the President."

From that moment the battle was on. Like most political warfare it did not always remain on a very dignified plane. Hughes attacked Wilson in a personal way for his vacillating policy towards the war. When the Hughes attacks compelled attention Wilson replied:

"If you will give that gentleman rope enough he will hang himself."

Quarrel With Lodge and Its Results.

Wilson was daring in his method during that campaign, and, like most politicians, he spoke at times with some mental reservation as to the facts. The Republicans prodded him hard about his indecision Senator Lodge brought on a heavy storm by declaring that resignations from the Cabinet had been threatened. The historic rupture with Lodge grew into intense hatred between two powerfully minded and self approving men. Save for a temporary reconciliation after our entrance into the war they fought it out to the end. Lodge had a natural desire to be President and this doubtless colored his mind. When the Republicans and Progressives were holding rival conventions at Chicago in 1916 Roosevelt had sought to force the nomination of Lodge as a compromise, but without avail.

Eight days before the Chicago convention the New York Tribune had declared that the German-Americans had proclaimed Hughes as their favorite. And so Hughes was nominated and the Lodge ambition frustrated. It did not make any more amicable the relationship between Wilson and Lodge. Their eternal dislikes for the balance of their days fed the flames of political discord and made impossible while they were in power, any generally acceptable American peace settlement.

"He Kept Us Out of War" Was Winning Slogan.

There is no question that the slogan "He kept us out of war" was one of the determining factors in Wilson's re-election.

It was a singular campaign. Hughes was bombarded by a large part of the Republican press, friendly to the allied cause, to take a firmer stand in repudiation of the support that had been given him at Chicago by the German-American influences. It required several weeks of hard work before Hughes, with protestations of his "undiluted" and "out-and-out Americanism," could maneuver himself out of the position. And by that time the Democrats had virtually driven him into a corner, where he appeared to be opposing the Wilson peace program and favoring America's entrance into the war.

Wilson knew how to make a good political play, as was strikingly shown in the tart rejoinder he sent to Jeremiah O'Leary, one of the fire-eating Irish-American leaders. The campaign was going badly for Wilson just at the moment. The New Jersey primaries had rejected Wilson's indorsement of Westcott for United States Senator and renominated Martine. The Maine election had gone so strongly Republican that Wilson's Cabinet officers and others were in a panic.

O'Leary, cheered on by the New Jersey and Maine results, had written Wilson an offensive letter announcing that he was not going to vote for him. The so-called hyphen vote had been noisy. O'Leary among the noisiest. Wilson replied to O'Leary: "I would be deeply mortified to have you or anybody like you vote for me."

That scornful rebuke made the front page of every newspaper and thrilled the country. It was a high card, played at the right time.

In August and September, 1916, Wilson was occupied with the threatened railroad strike, involving the whole system of transportation in the country. The fact that great industrial concerns in America were busily engaged in producing supplies for the allies and that this condition of unusual business prosperity made it desirable that the strike should be averted at any cost, militated in favor of Wilson and made it comparatively easy for him to force through Congress the Adamson law, compelling the railroads to adopt an eight-hour working basis. This helped Wilson considerably with organized labor.

G. O. P. Blunder That Aided the Democrats.

Another factor was the blundering way in which Hughes was handled on his California visit. The Republican organization there, dominated by the Southern Pacific Railroad interests, insisted that Hughes ignore Hiram Johnson, the party candidate for Senator, who had been fighting the railroads and who had been the candidate of the Progressives for Vice President on Roosevelt's ticket in 1912. The upshot was that Johnson's friends slaughtered Hughes.

New England and all of the war-fired East, including Wilson's home State of New Jersey, went strongly for the Republicans, while Ohio and the Western States joined the Correct This Grave Error that is costing car owners millions

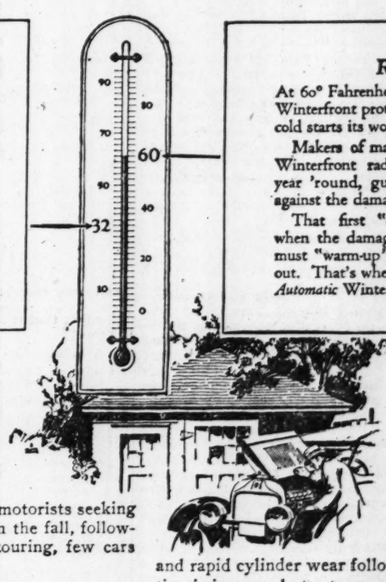
Wrong

Thousands believe that it is not necessary to protect a motor from cold except in freezing weather. It's a mistaken idea. Cold is the cause—automotive authorities agree—of 50 to 75% of all premature motor wear. And cold doesn't just mean below-zero. At 60° your motor is underheated.



Right

At 60° Fahrenheit your motor needs Winterfront protection. That's when cold starts its work of destruction.

Makers of many fine cars provide Winterfront radiator protection the year 'round, guarding the motor against the damage wrought by cold.

That first "choke" morning is when the damage starts—when you must "warm-up" with the "choke" out. That's when your motor needs Automatic Winterfront protection.

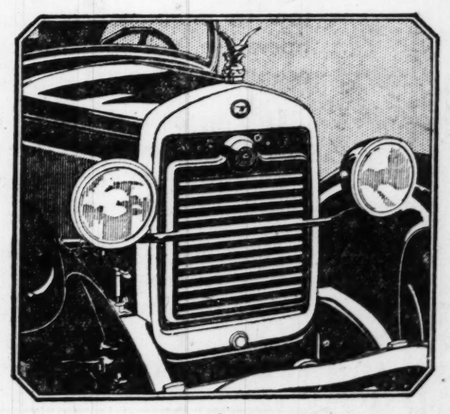
COLD is here—the arch-enemy of every motor. It's the cause—automotive experts agree—of 50 to 75% of all premature motor wear.

Every spring finds thousands of motorists seeking the cause of motor trouble. Yet in the fall, following summer months of constant touring, few cars require slightest attention.

The "choke" a cold weather menace

"Eliminate excessive use of the 'choke' and you eliminate 50 to 75% of the cause of repair bills," say leading automotive experts. It's the "choke" period in chill and cold weather that causes greatest damage—those few minutes when, to get your motor operating smoothly, you drive with the "choke" out.

Unconsciously you are flooding your motor with raw gasoline that will not vaporize until the motor is hot. It washes cylinders and cylinder walls clean of the oil film of protection, bringing metal to metal contact that scores and pits metal surfaces. It flows down into the crankcase, excessively diluting the oil you depend on for lubrication. Fouled spark plugs, extreme carbonization, corrosion and rapid cylinder wear follow. Gasoline consumption is increased at a tremendous rate.



This is the danger period that Pines Automatic Winterfront eliminates Pines Automatic Winterfront does not take the place of the "choke." It shortens the "warming-up" period, eliminating the need for excessive "choking." Thus, by removing the cause of greatest motor damage, Pines Winterfront eliminates the danger itself. When outside temperature reaches 60° or lower Winterfront is a necessity. Put one on—the first morning you are forced to drive with the "choke" out. That's when the damage starts.

Then note the added comfort inside the car—the absence of drafts—the keen pleasure of driving on cold days—with summer operating smoothness and efficiency. And with these advantages—the knowledge that your motor is safeguarded against the damage of cold.

Put on in 10 minutes

Don't make the mistake of waiting until cold weather. It takes but a few minutes to install a Winterfront—and give you this protection that many fine cars have adopted to safeguard their owners against the costly repair bills that follow cold weather operation.

Pines Winterfront is the only automatic radiator shutter on the market. It will improve the appearance of any car—and outlast the car itself. There is nothing to get out of order—nothing to remember. You put it on and forget it.

Models for all cars priced $22.50 to $30.00. Special models for Ford, Chevrolet and Dodge priced $15.00, $17.50, $20.00

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.

SALE OF CHRISTMAS SEALS BEGINS NOV. 26

Campaign to Include Schools, Theaters and Business House Solicitation.

A Christmas health education campaign will be conducted again this year by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis as a part of the national movement to stamp out tuberculosis. This campaign will be carried on simultaneously in more than 1500 cities under the auspices of the National Tuberculosis Association.

The sale of Christmas seals at 1 cent each will formally open the day after Thanksgiving. Preceding this, an intensive educational campaign will be conducted to acquaint the public more fully with the importance of community health work. Last year permanent standing health committees were created in a large number of civic and fraternal organizations, and they are planning to co-operate with the Tuberculosis Society in broadening the health movement, both in vision and scope of activities.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Tuberculosis Society yesterday it was decided to conduct the Christmas seal campaign in the usual manner. Theaters, movies, hotels, department stores, post-offices, labor unions and schools will be asked to give their usual co-operation. Last year an educational campaign was conducted in the schools as well as the Christmas seal campaign. Every school in the city and county, public, private and parochial, was included in the campaign program, and in addition Washington and St. Louis Universities.

Mail Order Sales Large.

The Christmas seal is the principal source of revenue for the Tuberculosis Society, which not only sponsors the movement to stamp out tuberculosis, but devotes much of its energy and funds to the promotion of a public health program and the prevention of disease.

Funds derived from the 1925 sale of Christmas seals amounted to more than $75,000. The number of contributors totaled more than 150,000. This number is exclusive of the thousands of school children who gave their pennies on School day. The principal method of selling seals is by mail order. Last year more than 100,000 persons, firms and corporations bought seals by mail.

The Tuberculosis Society carries on more than 20 branches of work in its promotion of a public health program. School health activities, a health talk bureau, open-air work as a prevention of tuberculosis which includes open-air schools and a night and day rest camp for self-supporting girls, legislative work, health publications, social service follow-up of camp and open-air school cases, special health features as the Health Gypsy, information service, health institute, nutrition work, periodic physical and dental examination promotion, modern health crusade work, institutional efficiency promotion, dental projects, traveling poster exhibits and medical news service about tuberculosis problems are some of the more important branches.

Plan New Activities.

During its 23 years of existence the Tuberculosis Society has also been instrumental in promoting projects related to the cure of tuberculosis. It started and maintained for several years clinics which later became a municipal department. It also financed the first municipal nurses, whose duties were to find early tuberculosis cases and to visit those patients who were being treated at home. Then it helped make Koch Hospital one of the finest sanatoria in the country.

This year's program of health work includes the continuance of all present activities of the society together with a number of new features and increased activity along legislative lines. The annual meeting of the society is scheduled for the latter part of this month, and at that time a report of last year's activities will be made and a new program for 1927 formulated.

WILSON DEPENDED ON BRYAN TO PUT PROGRAM THROUGH

South in returning Wilson to the White House.

Much of the Western vote was undoubtedly influenced against Hughes because of the Republican rejection of Roosevelt and the complete repudiation at the 1916 convention of all the policies so dear to the Progressives. After Roosevelt had been sidetracked at Chicago and the ideals of the Progressives trampled upon, the party leaders induced Roosevelt to join in the effort to elect Hughes.

Roosevelt's personal and openly expressed hatred of Wilson was another factor. Bryan's continual hammering for Wilson in the Western States was another factor. But the most forceful factor of all was the great slogan of the entire campaign which the Democrats kept pounding in to the last minute: "Thank God for Wilson; he kept us out of war."

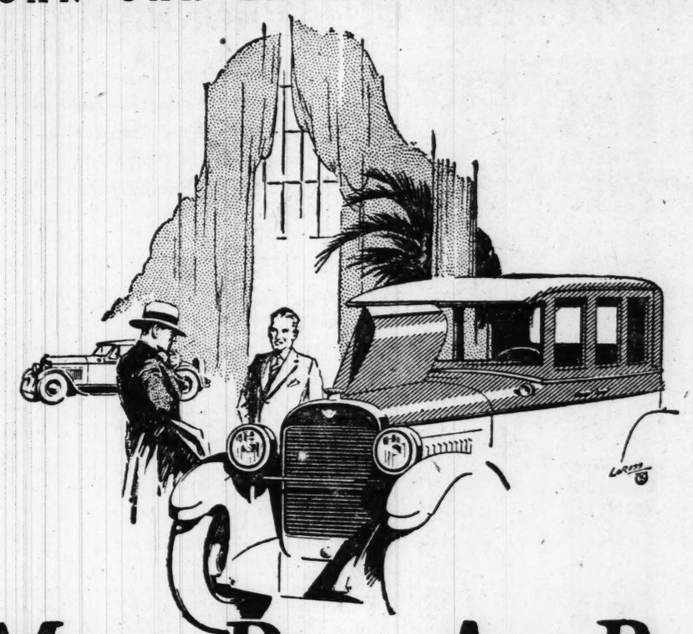
It was several days before the final result in California was known.

In the early hours the election of Hughes seemed to be so certain that Wilson sent him a formal message of congratulation.

The final vote of the Electoral College was 277 for Wilson and 254 for Hughes.

To Be Concluded Next Sunday.

NOT ONE AMERICAN CAR LASTS AS LONG AS REO—NOT ONE



Why So Many Reos Are Bought By Men Who Are Hard To Sell

THE man who is hard to sell never buys just transportation.

Rather he demands pleasant, carefree transportation—the joy of the open spaces, the mastery of the map, the freedom from crowded city cars and train schedules.

And this hard-to-sell buyer knows that he can find those carefree motoring miles only in the mechanical excellence of the machine. That's what leads him to Reo.

Beauty he demands, of course; and comfort in the tangled ruck of traffic or on the long days at the wheel. And always he looks behind these to the mechanics of his car.

Reo builds for this man who is hard to sell by building primarily a car that operates at greatest mechanical efficiency over the longest period of time.

Proof of carefree miles in store

Reo builds automobiles as machines should be built—simple in construction, sturdy in design, tested in materials, accessible as to parts, low in maintenance, enduring in operation, yet light for operating economy and good to look upon.

It is natural, therefore, that the majority of Reo owners are exacting men who appreciate mechanical excellence and demand it.

Reos are bought by those who prefer to look beneath the hood before they buy rather than after, who would rather look over a chassis in a salesroom than up at it on a hot, dusty road.

And it is because Reo buyers look at these things first, that they have the greatest opportunity to forget about them afterwards in their enjoyment of untroubled, economical motoring comfort.

How Reo keeps upkeep low

The hard-to-sell men know the significance of Reo engineering that cuts down the frequency of valve grinding and carbon removal by as much as seventy-five percent. And there are many more points where Reo builds to slow up wear.

Go over a Reo chassis point by point in comparison with any other car on the market. You'll see then why Reo is America's longest lasting car—bar none. You'll see why the critical buyer prefers Reo, why women feel secure with their Reos though long, long miles from a garage.

Note how Reo is put together. Every part on every car is tested. This is done only on a very few other cars, all of them exceedingly high priced.

Satisfy yourself, too, on Reo's grace of line and beauty of finish. Reo designers build Reo in quiet but debonair good taste. They make of Reo a car you can be proud of.

Yet Reo's price is moderate

Yet with all these tangible evidences of quality, of being a really superior piece of machinery, Reo is moderately priced—lower, in fact, in its more popular models than the average for other cars of its size—cars whose life is far shorter than Reo's, cars in whose construction there is not the same assurance of carefree years of motoring.

See it today

Ask to see this brawny, supple piece of machinery—then climb behind the wheel and see how easy it is to forget that there is anything there but an accelerator and a steering wheel.

The joy you'll get as a Reo owner will repay many times over the time you spend in being sure while buying.

M'CORMACK ANNOUNCES PROGRAM FOR CONCERT HERE

John McCormack, Irish tenor who sings at the Coliseum on Tuesday evening, Nov. 16, will open with Peri's "Gioite al canto mio" (Euridice) following with "Let Us Rest" from Bach's cantata of the same name. The group which follows, includes two new Chinese settings by Bantock "A Dream of Spring and Desolation," recently added to McCormack's repertoire. After the intermission will come a group of Irish folk songs and a group of English songs by Kennedy Russell, Edwin Schneider and Blanche Evert Seaver.

Behind the Screens

BECAUSE of a scarcity of rain in New York the remainder of the Colleen Moore "Orchids and Ermine" company, which went East to film exterior, was obliged to delay its return. The company had about 15 outdoor shots to take, showing New York under the weather. It is unusual for a company to be delayed on account of too much sunshine. The reverse usually is the rule.

When fires occurred recently in the studios of Gloria Swanson and Charlie Chaplin, camera men made "shots" of the blazes for possible use in future productions.

Thunder, the police dog movie star, does not understand English. Frank Foster Davis, owner and trainer of Thunder, directs in German to avoid confusion when the director of a production is instructing the actors. The dogs work according to words, not by the trainer's gestures.

Hollywood has added to its roster a former Chief of Police of Bagdad. Victor McLaglen, who plays Capt. Flagg in the film version of "What Price Glory," bossed the City of the Califfs with its 170,000 inhabitants while it was held by British troops during the World War. McLaglen also is a veteran of the Boer War.

Cecil B. De Mille has selected Joseph Striker for the important role of John, the Beloved Disciple, in his biblical production, "The King of Kings." H. B. Warner, Jacqueline Logan, Victor Varconi, Ernest Torrence and Rudolph and Joseph Schildkraut play other important roles in "The King of Kings."

Alfred E. Green has returned to Hollywood from New York with his Fox Films company making "The Auctioneer" to complete the balance of the screen version of this David Belasco-David Warfield stage play at the West Coast Studios. With the exception of a few exteriors taken in the Eastern metropolis the entire picture will be shot here. Green made his first

THE MOVING PICTURE ALBUM

By Robert E. Sherwood

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.

MANY theories have been advanced to account for the popularity of the silent drama, but the oddest theory of them all is offered by Leon Gaumont, the great French pioneer in the production and exhibition of moving pictures.

This popularity, says M. Gaumont in an interview in "Variety," is directly traceable to prohibition. "You are a dry country, generally speaking, and you have not the varied assortment of amusements offered in Europe so that you have no recourse but to the movies." These were his exact words.

He should repeat them to some of our leading movie theater owners, who are now struggling manfully to persuade the public that their playhouses present better entertainment than is to be derived from the radio, from prizefights, football games, motor trips, night clubs, dance halls or any of the other thousand and one sources of diversion that are now available in America.

Indeed, these exhibitors of films are realizing that, while competition may be the life of trade, it is likely to be the death of them all.

THE worthy M. Gaumont to the contrary notwithstanding, there has never been so much fierce competition in the entertainment business as there is at this particular time, and the movie people have to fight hard to get their share of attention.

More people dance than ever before; the crowds at baseball and college football games are larger than ever, with added attractions in the form of professional football and tennis; more magazines and novels are sold than at any previous period in history; the number of radio sets in existence is already far up in the millions, and is increasing rapidly; even the lecture circuits are prospering to an unprecedented extent.

Perhaps this is traceable to the influence of prohibition, and perhaps it isn't. But whatever the cause, the condition is there. The American public demands, and gets, an extraordinary amount and variety of entertainment.

A FEW days ago I heard a young girl—a fairly representative flapper—in conversation with her aunt, with whom she was spending a few days in New York.

The aunt had protested mildly because her niece had been on the run 18 hours out of every day—going to plays, to movies, to supper clubs, to the world series, to see Suzanne Lenglen defeat Mary Browne 6—1, 6—0, and to various other sources of amusement.

"Does your mother let you do all these things when you're at home?" the aunt inquired.

"Oh, sure," said the girl, "only more so. As a matter of fact, Mother sent me here to New York to rest up."

The aunt then heaved a sigh and started to say, "When I was a girl——" but the flapper cut her off with, "When you and Mother were girls, your idea of riotous pleasure was a strawberry festival at the parish house or the weekly meeting of the sewing circle. You just simply didn't know the meaning of the word fun."

When members of the younger generation realize that jazz, movies, the radio and popular magazines are all comparatively recent innovations, they are compelled to wonder what their parents did during the long winter evenings.

THIS column is supposed to be devoted to comment on the movies, and so I shall go no further with this rather irrelevant

No Tang of Brilliancy To Opera Season Opening

Spontani's Blaring Work, "La Vestale," Is Heard at Metropolitan—Love Story of a Roman Maid—Rosa Ponselle Pleasing to Capacity Audience.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.

THE mild air of lunacy which envelops the proceedings of grand opera in general turns downright bedlam in Gasparo Spontini's "La Vestale." Poor, vainglorious Spontini! His masterpiece founded the dynasty of spectacular opera, and was the forefather of "La Muette de Portici," "Les Huguenots," "Guglielmo Tell," "Rienzi" and "Aida." Once he reigned as emperor of the lyric stage in Europe—for six days. On the seventh he rested, for from outer darkness there arose an obscure person named Carl Maria von Weber, who was armed with an opera entitled "Der Freischuetz."

That repose would be eternal if impresarios now and then did not find it expedient to provide a vehicle for a popular prima donna and to regale the world of fashion with an affluent spectacle, molested as little as possible by music and sense. In behalf of Rosa Ponselle and the Golden Horseshoe, General Manager Gatti-Casazza last Monday night exhumed "La Vestale" for the opening of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Festival Spirit Lacking.

Strokes of policy sometimes overreach themselves. As a newcomer, I had expected something rather splendid from a "first night" at the Metropolitan. No doubt the audience shiningly represented the worlds of finance, mode and art. But there was no tang of brilliancy in the air, no ozone of holiday and festival.

Except the standees, for whom a rail to lean upon is the prize of early arrival, the gathering assembled slowly and perfunctorily. When the curtain arose the parterre boxes were deserted. Some 10 minutes later a solitary woman occupied the Golden Horseshoe, and, as if consumed with mortification over the faux pas of a premature appearance, she fanned herself desperately with a program. The act was toward its conclusion when the charmed eclipse grew filled.

Those on the orchestra floor reposed sedately throughout the performance, save when, on the occasion of a high note from the tenor or a gesture of pathos from the soprano, etiquette exacted the punctilio of a bit of handclapping. During the intermissions, that democratic parade of silk-hatted clubmen, women furred and bejeweled and owners of standing room tickets in the garb of office and shop, jostled quietly through the narrow lobbies. Everything was discussed save the music and the stars. Is it too much to presume that the puerility of the opera diffused some part of the lethargy and doldrums that afflicted the audience?

Setting Impressive.

The setting for that dispirited function did not lack impressiveness. It is true that the five tiers of seats do not escape a certain resemblance to a many-decked excursion steamer. But the size of the great roofed cavern, the golden munificence of its decorations and the sheer mass of its occupants invite a sense of the imposing.

There was a tinge of warmth in the reception for Maestro Tullio Serafin, striding to his place at the conductor's dais. The lights fell, and an azure radiance, flowing upon the curtain, created a mood of suspense. The baton ascended, and instead of the adult music of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," which on the night before had discoursed beauty and reason in the same auditorium, there fell upon the ears the nursery prattle of Spontini's overture.

The curtain rolled aloft, disclosing a superb view of ancient Rome, with a towering arch of triumph and the forum in the background. Beneath the mighty masonry a brace of puppets, endowed one with a tenor and the other with a baritone voice, strutted, exchanged mechanical gestures, and carolled dialogue in a language of which few present understood a single syllable.

Upon their disappearance a band of damsels paced into view, and grouped themselves as if in vague memory of a Greek frieze. Some of these members of the sisterhood of Vesta boasted contours that might have been reprehensible in ladies of their vows. The most majestic of the virgins hymned solemn contralto notes, and from the choiring response a particular voice was gradually uncovered—the soprano of Miss Ponselle.

When they had disappeared into a temple, a band on the stage burst into a clamor of ear-shattering fanfares, and a triumphal procession was on. Down through the arch poured a countless throng — the Pontifex Maximus and his college of prelates, augurs, consuls, senators, matrons, lictors, legionaries, dancers and gladiators. The effect of costume and of a forest of Roman standards was glittering. Most blinding of all was a golden chariot, drawn by slaves, in which stood the victorious General, Licilius—the tenor of the beginning of the act.

Gladiators "Die" to Rise.

An unidentified goddess appeared on the streets of Rome in his honor—an apparition which created no further stir than a ballet of homage. Then the gladiatorial games! Spindle-legged champions raised one foot in the air, lunged mincingly with swords, politely clashed shields and made a general racket of cutlery. Suddenly half of them dropped mortally pierced to the ground, but swiftly performed the miracle of resurrection so as not to miss their share of the applause.

The second act was the interior of the Temple of Vesta, with the soprano, whose name was Giulia, busily stoking a fire with a sort of paddle. She sang a prolonged narrative, with both hands clasped against the right cheek to indicate despair, and an occasional explosive smile to register love. For she was in love with Licinius, and had taken an oath of celibacy. The General entered and engaged her in amorous debate, during which the holy fire inconsiderately went out.

Thereupon the High Priestess of the Vestals made contralto moan the Pontifex Maximus roared basso anathemas, and the populace chanted execrations in four-part writing. The guilty vestal was stripped of her white veil and forced struggling into a black one. During these tragic events there occurred almost unnoticed the loveliest scenic incident of the production. The altar was garlanded with rich-hued flowers, and their pigments were repeated on the vapor which, in simulation of flame, exhaled from the sanctuary. It was as delicate and charming an effect as the blue of the Madonna's robe in "The Miracle."

Next we were taken to the "Field of Infamies," where vestals who let the altar fire go out were buried alive. The Pontifex Maximus had another installment of objurgations, Licinius and his soldier friends blustered, thunder rolled and lightning flickered. An amiable bolt chanced to relight the altar fire, which was taken as a sign of divine forgiveness. Rejoicing arose and the reprieved vestal popped into her lover's arms.

Miss Ponselle Well Cast.

The marriage rites were solemnized in what appeared to be the Roman Coliseum, its tiers filled with some hundreds of spectators. There were multitudinous dances, in one of which a crew of satyrs excited disrespectful mirth by carrying each his section of hedge, from which they pounced coquettishly upon a troupe of not too shy bacchantes.

At his best moments, those of tragedy, the composer was just able to muster up an anaemic pathos, and of these windfalls Miss Ponselle made the very most, singing the music with a skill and expressiveness that almost made it sound genuine. It is a prima donna's opera, and the soprano's rendition of the grand aria of the second act provoked outcries of happiness from the upper regions of the house.

Giacomo Lauri-Volpi made his first appearance on a Metropolitan opening night as Licinio, and demeaned himself as the very beau ideal of that ligneous style which appears to be the model of operatic actors. His voice has ringing high notes and some energy, but not a touch of glamour.

Ezio Pinza made his debut as a member of the Metropolitan ranks. At first hearing, he seemed just another basso. Margaret Matzenauer, as the High Priestess, sang waveringly and at times off pitch. Giuseppe de Luca was Licinio's good old pal, Cinna, and Louis D'Angelo was a Consul. The orchestra was not conspicuously good, and the ballets were childishly conceived as well as untidily executed. The acting throughout was amateurish.

All in all, the performance and its reception formed an object lesson for composers who permit the center of gravity to shift from characterization in music to the outward effects of scenery, costumes and mass. "La Vestale" is a corpse, from which the utmost resources of the Metropolitan could elicit no more than a few galvanic twitches.

Novelties for "Pop" Program And Next Symphony Co

TWO departures from last year's custom are to mark of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's "Pop" concerts Odeon at 3:15 p. m. today and are to continue through son. The first is a lower price obtaining for lower floor s save for a small number reserved at 75 cents the great bod first floor will be sold at 50 cents, unreserved. As before cony seats will be 25 cents.

The other departure is the introduction of more novelties in the "pop" programs. Three of the orchestral pieces to be played today will be heard for the first time in St. Louis under Mr. Ganz's leadership. They are Massenet's "Scenes de Feerie," a musical interpretation of fairyland by the most popular of French operatic composers and one whose music is noted for its sweetness and its melody, a "Lullaby" for stringed orchestra by the Finnish composer Palmgren, and Liszt's "First Hungarian Rhapsody" for orchestra, a reworking, in orchestral form, of the material in the Second Rhapsody for piano and that of the "Hungarian Phantasy."

Today's soloist is Amie Punshon, mezzo-soprano, who has recently been studying in New York, where she is now soloist of the Dutch Reformed Church, and where she has won considerable success in recital and concert work. Her offerings are the "Adieu Forets" aria from Tschaikowsky's "Jeanne d'Arc" and a group of songs, with Frederick Fischer at the piano.

A First Presentation.

For the first time in America Georges Migot's "The Lacquer Screen with Five Pictures" will be presented in its orchestral form, in the Orchestra's second regular pair of concerts, at the Odeon, Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week. In that work a man who is both composer and painter has sought to create in music a picture—or to be more exact, to recreate through the line of melody and in the color of tone, the five images that appear upon a Japanese screen.

Migot was studying in Paris at the beginning of the war—a student 23 years old. He enlisted, went to the defense of Paris and, in August, 1914, within a month after the declaration of war, was horribly wounded.

For a year he lay in the tals, paralyzed, unable to but on that pain-racked brain was unceasingly active for three years he was on Physically a wreck, mentally his struggle was rewarded complete recovery.

He took up, not only painting. Not only painting, writing. He began to theories of art and wort with hands as well as Mlle. Renee Chemet, the guished French violinist, chosen to play the Saint-Saëns Concerto in B minor, she makes her St. Louis that work as the Symphony loist Friday afternoon and urday evening.

Mlle. Chemet is among the violinists of Fr among the woman violinists world. A graduate of the Conservatory, she has with the principal orchestra in Europe and America, been introduced to this coun Wilem Mengelberg under baton she played at a New Philharmonic Orchestra few seasons ago. Last summer Ganz heard her in Paris and mediately entered into negotia for her appearance here, gesting the Saint-Saens' as a graceful number, beca part, of her splendid style, part because of the glowing luscious tone which charac her playing.

A LE GALLIENNE MOVES DOWNTOWN WITH NEW VENTURE

Scandinavia, shuffling her playbills here and four times a week and waiting for the purpose a resident company which she has directed An astonishing resourcefulness and vitality.

It is too early to do much drum-beating in front of the Le Gallienne booth but if she can keep up the pace set by her production of Tchekhov's difficult and beautiful "Three Sisters," she will go far and so will I—as far, at least, as Fourteenth street and as soon as I can escape from the [illegible] and more routine work goes on in the center of town.

Of the preliminary fanfare, summoning one and all to subscribe at once, Miss Le Gallienne's [illegible] waxed historical as follows: The theater is the oldest theater in New York. Built in 1866 and known then as the Theater Francais, Adelaide Ristori made her [illegible] but in it during the first year of its existence. LECHTER, of course, was that French actor who startled this country half a century ago by presenting it with a blond Hamlet.

His way here was made easier [illegible] though not quite easy [illegible] by the circumstance that [illegible] advance publicity was written by an enthusiast named Charles Dickens.

Miss Gray Thinks
The new Stutz "8" with its safety chassis is one of the most beautiful and practical cars she has ever seen. As many know, her limbs are heavily insured—she considers this, "the car of greater safety," an additional safeguard. Also the beauty of its personal appointments.

The phenomenal demand for the NEW STUTZ has far exceeded even the most liberal expectations of its designers and builders and the Stutz factory problem continues to be one of increased production.
Naturally, the wise motorist wants to protect his investment by buying the automobile that is conceded in engineering circles as the car of the future.
By purchasing a NEW STUTZ, the buyer protects his investment against the impending obsolescence now confronting conventionally designed cars.
In The NEW STUTZ you will find the most advanced features of American and European automotive engineering. Improvements that eventually must be adopted by other fine cars.
Today these developments are confined either to The NEW STUTZ in America, or to the more expensive motor cars in Europe.

VA LE GALLIENNE MOVES DOWNTOWN WITH NEW VENTURE

ndinavia, shuffling her playbills ce and four times a week and ting for the purpose a resident mpany which she has directe i astonishing resourcefulness vitality. It is too early to do drum-beating in front of the Gallienne booth but if she can up the pace set by her pro- ion of Tchekhov's difficult and tiful "Three Sisters," she will far and so will I—as far, at e, as Fourteenth street and as as I can escape from the ter and more routine work go- on in the center of town.

f the preliminary fanfare, sum- ming one and all to subscribe of once, Miss Le Gallienne's let waxed historical as follows: The theater is the oldest the- in New York. Built in 1866 and wn then as the Theater Fran- Adelaide Ristori made her in it during the first year of xistence. Charles Fechter, Ed- Forrest, Adelaide Neilson, El- Booth, Kate Claxton, John w, Chauncey Olcott, and many ors have played on its fine e. Eva Le Gallienne takes up torch they lighted to bear it ward for a resummation of the y that was theirs and a faith ed with the people of New t that they will help her and company of actors to accom- h it."

ACHTER, of course, was that French actor who startled this country half a century ago by enting it with a blond Ham- His way here was made easier n though not quite easy gh) by the circumstance that advance publicity was written an enthusiast named Charles ens.

nd speaking of Dickens, I never Ristori's name without remem- g a letter he sent home from s about her performance in Medea. He didn't like it much wrote:

the little melodrama theaters ly I have seen the same thing times, only not so convention- nd so exaggerated. The papers all been in fits respecting the imity of the performance, and genuineness of the applause— cularly of the bouquets; which thrown on at the most pre- rous times in the midst of agonizing scenes, so that the characters had to pick their way among them, and a certain stout gentleman who played King Creon was obliged to keep a wary eye all night on the proscenium boxes and dodge them as they came down. Now Scribe, who dined here next day (and who follows on the Ristori side, being offended, as everybody has been, by the insolence of Rachel), could not resist the temptation of telling us that, going round at the end of the first act to offer his congratulations, he met all the bouquets coming back in men's arms to be thrown on again in the second act."

BUT what really arrested these old eyes as they roved over Miss Le Gallienne's historical note was an omission. For it was at this same Fourteenth Street Theater (during the engagement there of Fechter and Rose Le Clerq) that the newspaper advertisements announced a curtain raiser called "A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing" in which Miss Le Clerq would be assisted by a 4-year-old mummer, who, in what brief snatches of private life had been her portion up to then, was known as Marie Augusta Davey. But in the advertisements, which bristled into capital letters for the occasion, one learned at breakfast that day in the spring of 1870 that "A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing" would be made memorable by LITTLE MINNIE MADDERN. Her First Appearance On Any Stage.

Of course, it was nothing of the sort, but merely her New York debut. She had been a walking lady in the "Show Boat" country ever since she could walk at all.

Next day the monstrously restrained critic of this newspaper handed down the following opinion:

"Prodigies are not apt to be objects of pleasing contemplation to a healthy mind, but this Miss Minnie Maddern is made a prodigy by the absence of anything prodigious about her performance and her acting is entirely unexceptionable."

It must have been after reading this and more glowing notices in other newspapers that Tom Davey marched into the old Bowery Savings Bank with a new depositor for that granite repository, a minute depositor who trotted gravely at his side and was embarrassed, during the formalities of opening an account, by the circumstance that as yet she had been too busy with her art to learn to do more than make her mark.

ON MONDAY of last week, this same Minnie Maddern began a tour in Ibsen's "Ghosts"—arriving for the purpose at Wilkesbarre and being met at the station, you may be sure, by the Mayor, the Drama League and all the best people. After receiving the keys of the city, Mrs. Fiske spoke graciously of the encouragements to her higher aspirations which she had always received in Wilkes-Barre. The accounts of her first performance there as Mrs. Alving were glowing and, the trickle of news since suggests that the tour is by way of being a triumph.

AMONG the news notes of the week, I must record the opening of John Golden's new theater last Monday. The delicate task of christening a playhouse always calls for much thought, and even appeals to the neighbors. Thus Martin Beck summoned all the town to help him name the opulent temple of the drama which he opened last year in West Forty-fifth street. It was finally decided to call it the Martin Back.

Sometimes a prize is offered to prod sundry lazybones into putting on their thinking-caps. When the Wallick Brothers were planning their restaurant in Times Square before the war, they offered a prize of $250 for a good name for it and this sum was formally paid over to the ingenious fellow who hit upon the notion of calling it Wallick's. Louis Werba was even more fortunate when in quest of a name for his theater in Brooklyn. He offered a beggarly $100 as a prize for the winning suggestion and thus, for a mere song, as you might say, got hold of the happy name of Werba's Brooklyn Theater.

sermon on the present trends of the times.

Suffice it to say that the silent drama has no monopoly of the entertainment market. In point of dollars and cents, it may lead its nearest competitor, the radio, by a comfortable margin, but its supremacy is far from secure.

The producers and the exhibitors are realizing this. They are making extraordinary efforts to lure the undecided pleasure-seekers past the box-offices of their theatres. They are spending vast sums on advertising and exploitation, on "names" (such as Paul Whiteman and Gilda Gray) with which to augment their programs, and they are even being driven to the point of trying to make better pictures.

The moving picture industry in America is not strong because the American people have no other means of entertainment, as M. Gaumont suggests. It is strong because, if it relaxed its efforts for one instant, it would die on its feet.

The old phrase, "The public be damned," has been changed to "The public be amused." Literally millions of people are spending billions of dollars so that that end may be achieved.

BULLETINS.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Monta Bell still persists in the belief that Lillian Gish should play Lorelei Lee in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Her consent is unlikely, but there is no doubt that her appearance in this role would create a sensation. Other candidates for the part are Virginia Lee Corbin and Laura La Plante. Red Grange is to return here in January to make another picture, which, it is reported, will not include a football game.

NEW YORK.—Gene Tunney is trying to persuade George Bernard Shaw to let him make a screen version of "Cashel Bryon's Profession." If Gene is wise, he won't let G. B. S. see any of his work as a film star in "The Fighting Marine."

PLAY CARDS 'ROUND THE CLOCK'

Elderly People in London Find New Amusement.

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 6.—A feature of the autumn season is "round-the-clock" parties for elderly persons, many of whom are grandparents.

Bridge parties which begin in the afternoon and terminate the next day and chain dances wherein a group of elderly persons "do" the homes of their friends and end up at the starting point for breakfast about 5 a. m. the next morning, are the favorite modes of expression. "It is not the play which attracts these elderly folk, but the prizes," said one professional bridge tournament organizer. "Some of them find young people boring and languid and they prefer their social functions to be exclusively for those of their own age."

Automatic Turner of Music.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—A Berlin inventor claims to have solved the problem of turning the pages of a musical selection, an operation which always has bothered members of bands and orchestras. The invention consists of a lever operated with the foot. The lever is attached to the music stand in such a manner that when the foot depresses it the page is turned.

scenes in the Hollywood studio last week with George Sidney, Marion Nixon and Gareth Hughes. Others in the cast are Doris Lloyd, Ward Crane, Sammy Cohen and Claire McDowell.

After four months in New York, during which time she played the leading role in "Summer Bachelors," directed by Alan Dwan and worked in the opening scenes of "Bertha, the Sewing Girl," Madge Bellamy is back at her old haunts on the West Coast. The cast of "Bertha" includes Allan Simpson, Sally Phipps, Paul Nicholson, Anita Graves, Harry Bailey, J. Farrell MacDonald, Ethel Wales and Arthur Housman.

Marshall Neilan has been signed by Joseph M. Schenck to direct Constance Talmadge in "Colette," a story by Hans Kraley. The picture is to go into production immediately at the Neilan Studios in Edendale. Kraley's story, written especially for Miss Talmadge, is of the light sophisticated type.

Blanche Sweet is having her first location trip in more than a year. At present she is appearing in "Love O'Women," for Fox. Much of the action of this Adela Rogers St. John story takes place in San Francisco and it is in this city the company is locationing at present.

Having completed "The Great K. & A. Train Robbery," and "The Canyon of Light," almost simultaneously, Tom Mix, indefatigable Western star, has started production on "The Last Trail," from Zane Grey's story of the last of the Indian Wars. Carmelita Geraghty has the feminine lead and others in the cast are Lee Shumway, Jerry Madden, William Davidson and Robert Brower.

Richard Dix is to have a strong cast with him in his next picture, "Paradise for Two." Betty Bronson is to be his leading woman, and Andre Beranger, who recently completed a role with Mal St. Clair in "The Popular Sin," is to have an important part. "Paradise for Two" is an original by Howard Emmet Rogers. Production is scheduled to begin soon.

Thomas Meighan's next picture will be an original story of domestic difficulties by Owen Davis. It has been tentatively titled "The Silver Shield." Meighan is now working in "The Canadian," an adaptation by J. Clarkson Miller of Somerset Maugham's stage play, "The Land of Promise."

The scenario for "It," Clara Bow's first starring vehicle for Paramount, has been completed by Hope Loring and Louis D. Lighton, and production is now under way. The continuity was prepared from Elinor Glyn's film adaptation of her romantic story of the same title. Antonio Moreno is playing opposite Miss Bow, and William Austin has the comedy-heavy role. Others in the cast include Priscilla Bonner, Eleanor Lawson, Rose Tapley and Jacquelin Gadsdon.

GIVES HIS BLOOD 100 TIMES

French Athlete Has Aided Sufferers with 5½ Gallons.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—The world's record for blood transfusion by one person is credited to Raymond Briez. He has just submitted to the operation for the hundredth time. Since November, 1924, Briez has given five and a half gallons of his blood for suffering human beings without recompense of any kind except the satisfaction of having done a good deed.

Briez is only 29 years old and devoted to outdoor sports. He entered upon his career as a blood giver quite by accident. While visiting a sick friend, he heard the doctor say that the only hope of recovery was in blood transfusion. Immediately he offered himself. Briez is so strong and healthy that the operation has little effect on him. He continues work in his office as usual before and after each transfusion operation.

GERMAN PRINCE IS LAND POOR

Leopold of Lippe-Detmold Unable to Raise $500.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—Once among the richest of ruling German Urinces, Leopold, last of a distinguished line of royal governors of the principality of Lippe-Detmold, is virtually penniless. After the republican state of Prussia recently relieved him from poor rates so he could file suit for payment of a debt without cost, it was revealed that he did not have the $500 cash security required by German law to cover court expenses.

The suit has been brought against a Dr. Thyssen, to whom Leopold alleges he sold a parcel of land five years ago for $50,000 and never received payment. Leopold is land poor. He holds title to 9000 acres of land and a castle, but has been unable to find buyers for more of his land since Dr. Thyssen bought several thousand acres.

VON SEECKT TO WRITE A BOOK

Former Commander of German Army Will Retire in Bavaria.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—Gen. Hans von Seeckt, former commander in chief of the Germany army, will retire to a secluded estate in Bavaria to write his memoirs. His absence will nowhere be more keenly felt than in Berlin society circles. The Von Seeckt mansion was famous as a rendezvous of the city's smart set.

Frau Dorothea von Seeckt, popularly known as "Dodel Seeckt," presided over a salon in which one could find not only the leading lights of the army and navy, but poets, painters and musicians as well. The General is credited with being one of the most cultured and well-read men in Germany. His friends refuse to believe that his retirement from public life will be permanent. He already is being mentioned for the ambassadorship to the Court of St. James, as it is claimed his military career commands respect at the British court, while his enthusiasm for sports would be another valuable asset.

Paints Landscapes From Plane.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—Ernst Vollbehr, a Munich painter, is the first German artist to paint landscapes from an airplane. He is exhibiting a series of 14 landscapes sketched during repeated flights between Munich and Geneva. The canvases show the beauties of the Alps and the Bavarian Highlands. Vollbehr, a veteran of the war, is one of Germany's leading artists and achieved fame with his paintings of the African jungle.

No "off-color" teeth no toneless gums when that dingy film is removed

Accept this remarkable dental test. You'll gain the dazzling white teeth and coral-like gums that make smiles attractive and inviting.

MODERN dental science has made important, recent discoveries in lightening cloudy teeth.

In a few days you can work great changes in the color of your teeth: can give them dazzling whiteness, and your gums the healthy coral tint you envy.

If you seek new beauty and new charm, test this new way. Do as millions are doing on dental advice. Multiply the value of your smile. Mail the coupon. A 10-day test will be sent you.

Beneath that film are gleaming, glorious teeth

Run your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel a film, a viscous coat that covers them.

That film is an enemy to your teeth—and your gums. You must remove it.

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It absorbs discolorations and gives your teeth that cloudy, "off-color" look.

Germs by the millions breed in it and lay your teeth open to decay. And they, with tartar, are a chief cause of pyorrhea and gum disorders.

Tooth troubles and gum troubles now are largely traced to that film. Old-time methods fail in successfully combating it. That's why, regardless of the care you take now, your teeth remain unattractive.

New methods remove it. And Firm the Gums

Now, in a new-type dentifrice called Pepsodent, dental science has discovered effective combatants. Their action is to curdle the film and remove it, then to firm the gums.

Ordinary methods fail in these results.

Thus the world has turned, largely on dental advice, to this new method.

What you see when that film is removed—the whiteness of your teeth—will amaze you.

You are simply hiding the natural beauty of your teeth.

PLUTO WATER CLEANSES

Take a good water bath externally every day —a Pluto Water bath internally at least every two weeks

Washing out the intestines is the only way to get a thorough physic.

You don't want to clog yourself with drugs. For what good can come from a drug that removes some of the intestinal waste but leaves its own poisonous effect in your system?

What you need is a washing—as good a washing internally as you give yourself externally.

Pluto Water, bottled at French Lick Springs, starts cleaning out the intestines in 30 minutes to 2 hours after taking.

It makes you feel as fresh inside as a water bath makes you feel outside.

It is the standard American physic water—ask for it by name at any drug store — Pluto Water—the efficacious physic water that physicians prescribe.

BREAKS ANY COLD IN A FEW HOURS

First dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" relieves grippe misery

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffling! A dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" taken every two hours until three doses are taken will end grippe misery and break up a severe cold either in the head, chest, body or limbs.

It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages; stops nasty discharge or nose running; relieves sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

"Pape's Cold Compound" is the quickest, surest relief known, and costs only thirty-five cents at drug stores. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, and causes no inconvenience. Don't accept a substitute.

JANITOR RENDERS VALUABLE SERVICE

Has Lived in St. Louis for 31 Years; Worked 9 Years at the Advertising Building, 1627 Locust Street, Says He Keeps Healthy and Physically Fit by Using Herb Juice.

"Five years of poor health and, as I see it now, much unnecessary suffering, is a thing of the past with me, for I am back to normal enjoying good health. In Herb Juice I found a remedy that keeps me healthy and physically fit for my duties," said John Moosestaw, efficient janitor, who lives at 3016 North Fourteenth street, St. Louis, in a recent interview with the representative at Walgreen Drug Co.

JOHN MOOSESTAW

"It was through friends of mine that I learned about your wonderful medicine, and after taking it for quite a while I know more about what it will actually do for a person in a run-down condition like I was for five years. I felt as though I should tell you in person what wonderful relief it gave me and I made a special trip up here to see you." About his ailments and the relief obtained from the herb remedy, Mr. Moosestaw had the following to say: "I was a victim of chronic constipation for five years, then other very distressing symptoms and ailments arose, making a combination which put me in a very poor state of health. Indigestion, heartburn, gassy feeling after eating anything like a hearty meal, dizzy spells and bilious attacks, these were my troubles before using Herb Juice. While I tried to find something to purify and regulate my system, I was never successful until I had used Herb Juice and now I can conscientiously say that I am more able to render good service than I have been in many years. After using this medicine for only a short time, my bowels began to act regular, thereby removing the cause of constipation. My food digests much better and the dizzy spells and bilious attacks do not trouble me any more since my system was so well regulated. I only wish that every sufferer of the above-named ailments and symptoms could try Herb Juice. I am sure they would receive the same beneficial results that I have from its use. It is a wonderful laxative and system purifier and I am glad to recommend it."

Don't fail to see the Herb Juice man, direct from the Herb Juice Laboratories, who has established headquarters at Walgreen's drug store, 514 Washington avenue, and learn more of this great medicine that has relieved thousands of people right here in St. Louis. This great Herbal Extract remedy, called Herb Juice, now selling at the rate of a million bottles yearly.

I felt as though I should tell you in person what wonderful relief it gave me and I made a special trip up here to see you."
About his ailments and the relief obtained from the herb remedy, Mr. Moosestaw had the following to say: "I was a victim of chronic constipation for five years, often other very distressing symptoms and ailments arose, making a combination which put me in a very poor state of health. Indigestion, heartburn, gassy feeling after eating anything like a hearty meal, dizzy spells and bilious attacks, these were my troubles before using Herb Juice. While I tried to find something to purify and regulate my system, I was never successful until I had used Herb Juice and now I can conscientiously say that I am more able to render good service than I have been in many years. After using this medicine for only a short time, my bowels began to act regular, thereby removing the cause of constipation. My food digests much better and the dizzy spells and bilious attacks do not trouble me any more since my system was so well regulated. I only wish that every sufferer of the above-named ailments and symptoms could try Herb Juice. I am sure they would receive the same beneficial results that I have from its use. It is a wonderful laxative and system purifier and I am glad to recommend it."
Don't fail to see the Herb Juice man direct from the Herb Juice Laboratories, who has established headquarters at Walgreen's drug store, 814 Washington avenue, and learn more of this great medicine that has relieved thousands of people right here in St. Louis. This great Herbal Extract remedy, called Herb Juice, now selling at the rate of a million bottles yearly.

WOMAN JUDGE TO AID MISSOURI JURY MOVE

Florence Allen of Ohio Will Speak in St. Louis for Women on Venire.

Judge Florence E. Allen of the Supreme Court of Ohio has accepted an invitation to speak in St. Louis Dec. 4 in behalf of the movement sponsored by the League of Women Voters and associated organizations to put women on juries in Missouri.
Women have been acting as jurors in Ohio since 1920 and have improved the quality of jury service, according to Judge Allen.
"Women on juries double our chances of getting good juries," she has said. "They are much like men in their usual reactions to evidence, but they are marked by a notable desire for law enforcement. * * * For my own part, I believe that the participation of women in the courts, not only as attorneys, prosecutors and judges, but as jury women has immeasurably raised the tone of the administration of justice."
During her visit Judge Allen will address a luncheon meeting, under auspices of the league, to which representative men and women will be invited. She also will confer with women leaders as to the best methods to obtain jury service for women.
The Missouri Constitution now limits jury service to "men," but some lawyers hold this is a generic term, including both men and women. The Missouri statutes are more specific, limiting jury service to the "male sex." League leaders will decide shortly whether their campaign will be to amend the statutes or the Constitution, or both. To amend the statutes, consent of the Legislature will be required. To amend the Constitution it will be necessary to have the Legislature call an election for a vote on the proposition.

YVETTE GUILBERT SNEEZES HERSELF OUT OF $3000

Cold Spoils Return to Stage of Paris Singer Who Made Debut in 1888.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Yvette Guilbert's return to the stage after an absence of several years has been cut short by a cold in the head. Besides sneezing her off the boards this particular cold is likely to cost Mlle. Guilbert something like 100,000 francs (about $3000).
The singer's return at one of the largest Paris music halls attracted much attention and large audiences for a few days. Then her voice became hoarse and now and then a sneeze would burst in the middle of a verse. Whether the song was pathetic or humorous, the result was the same—a roar of laughter in the house. The music hall manager dismissed Yvette. She sued him for 100,000 francs for breach of contract. He sued for a similar amount for failure to carry out her engagement. When the case came up before the courts the elderly Judge became reminiscent:
"That Yvette Guilbert should be sued for not singing audibly," he said, "is a curious turn of affairs, since of all singers she has always been renowned for the clearness of her diction. It was 30 years ago I heard you first."
Mlle. Guilbert registered discomfort and those in the courtroom tittered. The court took the case under advisement.
Yvette Guilbert made her debut at the Variete in 1888.

LEASES HUNDREDS OF YEARS OLD HAVE 2000 YEARS TO RUN

Result Is Some Large Buildings in London Pay Ground Rent on 1830 Basis.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Thousands of pounds' profit are being made by some tenants of the City Corporation who hold leases of land drawn more than a century ago and are subletting these cheap sites at modern prices. To make things happier for these leaseholders their tenure has a long time to run—2000 years.
Some of the original leases of land owned by the corporation were drawn up 300 or 400 years ago and contained clauses making them perpetually renewable.
"The number of perpetually renewable leases," said an official, "is not very large, and new legislation came into operation at the beginning of this year which terminates at a certain date all of them. But the date is 2000 years ahead!"
Several big buildings in the city are only paying a ground rent value on an 1830 basis.

FRENCH PRAISE U. S. COMPOSER

George Antheil Given Ovation at Performance of French Symphony.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—George Aftheil, the 26-year-old American composer, is hailed as a master by French critics, who found the second performance of his Symphony in F had more than confirmed the impression made by the first hearing. The composer and Vladimir Golschmann, were given an ovation of an intensity rarely heard in a French concert room, especially to a foreign artist. Written in neoclassic style and with what some term a rather dry technique, the symphony displays a wealth of dramatic power and vigor.
Not having the stores of German folk tunes that Beethoven and Mozart had to draw upon, Antheil sought his themes in the scraps of music in his mind, dating back to childhood. These included the popular sentimental songs of the 1910 period, the rag time that came later and fragments of symphonies heard at concerts. Welded into a composite new form, the work moves on in direct and logical procession to an imposing climax. The musical critic of Comoedia, concludes his eulogy of the composition by saying, "We must hail in George Antheil a thoroughbred musician whose work does high honor to the young American school."

Wants to Focus Public Attention on Tanlac

Victim of Indigestion, Worn Nerves and Clogged System Finds Long-Sought Relief. Strength Restored

Oscar Chroninger, a well-known photographer with studios at 317 E. 12th St., Kansas City, Mo., says: "Many others should give Tanlac an opportunity.

"Due to overwork and the lack of exercise my system became clogged. Food that I ate caused painful indigestion and bloated my stomach. I seldom had a restful night's sleep. And I became so rundown that I lost all desire to work. Things went from bad to worse, until I began taking Tanlac.

"This tonic soon put me in prime condition. It settled my nerves which had long been over-wrought and gave me a ravenous appetite. Now I eat and digest food like a husky Kansas harvester. And I sleep so soundly that only the shrill bell of my alarm clock can awaken me. I can work all day and farinto the night without showing any signs of fatigue. My marvelous experience proves the merits of Tanlac."

Tanlac does banish pain that ravages health. It conquers ailments and usually builds up strength in famished bodies. It relieves the system of poison caused by constipation and sluggish liver. It is Nature's remedy, made from roots, barks and herbs according to the famous Tanlac formula.

Enjoy the priceless benefits of energy, strength and good health. Take Tanlac. First bottle shows amazing results. Get it from your druggist. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Fletcher's CASTORIA

When Baby Complains.

There are many ways a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure-all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe.

To avoid imitations always look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

DENMARK SETS PACE FOR CO-OPERATIVES

Story of Agricultural Development Is Written by Frank O. Lowden.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—The story of Denmark, as a notable exception to the historical precedent of decadent agriculture with advancing industrialism, is told by Frank O. Lowden, former governor, in the concurrent issue of the Prairie Farmer.

"In all ages and in all countries," said Lowden, "the agricultural problem has been an importan one. The history of civilization seems to run something like this: An agriculture more or less primitive, out of which towns and cities arise to serve the needs of the rural population; later as the towns and cities grow, commerce with other nations. Manufacturing follows. Finally urban life becomes so attractive and so profitable as to imperil agriculture. There usually has developed an unconscious struggle between the dwellers in the cities on the one hand and those who live in the country on the other as to which shall survive. In the long story of agriculture, rural civilization has gone down before the growing strength of the urban forces.

From Serfdom to Leadership.

"Denmark is chiefly interesting to me because it is the most notable exception to this general rule of which I know. As late as 1788 those who tilled the land were largely serfs. In that year serfdom was abolished. The majority of the farmers in Denmark today are descendants of those serfs. And yet they have reached a higher degree of economic independence and are better educated as a whole than any other farmers in the world.

"In 1864 Denmark lost two provinces to Germany and Germany practically closed its markets to Denmark. It was a dark hour indeed for Denmark. Out of this despair grew the determination to repair the losses by united effort of her people to make the best possible use of her remaining acres.

Beginning of Co-operation.

"This conviction was the real beginning of the co-operative movement in Denmark. In 1882 the first co-operative creamery was established. The farmers around Hjedding started to manufacture and market their butter.

"They at once realized a good price. In a short time the butter made by co-operatives brought a better price than that sold by the big estates which had previously brought 25 per cent more. In a short time the owners of large estates closed their dairies and joined the co-operative movement. The skim milk from the creameries is fed to hogs. What is left is made into cheese so there is no waste.

"An increasing number are selling their cream through butter export associations. These associations are federated into what is called the Federated Danish Co-operative Butter Export Association. Co-operatives manufacture 40 per cent of the butter made in Denmark and market 80 per dent of the hogs.

Increase Yield of Milk.

"The development of co-operative marketing of dairy products is just one of the outstanding accomplishments of Denmark. Through these organizations the farmers have learned the value of good cows. In 1891 the average milk yield for each cow was 3306 pounds of milk and the yield of butterfat was 106 pounds. These figures have been increased until in 1923 the average production for each cow was 6590 pounds of milk and 240 pounds of fat.

"There are no better individual cows in Denmark than in the United States, but there are few poor cows while in this country the poor cows predominate.

"After improving the quality of the products the co-operatives adopted a trade name 'Lur.' In 1906 Parliament enacted a law by which no export of butter could be made that did not bear that brand. Government inspection was established and no butter could be exported that did not equal the quality of that produced by the co-operatives. This action gave the co-operatives preference in the world market."

WYMAN SCHOOL TO KEEP ITS QUARTER-CENTENARY

Former Principals and Alumni to Join in 25th Anniversary Celebration Friday.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of Wyman Public School, 1547 South Theresa avenue, will be observed with ceremonies in the school auditorium Friday evening.

John J. Maddox, Superintendent of Instruction; Henry J. Gerling, assistant superintendent, and A. R. Morgan, principal of Sherman School—all former principals of Wyman—will be on the speaking program, with former Judge J. Hugo Grimm, past president of the Parent-Teacher's Association, and Scott R. DeKins, representing the Wyman alumni. Members of the Board of Education will be guests.

Hotel for Air Passenger.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—The rapid increase in passenger air transportation has induced a hotel company to undertake the construction of a 300-room hotel for air travelers near Templehof Field of the German Air Service. All planes of the 75 national and international lines arrive and depart from there. The flying field is about 20 minutes' ride from the heart of the city, and it is believed passengers who arrive late at night or wish to depart early in the morning will find it more convenient to live close to the field.

DIGESTIVE DISORDERS CAUSE GREAT DISCOMFORT

A Kentucky lady, Mrs Elizabeth Spivey, who lives near London, Ky., makes the following statement:

"I have found Black-Draught an excellent medicine to use for constipation. Relief is quickly obtained and no bad after-effects follow its use.

"I have used Black-Draught in my home for thirty years, and have thoroughly tested its merits.

"Frequently I am troubled with spells of constipation which probably come from lack of exercise. A bad headache quickly follows and sometimes pain from gas accumulated in the intestines, bad breath and general discomfort.

"I have learned to prevent such troubles by taking Black-Draught at the first danger signal. Often my diet is such that the digestive tract does not function properly, thus causing constipation.

"Black-Draught has proved most effective, at such times, that I always keep it on hand in the family medicine chest.

"It is a regular medicine with us. We have often recommended it to neighbors and friends, because we believe in passing helpful knowledge along to others."

Black-Draught is used regularly in thousands of homes. A full dose taken at night, or in the morning or a pinch after meals, will go far toward cleansing the system and preventing the ill-effects of biliousness and constipation.

Try this purely vegetable laxative-cathartic medicine.

In use over 85 years. Sold everywhere. 25c for 25 doses.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

When you darken your hair with ... Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. A little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

Home-made, but Ends Coughs In a Hurry

A family remedy of dependable cough medicine. Easily made and saves about $2

If you have a severe cough or chest ... with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up at night with hoarse cough, and you want quick relief, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified honey, if desired. This makes a pint of really splendid cough remedy. It tastes pleasant, and in spite of its low cost, can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes of the throat and bronchial tubes with an ease and promptness that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

U. S. EXPORT TRADE TO EUROPE FALLS OFF $326,000,000

Figures Confirm Underwood's Statement That High Duties Will Lose Markets for America.

Washington Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The annual report of the Commerce Department shows that American exports to Europe decreased from $2,660,000,000 in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, to $2,334,000,000, in the fiscal year 1926. The loss was $326,000,000. These figures strikingly substantiated the declaration of Senator Oscar Underwood of Alabama, that Europe will be lost as an American market unless the Fordney-McCumber tariff rates are lowered to a reasonable level at which Europeans can make money on goods sold in the United States.

Partly as a result of the diminished consumption of American goods in Europe the total export trade of the United States decreased. In 1925 the total trade was $4,865,000,000. In 1926 it was $4,753,000,000. The decrease was $112,000,000. The difference between the total loss and the European loss was made up, of course, by increased exports to the world outside Europe.

Total Exports Increasing.

The annual report, while almost ignoring the decreased shipments to Europe, emphasized the fact that exports to non-European countries were increasing yearly.

"The growth of our manufactured exports is reflected in the market expansion of our trade with those parts of the world outside of Europe," the report said. "To European countries we sold in 1925-26 goods of a value only 62 per cent above the pre-war average, representing a quantitative increase probably little more than 10 per cent. But our exports to non-European countries, in the aggregate, had nearly trebled, increasing 197 per cent. The gain was 344 per cent in the case of Asia, 191 for Latin America, 321 per cent for Africa.

Rapid advance in our sales to practically all non-European countries has occurred even since 1921-22, in face of Europe's progress in regaining her export trade."

Unfavorable Balance Cut.

The departmental experts, however, had reassuring words for American exporters who might be afraid that Europe's economic recovery would jeopardize the newly developed non-European markets.

"Nor need this country fear that the recovery of Europe, so greatly to be desired from every other point of view, will interfere with the growth of our foreign trade," the report continued. "Such recovery means greater direct buying power of Europeans for our goods. Still more, by making Europe a better market for the products of Latin America, the far East and Africa, it adds to the ability of these regions to buy not only from Europe, but also from America. The experience of the last five years is sufficient evidence on that point."

Charts accompanying the annual report, while intended to show the great gains American commerce has made during the last year, actually exposed, upon analysis, the almost hopeless trade returns between this country and Europe, insofar as public and private debt settlements are involved.

Experts Reassure Exporters.

The decreased exports to Europe naturally decreased the unfavorable European balance of trade. Of our total imports of $4,466,000,000, less than a fourth, or $1,275,000,000 came from Europe. Thus, with $2,334,000,000 worth of exports to Europe, or about one-half of our total exports of $4,753,000,000, the unfavorable trade balance for Europe amounted to $1,059,000,000, a sum that must be made up by cash payments or credits obtained by tour trade or borrowings.

In 1925 the unfavorable European trade balance reached the colossal sum of $1,489,000,000. Imports from Europe last year amounted to only $1,171,000,000 while the exports amounted to $2,660,000,000.

The favorable trade balance the United States has with Europe has enabled this country to keep a favorable trade balance with the remainder of the world. Last year favorable American trade balance with the entire world was $1,041,000,000, as the total exports amounted to $4,865,000,000 and the imports to $3,824,000,000. In the last year, however, partly due to the decrease in European trade the favorable American trade balance dropped dow nto $287,000,000. Exports amounted to $4,753,000,000 and imports to $4,466,000,000. The increased value of imports was mostly due to the increased charges for rubber, certain metals and certain textile fibers.

The United States had an unfavorable trade balance with the non-European countries of $772,000,000 for 1926, when the American imports were $3,192,000,000 and the exports $2,420,000,000 and an unfavorable balance of $449,000,900 in 1925, when the imports were $2,654,000,000 and the exports $2,205,000,000.

RECIPE TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought in any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

FARR'S GRAY HAIR RESTORER

YES—"bob" your hair if you want to. There's no age limit. But remember a "bob" shows up every spear of gray. It needs more attention if you are to get that youthful appearance you expect. For 18 years Farr's has deserved the confidence of women all over the U. S.

Brookline Chemical Co.
Has stood back of their formula to the full extent of their reputation. Every bottle has been sold with their guarantee that it is as harmless as water to hair and scalp.

Brings Back Natural, Original Color
Making gray or faded hair glossy, lustrous, soft and attractive, without a trace of gray.

No Trouble at All to Use

Because perfectly clear and clean, not sticky, and will not rub off nor stain the scalp; requires only a few minutes in the privacy of your room; its use cannot be detected. Once the hair has returned to its original color it is easily kept so, and can be washed, curled or permanently waved without affecting the color.

GIRL STUDENT LOANS FAVORED AND OPPOSED

Pennsylvania Club Federation Proposal of Recreation Fund Starts Argument.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—Proposal by the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs to establish a fund to make loans to girls when they are attending college to further their social enjoyment, has aroused a storm of argument among clubwomen and educators here and in other sections of the country.

The proposal is not for a fund to aid in paying tuition, but to provide young women with money to dress well, attend entertainments and social functions and enjoy the social side of college life.

At Temple University, where 4,143 women students are enrolled, a lively interest is manifested in the proposal. Miss Laura H. Cornell, associate president, highly approves such a step.

"We have a revolving fund," she said, "out of which loans are made to students to pay for tuition and other necessaries and our experience is that 92 per cent of such loans are repaid. Many of our girl students have to practice great self-denial. It would undoubtedly be beneficial to girl students if they could borrow money to provide for comforts while at college.

Necessary to Education.

"Without question, there are many ways by which girl students can supplement their classroom studies if they have the money to attend the theater, opera and concerts, all of which under proper guidance may be edifying and beneficial. Organizations even aside from sororities spring up requiring fees and dues and the student who is deprived of the sociability and experience she cannot afford misses something she might enjoy and loses something which would go a long way toward rounding out her education.

"Such loans should be carefully limited and expenditures supervised lest it lead to extravagances."

At the University of Pennsylvania, where 800 or more girls are studying, Miss Jean Crawford, directress of women, was much less enthusiastic over the plan.

"I believe one appreciates the things it requires a struggle to possess," she said. "Surely it is part of an education to learn the value of money, but if it comes without labor, we are apt to be extravagant. Many opportunities are afforded in a city to earn sufficient at odd times to help one gain an education, and I am not quite sure that it is not better to gain self-reliance by self-support than to run the risk of becoming careless through borrowings."

Men Also Interested.

It is not only the girl pupils that are interested. The matter has become a burning question in the fraternity houses and eating clubs among the men. The question is being debated as to whether if a man marry a girl who has borrowed from the revolving fund and has not repaid the debt, the bridegroom becomes liable for the pre-nuptial indebtedness of the bride. The attitude of the "hard boiled" is that as they would not "buy a pig in a poke" they have no intention of proposing marriage without the query, "how much do you owe?"

Mrs. Charles J. Bailey, prominent Omaha clubwoman, declared the innovation may be proved worthwhile. She minimized the financial danger to prospective grooms. "Even if a girl became engaged during college years," she said, "it would be embarrassing for her to ask her fiance if he would be willing to pay for the pretty clothes she wears.

"It is true that many girls attending college are deprived of many advantages through lack of funds to dress well. Thus they are cut out of social good times which would develop their ability and charm and in fact make them better fitted to take places either in the home or in the business world. Of course I advocate moderation both in dress and entertainment."

WALES SHUNS HORSES FOR Ggolf

Admits He Can Dance Charleston Better Than He Can Drive Off.

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The Prince of Wales has lost some of his fondness for horseback riding and of late has fallen under the fascination of golf.

As a beginner he is fond of joking about his game. He admits he cannot play golf as well as he can dance the Charleston. He estimates that on an average he loses six balls a day. His friends call attention to the fact that the heir to the throne never permits himself to hold up other players while he and his caddy search for a ball he has planted in the rough.

Germany to Build Good Roads.

By the Associated Press

BERLIN, Nov. 6—Nine thousand miles of improved highways are to be built in Germany during the next five or six years. The Government has sanctioned a road-building project which will cost about $20,000,000. The highways will criss-cross Germany from north to south and east to west, connecting every city of importance. The object of the project as announced by the Government is to make Germany a paradise for automobilists, and to capture more of the tourist business which comes

...MMUNITY SUNDAY' ... ST. LOUIS CHURCHES

...ngregations Greeted Today With Posters Inscribed, "Give All You Can."

"Community Sunday" will be observed in all Protestant churches of St. Louis and St. Louis County today in conformance with a resolution of the Ministerial Alliance supporting the Community Fund, which serves 50 local charities.

Church-goers will be greeted with posters bearing the Community Fund slogan, "Give Your Share," upon entering the vestibules of their churches, and in many congregations the importance of supporting the fund will be the subject of sermons. Designation sheets outlining the method of distributing the sums contributed will be given out at the close of the services.

Reasons for giving to the Community Fund were outlined briefly by Dr. John W. McIvor, chairman of the Church Co-operation Committee, as follows:

"The 50 branches of the Community Fund make more productive workers and more intelligent useful citizens, prevent disease and untimely deaths, prevent vice and crime, and improve property values. Our community's prosperity and well being depend in large measure on the services of these organizations. Less than seven per cent of the amount on thi ssystem for money-raising and distribution, instead of nearly 40 per cent under the old system. Much valuable time is saved in making the contribution to cover 50 separate appeals. Every kind of human need in all parts of our community are cared for. There is no longer need for begging on the streets."

Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover extended his best wishes for the success of hte Community Fund campaign in a telegram last night to L. Wade Childress, general chairman of the Fund. Hoover declared the fund system, "establishes once and for all the burden on each individual and protects the community from fraud and misrepresentation."

ANS BILL TO DEAL WITH INTERFERENCE

thor of White Radio Measure Considers Way to Give U. S. Inspectors Power.

Congressman Wallace White, thor of the White radio bill, has der consideration a proposal to fer on the radio inspection serv- authority to investigate all es of interference with radio re- tion.

For the last few months the ra- inspection service has refrained m activities except inspection of tions. Previously, whenever sible, the inspectors attempted relieve extreme cases of inter- nce due to leaky electric lines. Under the Department of Jus- ruling, these activities were tailed.

Officials of the Department of mmerce do not believe the White as framed, confers authority inspectors to investigate non- interference. At the same e, it is felt that the inspectors uld be required to co-operate in work, to a certain extent.

epresentative White may pro- that a clause something like be included in the law:

When it does not seriously con- with their other duties, radio ectors shall investigate com- nts of interference of a non- o character. When the source the interference has been dis- ered, the company which is re- nsible shall be notified and ll remedy the trouble within 10 s under penalty of punishment."

is believed that such a clause uld not be objectionable to elec- companies because most of the rference is due to leaks, which te power. Location of these ks by inspectors, it is said, ld be welcomed by the com- es, which would be only too to repair them.

ren without the law, the com- es have shown eagerness to in this kind of work for their benefit and to win the good of the public by improving re- tion.

decrease of $100,000 will be e in the annual appropriation the radio inspection service for coming fiscal year, it has been ed. Last year Congress ap- riated around $250,000 for the inspection service, which was ve been used to increase the force and provide better in- ments for locating interference. e Department of Commerce, ever, felt that the Department stice ruling curtailed its activ- in this connection and a large of the appropriation has not een touched. Unless a law is ed before the end of the fiscal around $100,000 of last year's propriation will be turned back the Treasury.

timates for the appropriation the coming fiscal year were ed on the assumption that no would be passed because Gov- ment departments are not al- d to anticipate legislation in respect.

FAMOUS ACTRESS 'COMES BACK' FOR EVEREADY HOUR

JULIA MARLOWE

JULIA MARLOWE IS TO BE STAR OF EVEREADY HOUR NOV. 9

Julia Marlowe, foremost American actress of Shakspearean roles, comes out of retirement to present her art before the biggest audience of her career—the radio audience. Miss Marlowe is announced as the star of the Eveready Hour program to be broadcast next Tuesday evening, Nov. 9, through KSD, direct from WEAF, New York.

Miss Marlowe's voice, said by critics to be one of the most marvelous in the history of the stage, will be heard for the first time "on the air."

MOST ELABORATE RADIO PROGRAM FOR NOV. 15

World-Famed Stars Engaged for "First Night" of National Broadcasting Co.

The most elaborate broadcasting program ever presented, featuring among others, world-famed stars never before heard on the air, will mark the introduction of the National Broadcasting Co. to the radio public Monday evening, Nov. 15. Topnotch stars of the theatrical, concert and radio field are being obtained.

"A chain of radio stations will simultaneously broadcast this program so that the radio audience will have the opportunity to be with us on our 'opening night,' says Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of the company.

"Some of the artists with whom we are negotiating have never been heard by radio, some have not appeared before the microphone in over a year, and one or two, who will be at points distant from New York City on this evening appearing in concert, will be 'picked up' by telephone lines from whatever city they may be in.

"This will necessitate intricate technical operations, but it is our plan to give the radio audience a four-hour program which will live long in their memories as an occasion marking another milestone in the history of radio broadcasting."

The program is scheduled to begin at 7 p. m., Central Standard Time.

'THE MAGIC FLUTE' WILL BE KSD OPERA TOMORROW NIGHT

The grand opera, "The Magic Flute," heard by the radio audience during the midsummer will be repeated from KSD at 9 o'clock tomorrow night by the WEAF grand opera company. The leading roles will be assumed as follows: Queen of the night, Genia Zielinska, coloratura soprano; Pamina, Frances Sebel, soprano; Tamino, Giuseppe di Benedetto, tenor; Papageno, Carl Rollins, baritone; Sarastro, Nino Ruisi, basso; Monastatos, Justin Lawrie, tenor.

DIVIDING WAVELENGTHS PLAN IS BEING REVIVED

Would Reserve Bands for National Broadcasters and Limit Local Stations' Power.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—A proposal of two years ago to readjust the scheme of wave length allocation for broadcasting stations, reserving special bands for national broadcasters and limiting the power of purely local stations to a point where simultaneous operation by a large number of them would not cause serious interference, is being revived.

The idea, first sponsored by engineers of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., was given wide attention at the start, but was dropped in the belief that the scheme adopted by the Government would eventually work out to the satisfaction of everyone concerned.

Now that the Government no longer has authority over who shall and who shall not broadcast, the power that stations shall use and the channels on which they may operate, the Government's plan is admitted generally to have collapsed. So national and local division of stations is being looked upon with favor in many circles.

According to the plans for such a division of a band of wave, lengths of suitable size could be reserved for the higher powered broadcasters that have established reputations for providing a better type of radio program. In the first group would be placed those stations operating on the chain system of program distribution. The wave lengths of these stations would be separated sufficiently to prevent interference with each other.

In the second class of stations would be those whose services are purely local and whose power has been only of a small or moderate amount.

If it were found to be advisable to limit the power of these stations to a maximum of 100 watts, it is believed, not only all of the stations now on the air but all of those contemplating entering could be accommodated.

Reports reaching the capital are that the plan is to be offered for consideration when the joint Senate and House Conference Committee meets later this month to discuss the radio bill now pending.

DAMROSCH TO GIVE WAGNER'S 'WALKUERE'

Orchestra Leader to Broadcast Opera Lecture Recital From KSD on Nov. 13.

Walter Damrosch, leader of the New York Symphony Orchestra, for the second time will be heard in a dramatic piano lecture-recital of Richard Wagner's "Waukuere" during the Balkite Hours from KSD Saturday evening, Nov. 13.

Damrosch, who attained fame more than a decade ago by explanatory lecture-recitals of Wagner's works, is again delighting members of the radio audience with a series of these. There are several things in connection with a lecture-recital concerning "Walkuere" as given by Damrosch for the radio audience which make it of particular significance to him and indirectly to the radio audience.

It was at the age of 23 that Damrosch first conducted the New York Symphony Orchestra, the performance being of "Walkuere." This was immediately after the death of his father, at that time conductor of the New York Symphony Orchestra. Damrosch then assumed the position of leadership in a tour of the country which had been previously arranged, and has been its conductor since. At the opening performance in Boston in the closing "fire scene" several grass mats on the stage caught fire and at the most dramatic moment of this act a Boston fireman on duty in the building rushed forward with a fire extinguisher which snuffed out the blaze. At the conclusion of the performance Damrosch, arm in arm with the fireman, appeared before the curtain to receive the plaudits of the crowd.

"Walkuere" is a music drama in three acts, and although completed by Wagner in 1856 was not given until 1870 at Munich. Its first presentation in London occurred in 1875. Its first presentation in New York was in 1877, and it was not heard again until 1885, when revived by Dr. Leopold Damrosch at the Metropolitan Opera House, where it has been a regular feature since. It is said that if Wagner had done nothing more than to have written the last scene of this opera, it would have sufficed to win him a place among the greatest composers.

VIKINGS TO PLAY PEER GYNT SUITE OF GRIEG FROM KSD

The Vikings' program Tuesday evening will be entirely orchestral. It will be presented by an orchestra of 20 pieces. The program will be made up entirely of selections from Grieg's famous "Peer Gynt Suite." including "Morning," "In the Hall of the Mountain King," and "Asa's Death." From Peer Gynt Suite No. 2, will be taken, "Arabian Dance" and "Solvejg's Song."

BETTY CROCKER TO TELL OF EXPERIMENTS WITH NOODLES

The scope in life of the average noodle is not nearly so narrow as one might think, according to Betty Crocker, home economics specialist. Usually one thinks of noodles as being an integral part of soup, says Miss Crocker. The facts are that the noodle is extremely versatile and can fit in nicely in many unexpected places. Miss Crocker, while she was working on the recipe for a noodle ring recently, developed several new types of dishes in which noodles have a very important part. In a talk which she will broadcast from KSD tomorrow she will tell the benefits of these experiments with noodles in her own kitchen.

Market day responsibilities for the housewife will be discussed by Miss Crocker when she will broadcast Wednesday morning.

Registrations in the radio cooking school which Betty Crocker conducts over the air each Friday morning have mounted to thousands. In virtually every State in the Union housewives have registered for this course. The majority of them are reporting on the Friday lessons in order that they may earn the certificate of graduation. For the sixth cooking school lesson which goes on the air Friday morning, Miss Crocker has selected as her subject, "Macaroni, 1926 Style."

ATWATER KENT RADIO SPEAKERS

Why your speaker is vital to your enjoyment of radio

GREAT ARTISTS, including Josef Hofmann, Louise Homer, Mary Lewis, Albert Spalding, and Reinald Werrenrath, use and approve Atwater Kent Radio Speakers. Naturally, they are sensitive to imperfection of tone, and so they prefer the instrument that re-creates the broadcast programs faithfully.

A radio speaker gives voice to a receiving set. It can make or mar the tone that you hear. With an Atwater Kent Radio Speaker you are sure of natural tone and all the volume you wish. Models L and H are finished in dark brown crystalline. Model G in amber buff and sage green. Prices range from $16 to $23. It will pay you to see and hear one, at any store selling Atwater Kent Radio.

MME. LOUISE HOMER says: "I don't try to explain it. I merely enjoy it. Such perfect re-creation by my Atwater Kent Radio Speaker is a delight."

ALBERT SPALDING says: "Some Speakers fail to re-create low and high notes. My Atwater Kent Radio Speaker, however, brings me all the notes, and the tone is true."

JOSEF HOFMANN says: "The simplicity and all-round reliability of the latest Model of the Atwater Kent Radio, as well as the superb quality of tone, are absolutely unique."

REINALD WERRENRATH says: "My Atwater Kent Radio Speaker re-creates the music so faithfully that none of the quality is lost."

FADA Radio

This Sounds Like Bragging But It's Absolute Fact!

THE new Harmonated Reception is far more faithful than anything you have ever heard.

By scientifically synchronizing every working part of both receiver and the speaker and by totally shielding every individual stage against leakage and interference, Fada Engineers have produced radio results heretofore unequalled in tone, volume and quality.

Don't fail to hear Harmonated Reception at the earliest possible moment—ask us for the name of the nearest demonstrator.

The high-wave reception range of the Grebe dial (B)—from 550 down to 240 meters—equals the practical tuning range of the usual receiver. The low-wave range of the Grebe dial (A) provides additional reception down to 150 meters.

You Don't Need Two Radio Receivers

OVER 100 existing stations with worthwhile programs are beyond the reach of the average receiver because it cannot tune below 240 meters.

Thus, to get both high and low-wave stations requires two receivers—unless you own a Synchrophase. Due to its Low-Wave Extension Circuits—exclusively Grebe—it will receive all stations from 550 down to 150 meters. This is done very simply, as one dial covers this complete range.

Ask your dealer to demonstrate this and the other recent Grebe developments; then compare

MORE WORK IN FUTURE FOR RADIO INSPECTORS

Closer Observation to Be Required When Remedial Law Is Passed.

There will be increased work for radio supervisors and inspectors in the nine radio districts as soon as remedial radio legislation is enacted by Congress. Supervisory work will include closer observation of broadcode and broadcasting stations, the determination of the causes of interference both from radio and other electrical devices, frequent inspection of broadcast stations, and the decision as to what is intentional or malicious interference.

There are now nine district headquarters in Boston, New York, Baltimore, Atlanta, New Orleans, Denver, Chicago, Seattle and San Francisco. A possible development is the establishment of suboffices in several cities where radio activities are great, especially at some of the ports. Provision for a few suboffices was made in the last appropriation bill, and also for three radio test trucks, but in view of the pending radio bills, one of which took from the Department of Commerce all control of radio, nothing was undertaken which might interfere with a new radio law. It is a fact that more observation points are needed by the radio supervisors, as well as additional sub-offices where inspectors can be located permanently to carry on the large amount of work in connection with the inspection of ships, the giving of both commercial and amateur operators' examinations, and the conduct of regular business. At least one radio inspector in a district is also necessary. Besides the supervision of radio broadcasting, the radio officials of the department have considerable work to do, although the ordinary fan may not realize it. They are charged with the inspection, licensing and observation of all American commercial and amateur stations, ashore and at sea, as well as the licensing and examination of all operators. This work is chiefly in the interest of the safety of life at sea and general international communication via radio. Radio supervisors are not concerned with broadcast reception and do not inspect or adjust receiving sets, but have to answer innumerable questions relating to set-ups, interference and the wave lengths of broadcast stations and fans.

Under normal conditions, they rarely inspect all broadcast stations prior to licensing, but assign the suitable channels when available and test the stations to ascertain whether they are keeping on their assigned channels. Just now part of this work is eliminated, since the Department of Justice decision forbids the assignment of wave lengths, except upon the request of the stations, but the field radio force of the department and those in Washington are still kept busy with routine duties and commercial and amateur work.

When a new law is passed, it is possible that an entire reassignment of broadcast channels may be found necessary, but certainly all stations will have to be inspected and observed frequently. More substations, radio trucks, inspectors and probably more money will be needed, if the work of properly policing the air traffic is to be carried on.

AERIAL WIRES NEED CLEANING

An outdoor aerial should be cleaned every six months or so. Because the wire or wires become heavily oxidized, the over-all efficiency is greatly reduced. The most effective and a simple way of cleaning is to coil the aerial wire into a roll and place it in a large earthen ware dish, in which is poured about 25 cents worth of muriatic acid mixed with three parts of water. Leave it there for about an hour and stir the solution three or four times every 15 minutes or so.

Next prepare a strong solution of soda and water in another large dish and place the roll of wire in this to neutralize the acid. Let the wire remain in this solution for about 10 minutes; then take it out and scrub off any remaining scales of oxidation with an old toothbrush. After cleaning, the wire will be found in the same clean condition as when purchased.

"Realistic!"

REPRODUCTION so perfect that it holds you—thrills you—with its warm, living realism! That's Kellogg Radio. Full, round volume on the low notes—clear, sharp fidelity on the high. Music that is complete in every overtone and harmonic—those elements that must be present if you are to have the feeling that an artist is "right in the room."

Kellogg, master builder of telephones for 29 years, has applied its vast experience to Radio and produced both a receiver and speaker that are distinct advances over anything previously known. You should see and hear Models 507 and 508, for, besides reproduction, Kellogg builds into these 6-tube sets other qualities for which you have searched.

There is the third stage of radio frequency that means satisfactory range and selectivity. Freedom from interference from local stations is assured by thorough shielding. Four circuits are controlled in exact unison with a single knob.

More important than any of these is the exclusive Kellogg system—Inductive Tuning—which gives equal sensitivity, for the first time, at all wave lengths—200, 310, 425, 550 meters!

KELLOGG Rawlan Reproduction Radio

Licensed under application for letters patent of Radio Frequency Laboratories, Inc. (R. F. L.)

Either table model 507 or console 508 will appeal to those whose sense of refinement demands furniture of quiet line and dignified workmanship. Matched walnut, carefully selected, has been given the justly popular dull, smooth finish that is easily cared for and does not easily mar.

The loud speaker in Model 508 has a 44-inch horn, carefully moulded in a new material, which brings out the accompaniments of bass viol and large saxaphone in their correct relationship with the melody-carrying violins, cornets and piano. The realism will convince you that Radio is now in a new era of its development.

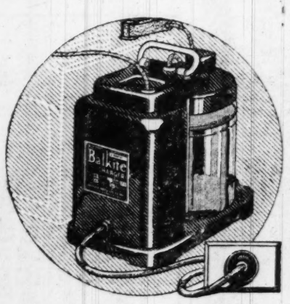
Over 75,000 Balkite "B"s are today giving satisfactory service. 3 models for all types of sets: Balkite "B"-W at $27.50 for sets of 5 tubes or less requiring 67 to 90 volts. Balkite "B"-X, for sets of 8 tubes or less, including power tubes—$42. Balkite "B"-Y, for any radio set—$69.

Balkite Trickle Charger—$10

MODEL K, shown above, can be left on continuous or trickle charge thus automatically keeping the battery at full power. Converts your "A" battery into a light socket "A" power supply. Rate about .5 ampere. 200,000 in use. Price $10.



The New Balkite Charger

MODEL J. Has two charging rates: a low trickle charge rate and a high rate for rapid charging and heavy-duty use. Can thus be used either as a trickle or as a high rate charger, and combines their advantages. Noiseless. Large water capacity. Visible electrolyte level. Rates: with 6-volt battery, 2.5 and .5 amperes; with 4-volt battery, .8 and .2 ampere. Special model for 25-40 cycles. Price $19.50.

Balkite Combination

Supplies automatic power to both "A" and "B" circuits. Controlled by the filament switch already on your set. Entirely automatic in operation. A permanent piece of equipment. Employs no tubes. Requires no replacements. Serves any set now using either 4 or 6-volt "A" batteries and requiring not more than 30 milliamperes at 135 volts of "B" current—practically all sets of up to 8 tubes. Price $59.50.

All Balkite Radio Power Units operate from 110-120 volt AC current with models for both 60 and 50 cycles. The new Balkite Charger is also available in a special model for 25-40 cycles.

Over 650,000 radio receivers are today equipped with Balkite light socket Radio Power Units. In the ease of operation which it brings, Balkite, providing radio power to either or both circuits at the turn of a switch, has been one of the greatest contributors to the advance of the radio art.

Originally purchased because of their convenience, Balkite Radio Power Units have become really popular because of performance in the hands of their owners.

Balkite Radio Power Units are noiseless. They have no hum. They convert the alternating current of your lighting circuit into the silent direct current essential for radio reception.

Balkite Radio Power Units are unvarying in output. Once installed, they deliver exactly the current required by your set. They have nothing to adjust or fluctuate, and no dials to complicate tuning.

Again, Balkite Radio Power Units are permanent pieces of equipment. They have nothing to wear out, replace, recharge or renew. They employ no tubes. They require no other attention than the infrequent addition of water. They are built to conform to the Underwriters' requirements. Many of the first Balkite Chargers, purchased over 4 years ago, are still in use.

NEW YORK SYMPHONY
in your own home over any one of 13 stations

Every other Saturday night a symphony concert. On alternate Saturdays one of Mr. Damrosch's popular piano recitals on the great Wagner Music Dramas. Over stations: WEAF, WEEI, WGR, WFI, WCAE, WSAI, WTAM, WWJ, WGN, WCCO, KSD, WDAF, WOC. Balkite Hour, 9 p. m., Eastern (8 p. m., Central) Standard Time.

Likewise, the first Balkite "B," purchased over 3 years ago, is still rendering satisfactory service and will do so for years. To our knowledge not one of 75,000 Balkite "B"s has ever worn out. It is during the third and fourth year that the long-run economy of Balkite becomes evident.

Finally, Balkite Radio Power Units are unfailing in operation. The Balkite principle of Electrolytic Rectification is one of the most important developments in the entire power field. In radio it has led to the development of the first charger that could be used during reception, trickle charging, the first popular ligh. socket "B," and now the new Balkite Combination. In other industries it is used wherever power must be infallible—in the signal systems of railroads, lighting systems of hospitals, emergency power systems of all kinds. The Balkite equipment here selected to protect the public is the same used to provide power to your radio set.

Add one of the Balkite chargers and Balkite "B" to your set now. Or add the new Balkite Combination. Either way will give you the last word in radio convenience and economy and full, silent, unfailing power from the light socket. Ask your dealer. Fansteel Products Co., Inc., North Chicago, Ill.

NEW KOLSTER RECEIVING SET HAS THREE-SPEED GEAR

An innovation in radio to appeal to everyone who drives a car is the three-speed idea introduced by Kolster radio this year. For ordinary use the set has a station selector marked in meters, but for the expert radio driver who wants to make the most out of distant stations, there is a three-speed gear.

First speed on a car is powerful, second is a mixture of power and speed and third is mostly speed. Kolster has taken over this idea and the three speeds are numbered on a knob at the left side of the panel. First speed gives you maximum selectivity with normal sensitivity. Second speed is intermediate between selectivity and sensitivity. Third speed reaches out with the set's greatest sensitivity and normal selectivity. The volume control is the accelerator.

The radio audience of the United States totals 20,000,000, and the number of receivers in use is estimated at 5,000,000.

CHANGE IN EUROPEAN WAVE LENGTHS COMING THIS MONTH

A complete change of European wave lengths will take place around the last of November, according to information received by the Department of Commerce. In the future most European stations will operate between 200 and 600 meters, while in the past no station previously used a wave length of less than 600 meters.

The changes were brought about at a series of international conferences which were held as the result of interference and confusion. Certain bands were assigned to each country and a sufficient separation between stations provided.

VIOLINIST TO PLAY WITH PIANIST ON KSD

Lea Luboschutz and Maurice Dumesnil in Tonight's Atwater Kent Hour.

Tonight's Atwater Kent Hour concert from KSD will be given by Lea Luboshutz, violinist, and Maurice Dumesnil, pianist. The concert will be broadcast at 8:15 o'clock direct from WEAF, New York. The soloists will be assisted, as usual, by the Atwater Kent Orchestra, Louis Edlin conductor.

Dumesnil graduated with highest honors at the Paris National Conservatory of Music. He made his debut in Paris in 1909 and has appeared with nearly all of the leading European orchestras.

Lea Luboshutz, Russian violinist, opens her second tour of the United States with the recital this evening. She is a native of Odessa, where at the age of nine she began to give public recitals. When 13 she was heard by the great Russian conductor, Wassily Safonoff, who immediately took her to the Moscow Conservatory of Music, where she won a gold medal and was honored with a gift of a beautiful Amati violin. Following this her real career began when she toured

ENACTMENT OF RADIO MEASURE DOUBTED

Supporters of Bill Say Chances for Legislation Next Session Are Slight.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The prospects of passage of radio legislation at the coming session of Congress—prospects that appeared bright enough through the summer have dwindled rapidly with the approach of winter and the changes that the last three months have brought in the entire radio situation.

Leaders of the drive to enact a radio bill, including Representative Wallace White, author of the measure that is before the joint Senate and House Conference Committee, say the chances for early legislation are slim. Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who after two years of waiting for a show of permanence in the radio world, finally asked Congress last winter to give the Government a radio control bill, although maintaining a discreet silence regarding the present situation, is known to be fearful that his request will not be granted speedily before another year has passed.

The principal developments that have changed the outlook are as follows:

1. A growing determination on the part of Senate and House members to stick by their guns in naming the type of Federal radio commission that is to be authorized in the bill. The House with the approval of President Coolidge and Secretary Hoover has voted for a commission that would work under the Department of Commerce. The Senate ignoring the President's recommendation, has voted for the establishment of a new and independent Government agency to control radio.

2. The defiance with which more than 100 broadcasting stations have ignored governmental pleas for co-operation until legislation could be passed and control authorized and the resulting other suggestion that has followed their action in jumping wave lengths.

3. A pronounced desire on the part of pioneer stations for some recognitions of their priority on the air. Such provisions have been included in the White bill.

Announcement by minority members in both House and Senate that an investigation will be demanded of the activities of the National Broadcasting Co., and of the relations existing between the Radio Corporation of America, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and the General Electric Co., the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., and the Western Electric Co.

ORGAN DUET ON WTAM

A broadcasting feat which it is believed has never before been attempted, a pipe organ duet, is scheduled from WTAM, Cleveland, for Thursday evening, Nov. 18. Two of the largest pipe organs in Cleveland will be put on the air simultaneously through the station calling the utmost accuracy and great painstaking co-ordination by the two organists and the engineers of WTAM.

A new remote control panel makes it possible to run the music of both organs through a "mixer panel," blending them and putting them into the air as a single instrument, but with all the body and volume of the two.

FALSE HOPE THAT DAWES CAN END AIR UNCERTAINTY

Joint Resolution of Congress, Even if Signed By Him, Would Have Little Effect On Broadcasting Situation.

An optimistic report concerning the broadcasting problems that have arisen since the courts found the Secretary of Commerce without legal power over radio stations has it that when Congress reconvenes in December, Vice President Dawes will sign a joint resolution that will restore to Secretary Hoover all his former powers until Congress can enact the necessary laws governing radio. However, whether Dawes signs or does not sign that resolution, the situation is not likely to be affected.

Joint resolutions expire only with a Congress, not with a session, and Dawes undoubtedly will sign this one. But the joint resolution merely gives Hoover the right to issue 90-day broadcasting licenses and says nothing about wave lengths, time, size of stations or other important matters.

The Commerce Department realizes that the resolution, even after signing by Dawes, will be inadequate. So little is expected from it.

The big point is that Hoover never did have any legal power over broadcasting, so a return to that condition would not mean anything or settle anything. The Chicago court decision, and the ruling of the Attorney-General virtually made Hoover out a usurper, though the larger stations generally have agreed to abide by his rulings.

When the resolution is put into effect, the broadcasting situation will continue without material change because, unless Congress delays enacting radio legislation and all licenses are cancelled after 90 days or whenever they expire, a whole new series of wave lengths would have to be assigned. The new comers, of whom there are around 50, might be crowded out temporarily through priority preferences in favor of the older stations. But it may be assumed as a matter of course that in such cases the aggrieved stations would go to court and seek by injunctions to thwart the licensing officials. Also Department of Commerce officials are not ready to attempt such a plea.

If the late comers are allowed to stay on the air, there will be interference. If new wave lengths are assigned and all stations now licensed are given wave lengths there will be overcrowding, simply because there are too many stations.

The Commerce Department does not know what it will do because, since the Attorney-General's ruling, it does not know what it can do. The department, of course, insists that permanent legislation should be enacted that will give someone definite authority over the air. At present no one has it.

Here is the text of the joint resolution: "That until otherwise provided by law, no original license for the operation of any radio broadcasting station and no renewal of a license of an existing broadcasting station shall be granted for longer periods than 90 days, and no original license for the operation of any other class of radio station and no renewal of the license for an existing station of any other class than a broadcasting station, shall be granted for longer periods than two years, and that no original radio license or the renewal of an existing license shall be granted after the date of the passage of this resolution unless the applicant therefor shall execute in writing a waiver of any right or of any claim to any right, as against the United States, to any wave length or to the use of the ether in radio transmission because of previous license to use the same or because of the use thereof."

Location of Aerials.

Nearby aerials, buildings, trees, metal roofs, rain spouts, etc., are among the objects which absorb energy from a receiving set. Aerials that are too close absorb energy from each other, and sometimes affect the tuning of the sets. The aerial should be kept at least 15 feet away from these obstructions and the wire or wires should be well insulated.

WEAKER BATTERY IN SERIES CAN'T PULL DOWN NEW ONE

Many radio editors and technicians have propounded the theory that the addition of a new battery wired in series with an older or weaker battery will bring the new battery down to the voltage level of the weaker one.

Applying this to a specific case in connection with radio, when two batteries—for example, two 45 volt units as used in the tube plate circuit—have dropped to 40 volts each, the addition of one new 45 volt unit, in place of one of the 40 volt batteries, it is contended, will result in bringing the new battery down to the level of the weaker one shortly after being connected into the circuit.

In parallel connection, this theory holds true, for the weaker battery will certainly pull down the new battery, but with series connection this cannot occur, says the Fada-Sale Magazine.

The only reason, in radio, for discarding a weak battery in the "B" or "C" battery circuit, is that when such a battery drops to a certain point, deterioration takes place and produces noise in the radio receiver, the magazine concludes.

Germany Linked With Brazil.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The most recent transoceanic wireless service to be offered to the world is that arranged between Germany and Brazil, according to consular advices to the Department of Commerce. The German sending station is located at Nauen and the Brazilian receiver has been built at Rio de Janeiro. Communications are received for transmission to any part of South America. The new service is expected to aid materially in building up German markets in the South American republics.

CROSLEY RADIO

Over big! Such a success! A knockout! Enthusiastic owners report amazing performance—a drum dial delivering stations loud, clear, sharp; almost an imperceptible turn of the drum apart.
Write the names of the stations on the drum; return to them night after night.
Many advanced ideas in radio, including metal shielding and power tube adaptability indicate Powel Crosley, Jr.'s genius in lowering prices by mass production methods.
Other Crosley Radios $9.75 to $90.00
Genuine Musicone, as pictured above, $14.75. Avoid imitations.

With a Radiodyne you select the station you wish and then bring it in easily with these 2 Dial Control Sets.

WC-19G—$125
6 Tube—2 Dial—Walnut Cabinet

6 Tube Sets
The WC-19 employs 3 stages of radio frequency, a detector and two stages of audio. Tremendous volume without distortion results. Two vernier dials and a non-critical circuit enables any one to tune near and distant stations even on crowded wave bands quickly and easily. As for Tone, you must hear it yourself. Six models priced $110 to $485.

WC-15 Jr.—5 Tubes—2 Dials—$48.50

5 Tube Sets
The WC-15 Jr. tunes easily with its 2 dial control and non-critical circuit. It is completely shielded. Compare it with and set costing $75 for Volume, Tone, Ease of Tuning

9 Tube Super Radiodyne
This is the ultimate of radio. Operates on any type of antenna or loop — two-dial control: — tremendous volume; selective enough for Chicago with its dozens of stations; 9-3 volt tubes, yet uses only 19 to 21 milliamperes "B" battery current, and less "A" current than 3 large tubes; stepless volume control. Shielded coils, cushioned sockets. Priced $225 to $595, depending upon cabinet.

Before you buy a Set at any price, see the Radiodyne Line. There is one for every requirement at a Price you want to Pay. Sold only by reliable, authorized dealers.

SIGNALS TO SHIPS AFFECTED

The Navy broadcasting station at Arlington, which daily sends out weather reports, time signals and other Government matter, has not escaped from the jumping of wave lengths by stations. In two cases, jumping of wave lengths resulted in interference with reception of weather reports by coastwise vessels, such as tugs, towing barges which do not carry licensed operators and rely on the conventional broadcasting receiver and loud speaker for this vital weather information. Steps have been taken by the Navy to have broadcasters to arrange their programs as not to interfere.

40 RADIO STATIONS BEING BUILT, 82 CONTEMPLATED

Survey Taken for Congress Members Eager to Learn Extent of Damage Caused by Breakdown in Regulation.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—A check just completed by the Department of Commerce reveals that 40 new stations are under construction and that 82 others are contemplated, construction of which may begin immediately.

The survey was taken for the information of the Department of Commerce and for members of Congress who are eager to learn the extent of the damage caused by the breakdown in radio regulation. Radio inspectors throughout the country were requested to check up in their district and report the number of new stations since regulation failed, the number that have changed location, power, wave length, stations under construction and those contemplated.

It is the plan of the department to prepare such a summary twice each month so that Congress may be fully informed of developments.

25 Change Locations.

The survey shows that up to Oct. 15 there was a total of 63 new stations; 25 stations changed their location; 63 stations increased their power; 62 stations changed their wave length, in the majority of cases from the old class A to the class B band between 280 and 550 meters; 40 stations are under construction, and 82 new stations are contemplated.

Greatest activity is shown to be in the ninth district with headquarters at Chicago. In the Chicago district 22 new stations have been licensed, four have changed location, 24 have increased their power, 18 have changed wave lengths, 20 new stations are under construction, 13 stations are preparing to increase their power and 21 new stations are contemplated.

The second district with headquarters at New York is second with 11 new stations, 12 contemplated new stations, six stations with increased power, eight stations with changed wave lengths, 3 stations under construction and 10 stations preparing to increase their power.

The fifth district with headquarters at New Orleans is next with 10 new stations, five stations under construction, nine stations planned, 11 stations preparing to increase their power, three stations having changed location and four changed wave lengths.

In the eighth district with headquarters at Detroit, there are six new stations, 10 with increased power, there with changed wave lengths, one under construction, one preparing to increase its power, and 27 new stations planned.

More Stations on West Coast.

The seventh district with headquarters at Seattle has seven new stations, nine with increased power, seven with changed wave lengths, two under construction, six planned and three preparing to increase power.

The sixth district with headquarters at San Francisco has two new stations, four with increased power, 12 changed wave lengths, four stations under construction and four planned.

The first district with headquarters at Boston has five new stations, three with increased power, nine changed wave lengths, five under construction and three planned.

The third and fourth districts, with headquarters at Baltimore and Atlanta respectively show the least activity. In the Atlanta district three stations have increased their power, one new station is under construction and three are preparing to increase their power. In the Baltimore district one station has increased its power, one changed its wave length and five are preparing to increase their power.

Connections for Tubes.

While the delector tube may be connected either to the positive or the negative side of the line, the grid return of the audio-frequency tubes must always be connected to the negative side of the line. If this is not done, distortion will result.

SAYS NEW STATIONS SHOULD BE PUT ON LOW WAVELENGTHS

Crosley Suggests Leaving the Ones to Pioneers Who Developed the Art.

Newcomers in broadcasting should be assigned the lower end of wavelengths, leaving the higher ones for owners of stations which have pioneered and developed the new art, Powell Crosley Jr., owner of super-power station WLW, Cincinnati, told members of the Indianapolis radio industry at their first annual meeting.

"Today," Crosley explained, "we are confronted with a situation in which we have nearly 600 broadcasting stations crowded into 88 channels in the radio broadcasting range, separated by 10 kilocycles. This overcrowding could be overcome through the creation of other wave bands in the broadcasting range. This lower wave length should be made available for use immediately.

"Development of broadcasting in the lower wavelengths already done by the newer stations whose owners had no part in the experimental stages of the new art. The older and pioneer broadcasting stations should not be asked to abandon or take the development of this new and low wave band.

"Short waves, due to their particular properties, travel much greater distances than do the long waves with a given power input. American amateurs have been able to establish and maintain consistent communication with such distant points as Europe and Australia actually using less power than is consumed by the ordinary domestic 60-watt lamp. This phenomenon is particularly true in the case of transmission taking place during broad daylight."

Radiograms.

Farmers in Pennsylvania own 432 receiving sets.

A radio announcer gets between $2000 and $2500 a year.

A check for $1000 was recently sent by radio from London to New York.

Adam Franconi, Who Presides Over Eiffel Tower Station, Explains Her Duties.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—They call her the Lady who lives in the Eiffel Tower. Like most pleasing nicknames this is slightly a misnomer, but it comes near enough to the facts at that. Mme. Gabriel Trisconi Franconi does indeed spend most of her time at La Tour Eiffel and it would be a much more silent and less interesting world if she didn't.

For Mme. Franconi, rosy cheeked, sparkling eyes and possessed of that charm with which French women seem to be born, is none other than the person who arranges those programs which sizzle through the air daily from the great wireless station on the tower. She is hourly in touch with more of the world than most people manage to reach during a whole lifetime. In fact, she is in touch with all of the world which has a wireless and a listening on New York or Australia is merely routine stuff in the case of her hours.

Naturally it is expected when you go to see Mme. Franconi that you will have to make the ascent of the tower. The thought appals you. You change elevators half a dozen times, you are drawn upward on a bias which makes for seasickness and it takes anywhere from two to three hours to get up

SAYS NEW STATIONS SHOULD BE PUT ON LOW WAVELENGTH

Crosley Suggests Leaving High Ones to Pioneers Who Developed the Art.

This overcrowding can be overcome through the creation of other wave bands in the lower range. This lower wave band should be made available for use immediately.

"Development of broadcasting on the lower wavelengths should be done by the newer stations whose owners had no part in the formative stages of the new art. The older and pioneer broadcasting stations should not be asked to undertake the development of this new low wave band.

"Short waves, due to their peculiar properties, travel much greater distances than do the long waves with a given power input. RADIO FANS IN FRANCE LIKE JAZZ MUSIC BEST

Madam Franconi, Who Presides Over Eiffel Tower Station, Explains Her Duties.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—They call her the Lady who lives in the Eiffel Tower. Like most pleasing nicknames this is slightly a misnomer, but it comes near enough to the facts at that. Mme. Gabriel Trisconi Franconi does indeed spend most of her time at La Tour Eiffel and it would be a much more silent and less interesting world if she didn't.

For Mme. Franconi, rosy cheeked, sparkling eyes and possessed of that charm with which French women seem to be born, is some other than the person who arranges those programs which dazzle through the air daily from the great wireless station on the tower. She is hourly in touch with more of the world than most people manage to reach during a whole lifetime. In fact, she is in touch with all of the world which has a wireless, and a listening on New York or Australia is merely routine stuff in the case of her hours.

Naturally it is expected when you go to see Mme. Franconi that you will have to make the ascent of the tower. The thought appals you. You change elevators half a dozen times, you are drawn upward on a bias which makes for seasickness and it takes anywhere from two to three hours to get up and down again. If you stop off at the restaurant it may take all day. The view, of course, is remarkable. It is such that by the time you reach the top you are too weary to look at it.

French Fans Like Jazz.

"We have found," Madame Franconi was saying, dividing her attention between a statesman with a formidable manuscript and a young woman intent on something to benefit the agriculturists, that French people do not like too much music in a radio program. A solo, perhaps; now and then a selection by an orchestra—but not too much music of any kind. For their music, I think the French prefer to go to some theater where an American jazz band is playing. We are very fond of"—seh called it as per Francais—"Le Jhazz."

Evidently the French are fond, however, of hearing their plays by radio. Selections from French drama, from the good old assembled classic writers form a popular part of nearly every radio program.

This marks a big difference between French and American radio fans, they are so since the French hearing of Rain by wireless, and will flock just as early eagerly to see "Rain" performed on the stage. They do not forget their old ideals the instant a new one appears. There's probably a profound moral here somewhere, if one had time to dig it out.

Interviews by Radio.

Fortunately, one hadn't for the statesman with the formidable manuscript is smilingly putting his paper away in the depths of a long tailed coat. He is valiantly stepping up to the other side of the microphone, and he launches a question at the statesmen.

"This is a new idea of the Program Committee," Madame Franconi explains. "We issue, by wireless, a sort of daily newspaper. But we have not only the news of the world. Also we have interviews.

"A good idea, not?" she inquires. "The journalists ask questions of the politicians or the otherwise famous one, and sees how he replies right on the spot. It is more human, more near, than if the famous one read a manuscript. And even if he hesitates over a reply—or particularly if he hesitates—it is more amusing."

Dispatch Theft Alleged.

The Chinese military wireless station, it is alleged, is stealing wireless dispatches at Nauen, Germany, and retailing them to newspapers. The Japanese authorities have lodged a protest against this new sort of thievery.

VESTA X-201-A TUBE $2.00

VESTA X-199 TUBE $2.25

No matter how fine a radio receiving set you may have you are getting noises out of it that are not a part of the broadcast program.
Many of these noises originate right in your tubes—microphonic noises—caused by the plate grid filament being out of alignment.
The New Vesta Tubes are so constructed that the entire element unit is held in alignment.
You will marvel at the great improvement in reception—the pure clear tones—and the long life of these non-microphonic tubes.
Ask your dealer for Vesta Tubes or communicate with the Vesta distributor for name of Vesta dealer near you.

TELEGRAPH OPERATED BY AURORA BOREALIS

Supports Current for More Than Hour at WBZ and WBZA in Massachusetts.

A recent mystery at Stations WBZ at Springfield, Mass., and WBZA at Boston has been solved.

The two stations operated in synchronism, maintain a direct line connection. This line carries three different circuits: one for broadcasting, a second for controlling the stations' assigned frequency, and the third for telegraph intercommunication.

The telegraph system is operated by simplexing the line, and to use the telegraph, battery current must be put on the line at either or both stations. In the course of an evening's broadcast the stations are constantly in communication with each other.

Recently during an eevning's broadcast the telegraph instruments started producing signals which the operators could not read. In order to trace the cause of the strange signals, Engineer Wolfe took the Springfield battery off the line. The meters showed, however, that the line was still receiving current, and he signaled Engineer Robinson at Boston and asked if Boston was supplying current. Engineer Robinson replied in the negative.

At that time, about 9 p. m., the northern lights were at their greatest intensity. For more than an hour and a half the Aurora Borealis supplied sufficient current to operate the WBZ telegraph system. With its disappearance about 10:30 p. m., the operators were forced to use the batteries again.

The direction of the current changed every few minutes. With each change the keys clicked and the operators were able to note the direction of the flow by reading the meters.

OPERATION OF VACUUM TUBE

The amount of light a vacuum tube gives off is no indication of its sensitiveness or general condition. The fact that a tube does emit light is entirely an incidental feature of its operation. What is desired in a tube is a flow of little particles of electricity called "electrons," and the easiest way to obtain it is to bury certain kinds of wires in glass bulbs from which the air has been exhausted. The temperature must be quite high in order to make the flow copious, and most wires must be heated white hot by the current from the "A" battery for proper operation.

While the incandescent wire, or "filament," as it is correctly called, emits considerable light, this phenomenon has absolutely no connection with the functioning of the tube from the radio standpoint. In many of the modern tubes, of both the coated and uncoated variety, little or no light is visible through the glass because of the inner coating of mercury which lines the bulbs. The heaviness of this coating varies considerably, and therefore, the amount of light penetrates through it, so its significance at all can be attributed to the brilliance of the illumi-

RCA Loudspeaker 104, complete

Operates on 60 cycle, 110 volt circuit.

Radiola 28—with RCA Loudspeaker 104: for realism in radio—with power reception from your lighting socket.

A year ago it was a pioneer. Today it is a proved success—tried, tested and perfected through a year's use.

All the intricate precision of an eight tube super-heterodyne is permanently sealed away—protected. And tuned with a single control! Nothing could be simpler or more exact in performance.

With the famous power Loudspeaker 104 you can turn up the volume as you please . . . to the full force of an orchestra when you want it. And it is always clear—real! Yet it takes no more care than an electric lamp—just plugged in on the house current without batteries.

It is modern radio, thoroughly proved in use, in thousands of homes.

HORSE SHOW WILL OPEN AT COLISEUM TOMORROW NIGHT

Attendance of Queen Marie Friday Night Features This Year's Exhibitions—Diversified Program.

With a diversified program that includes exhibition of more than 300 horses and numerous special entertainment features, the St. Louis Horse Show will open at the New Coliseum tomorrow night and will continue through the week with performances nightly and a matinee on Thursday. Entries have been received from 75 of the leading horse show exhibitors of America, and include some of the finest animals in the country. Prizes and trophies totaling $20,000 in value will be awarded in the 90 classes scheduled.

A series of special nights with unusual entertainment programs, one of which will be in honor of Queen Marie of Rumania, will be among the features of this year's show.

Friday night has been dedicated as "Queen Marie Night" and the royal visitor to St. Louis will be present with her party in a box elaborately decorated for the occasion. This will be her fourth public appearance of the day in St. Louis.

Her other appearances will be in a parade from Union and Lindell boulevards to the downtown district after her arrival at 10 a. m., at a reception for Rumanian students at Washington University in the afternoon and at a dinner at Hotel Chase at 7 p. m. She will arrive at the Coliseum about 10 p. m.

Three Championship Events.

Three championship events—the Cadillac Roadster Championship for $1000, the Harness Pony Championship for $1500, and the Fairmount Jockey Club's $2500 Championship for five-gaited saddle horses are scheduled for Friday night, in addition to 14 other classes and the usual spectacular features which include a potato race and a horsemanship performance by Troop C of the Fourteenth United States Cavalry.

The cavalrymen, said to be the best organized horsemen in America, will be seen nightly in their series of dare devil feats. The famous "educated" mare, Belle Beach, ridden by the veteran saddle horse exhibitor, Tom Bass, will appear at each performance, and an innovation in horse show entertainment will be supplied by the Robertis Animal Act. Nightly qualifying rounds of the Horseshoe Pitchers' Tournament, in which 40 experts are entered, also is expected to be an attraction of interest. The finals for the trophy and cash prizes will be held Saturday afternoon, concluding at 8 o'clock.

The opening program will be known as "St. Louis Night." At this performance Mayor Miller and all the living former Mayors of St. Louis will be honor guests of the management. On Tuesday night Senator-elect Harry B. Hawes will be the guest of honor, with the Holekamp Lumber Co.'s $500 junior championship for saddle horses as the feature event.

Ambassador Matsurdaira of Japan, Mr. Tamura, Japanese Consul at Chicago, and Secretary of War Davis, will be honor guests Wednesday night and will witness as the feature events the $2000 heavy harness horse championship and the $2000 hunter championship. At the Thursday matinee, the Buster Brown shetland pony championship contest will be held.

Thursday night's chief event is the $1500 three-gaited saddle horse championship and Saturday's leading event will be the riding of their five-gaited saddle horses by amateur owners.

Arrangements for Marie.

Unusual interest is attached to the visit of Queen Marie and her party. They will leave the Hotel Chase about 9:45 p. m. and will be escorted to the Coliseum by Carl F. G. Meyer, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and F. W. A. Vesper, former president of that organization. They will be met at the Coliseum entrance by ten directors of the Horse Show, headed by W. Frank Carter, president. Entrance will be under a canopy and over a roped carpeted aisle leading to Box No. 60, which has been reserved for the Queen, Miss Martha K. Love, reigning Veiled Prophet Queen, Mayor Miller and Carter.

The box at the right of the Queen will be occupied by Princess Ileana, one of the Veiled Prophet Queen's maids, Vesper and Meyer. The second box to the right of the Queen will be occupied by Prince Nicholas, another Veiled Prophet maid and Boyle Rodes. Seven other boxes will be taken by members of the Queen's party.

The complete program for tomorrow night's opening performance follows:

7:20 p. m.—Qualifying round, 40th State Horseshoe Pitchers' championship tournament.

8:00 p. m.—Hunters, middle weight.

8:15 p. m.—Delivery outfits, pairs.

8:30 p. m.—Shetland ponies in harness.

8:50 p. m.—Harness horses, open.

9:00 p. m.—Roadster class.

9:15 p. m.—Saddle horses (three-gaited) novince.

9:30 p. m.—Shetland saddle ponies.

9:45 p. m.—Ladies' harness horses, pairs, with appointments.

9:55 p. m.—Harness ponies, single (12-2 and not exceeding 13-2 hands.)

10:05 p. m.—Saddle horses (five-gaited.)

10:30 p. m.—Potato race.

10:45 p. m.—Troop "C," 14th Cavalry, U. S. A.

10:55 p. m.—Exhibition Belle Beach and Tom Bass.

11:00 p. m.—Jumpers, triple bar.

Visit College Towns of Middle West, Carry Passengers to Clouds for Fee.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 6.—"A round trip to Heaven for $1.50," cried a 22-year-old student from the University of Texas on the streets of Columbia. The young man is Ike Sewell, former all-Southern guard on the University of Texas football field and manager of a flying circus, made up entirely of Texas students, that arrived here from Champaign, Ill. They will remain as long as the weather permits, taking students and townspeople for rides and doing exhibition flying.

At the University of Texas several years ago a School of Aeronautics was started, and two students, Sewell and Jerry Marshall, took the course. They soon became expert pilots and, lacking funds to continue their education, they started on a barnstorming tour of the Middle West, giving exhibitions in flying and carrying passengers, the money from all this to be used in putting them back in school.

University towns are about the only ones that the Texas students visit, explaining that they like to be around the different college towns and that because they are from colleges, business is usually better there. The boys own five planes now but have only two with them here. They are "Miss Virginia" and "Miss Waco," named after the sweethearts of Marshall and Sewell, who own the planes.

The student flyers came to Columbia from the University of Illinois, where they carried 1400 Illinois students for rides in three weeks. The students have set a remarkable record in having carried over 30,000 persons in their planes without a single mishap. The ages of those carried range from two months to 90 years. All-America football stars, chorus girls, moving picture celebrities and State officials are among those that have autographed their names in their "Memory Book."

"We were at the University of Illinois when the moon was bright," Sewell said here, "and there we carried as many as 100 couples for rides each evening."

The students will visit the University of Kansas and the University of Oklahoma before returning to their homes in Dallas, Tex. They plan to re-enter the University of Texas at the second semester.

Billie Warren, a 16-year-old San Antonio high school student, is with them in the capacity of a stunt flyer.

GERMANS EXPECT AMERICANS TO BUY EX-KAISER'S CASTLES

Few Continentals Have Wealth Enough to Invest in Expensive Structures.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—Americans have a chance to buy up from 10 to 12 former Hohenzollern castles in Prussia. As a consequence of the financial indemnification of, and property settlement agreement with the former Kaiser and his family, the Prussian State finds itself in legal possession of 36 castles and palaces and eight hunting lodges.

Officials admit that in a sense they took a number of white elephants off the ex-Kaiser's hands. To avoid the expense of maintenance some of the palaces will be sold by the State. Few persons in Germany or Europe have the means to buy the elaborate residences, and it would cause no surprise if many of them eventually were sold to Americans. Among those on the market is Castle Bellevue in Berlin. It is valued at $11,000,000. There is no thought of selling historical treasures like Sans Souci in Potsdam and the old palace in Berlin, which, like most others, will be maintained as public museums.

"BRIGAND" BELTS ON RIVIERA

New Broad Girdles Made of Pigskin Are Popular With Women.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—"Brigands" belts for feminine wear are the latest craze along the Riviera. The mode was launched by a young girl appearing on the golf links wearing a huge leather belt that suggested the Mexican bandit of romance. The girdles are now quite common.

Made of brown pigskin, the original belt seen here was quite 5 inches wide and fastened with a plain steel buckle on the right side. Trimmed with green stitching to match the wearer's simple sports suit, some persons liked it as smart looking. Some of the new wide belts are made of suede or doeskin. A white doeskin belt about six inches wide worn with a red afternoon frick at the Casino seemed an attractive combination to observers. Even with evening dresses Brigands' belts are becoming the rage, although for evening wear they are made of brocade or some other sumptuous material.

K. of C. Council to Celebrate.

Marquette Council, Knights of Columbus, will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary with a banquet and dance at Hotel Jefferson this evening. Speakers will include the Rev. W. L. Shea, first chaplain and charter member of the council; Henry W. Kiel, Branch Rickey, James Gould, Charles Barrett and the Rev. J. P. Spencer. Marquette is the second oldest council in Missouri, having been organized Nov. 3, 1901.

PROMISES QUICK ACTION ON ALIEN PROPERTY

Longworth Says House Will Pass Restoration Measure Soon After Session Meets.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 6.—Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the national House of Representatives, said yesterday that the Republicans will have a solid working majority of at least 20 in the next House, and that it means his re-election as Speaker.

Questioned by a representative of the Associated Press, Mr. Longworth said:

"The Republican party will have a solid working, efficient majority of at least 20 in the next House of Representatives. That means my re-election as Speaker.

"It also means the re-election of John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, as majority leader and the continuance of the chairmen of all important committees. In other words, it means the House as it stands today will be practically continued without change."

Longworth said his statement is founded on such reports of the election as he has received and which are not likely to be changed materially by the official count.

When asked as to matters of importance likely to be taken up at the beginning of the next session of the present Congress, Longworth said:

"The first thing we intend to do is to pass a bill settling up the entire question of alien property, restoring all property taken from Germany or German citizens during the war, and paying all the American claims against Germany allowed by the mixed claims commission.

"The Ways and Means Committee will meet about Nov. 16, and will have the alien property bill ready for presentation to the House as soon as we meet. We expect to pass that bill before Christmas.

"The Appropriations Committee will also meet about Nov. 15 and will have ready for presentation immediately when the House goes into session two or three of the big appropriation bills. That will be the work of Congress before the holidays."

Referring to the election, Speaker Longworth said:

"The chief significance of this whole thing lies in the fact that the only purely national issue was whether the next House should be Democratic or Republican, and the Republican party on that issue won the approval of the American people. In the case of the Senate and Governors of the various states, there were a number of local issues which determined the results."

ST. LOUIS U. HOMECOMING CELEBRATION STARTS TODAY

First Official Event of Program Will Be Memorial Service Thursday.

St. Louis University is celebrating homecoming week, starting today. Various fraternities and organizations on the campus are giving luncheons and dances the early part of the week, but the first official school activity will be Thursday morning, when memorial services will be held in St. Francis Xavier's Church.

The freshman football game will be played Thursday afternoon; Friday night students will rally and parade, led by the uniformed varsity band, and Saturday the St. Louis University Billikens will play Loyola University of Chicago at Sportsman's Park. Saturday night the student governing body will give a dance at Hotel Statler.

URGES 10-STORY LIMIT ON BUILDINGS IN CITIES

Henry H. Curran, Exponent of Plan, Will Speak in St. Louis Tuesday.

A proposal that cities limit buildings to a height of 10 stories, to assure light and air and prevent congestion, will be made by Henry H. Curran, candidate for mayor of New York in 1921, and more recently Commissioner of Immigration at Ellis Island, at the convention of the National Municipal League at Hotel Statler, Tuesday.

He is one of several experts who will discuss civic problems, some of them of particular interest to St. Louisans. The public is invited to the sessions. Mrs. Marion C. Blossom is chairman of the St. Louis committee in charge of arrangements.

SHAW REDUCES HIS PUBLICITY

Has Name Placed in Smaller Letters at Theater Showing His Play.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—George Bernard Shaw's name, which glared in letters two feet high in front of one of London's largest music halls showing one of his plays, has been reduced in size at the author's request. The letters now are smaller than those of the stars actually appearing there.

The play is "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet." It is being acted by Sir John and Lady Martin Harvey and a company of 30. For years the Lord Chamberlain banned this story of a horse thief on the ground that it was blasphemous. However, after braving the derision of cultured playgoers, he relented. Shaw suggested that his name had been displayed so prominently that his friends might get the impression that he himself was appearing at the music hall, when, as a matter of fact he was not able to find time to catch up with his writings.

28,484 AUTO DRIVERS ARRESTED IN LAST YEAR

27 Per Cent of All Arrests Due to Traffic Violations — Department Is Enlarged.

INCREASE IN LIQUOR LAW INFRACTIONS

6723 Held Under State Law and 1584 Charged With Breaking Federal Enforcement Act.

Police arrested 28,484 automobile drivers in the year ending last March 31, or an average of 78 a day. Arrests for violation of traffic laws were 27 per cent of all arrests during the year. Of the violators, 892 were women.

Infractions included careless driving, speeding, failure to burn lights or failure to properly shield headlights, no licenses and general violations of traffic laws, such as improper parking.

The number of traffic arrests exceeded the number of 1925 when 24,045 were arrested on similar charges. The figures are included in the annual report of the Board of Police Commissioners.

The traffic squad of the department has become its busiest wing. It now has reached 152 men. In addition, there are 85 "silent policemen"—automatic traffic signals—scattered about the city.

Arrests for violations of the liquor laws greatly increased during the year. The police divide violations into two classes—those against the Volstead act and those against the State laws. The total arrests in the two classes during 1926 were 8307, compared with 3849 for 1925. By far the larger number of charges was brought under the State law—6723, leaving 1584 under the national act. The arrests for intoxication increased from 4977 to 6779.

The number of arrests for robbery, 12,778, slightly fewer than in the previous year, does not mean that there were that number of robberies during the year. In fact, the figure is no criterion of the number of robberies, for the arrests include all held "suspected of robbery," and sometimes the police gather in as many as 50 suspects after a large robbery without ultimately fixing the crime upon any of them.

The figure for "craps, dice and cards" is always a large one and is more closely indicative of actual violation of the laws against gambling, though convictions may be few. The total in 1926 was 10,073, compared with 9376 in 1925.

HANNIBAL PUBLISHER AGAIN HEADS MISSOURI A. P. EDITORS

Members Hear From Superintendent Cutter of Plans for Improved State Service.

J. B. Jeffries, publisher of the Hannibal Courier-Post, was re-elected president of the Missouri Associated Press Editorial Association at the annual meeting here yesterday. W. C. Van Cleve, publisher of the Moberly Monitor-Index, was re-elected member of the Central Division Advisory Board, and Kenneth Clark, St. Louis, correspondent of the Associated Press, was renamed secretary.

Supt. Edgar T. Cutter of Chicago told the members of plans for improving the Missouri service of the Associated Press.

Joseph Pulitzer, editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, tendered a luncheon to the members at Hotel Jefferson.

WILL SPEAK ON ORIENT

Dr. Boyd-Carpenter Will Contrast Morals of East and West.

Dr. William Boyd-Carpenter, son of the late Lord Bishop of Ripon, former professor at Kyoto University, Japan, and an authority on the Orient, will speak before the Ethical Society at Sheldon Memorial, 3648 Washington boulevard, at 11 o'clock this morning, on "The Concept of Morals as a Life Standard in the East and in the West."

The meeting will be open to the public. Dr. Boyd-Carpenter has recently completed a course of lectures at Johns Hopkins University on America's position in the Pacific, and has also been lecturing in Washington on China.

LIBRARY CIRCULATION GAINS

The total number of books issued by the St. Louis Public Library in October was 267,833, as compared with 259,618 for the same month a year ago, or an increase of 8215. Of the branches, Barr circulated the largest number, 21,702, a gain of 3773 over its total for the corresponding month in 1922.

Out of the 7120 borrowers' cards issued during the month, 4867 were to persons newly registered. Books added to the library within the month totaled 4738, exclusive of the 51 volumes which augmented the blind collection.

Workers to Hear Pastor.

Dr. J. C. Townsend, pastor of the Congregational Church of Alton, will speak on "The Spirit of Safety" at the regular monthly industrial safety meeting at Community Center, Grand boulevard and Vista avenue, Friday night.

DICKMANN FIRM COMPLETES SIX-STORY OFFICE BUILDING

Construction of the fireproof six-story office and store building at 3115-17-19 South Grand boulevard for the Joseph F. Dickman Real Estate Co., has been completed. Lessees of space in the structure already have begun to move in.

In addition to the completion of the new structure, the Dickmann firm recently acquired a three-story structure adjoining on the south, bringing the combined investment involved in both buildings well over $500,000. The new building was constructed for the exclusive use of physicians and dentists. It was designed by Wedemeyer & Nelson, architects and contains 100 offices, space for small shops, a beauty parlor in the lobby and a large store that has been leased by F. W. Woolworth Co., for 15 years.

With the acquisition of the three-story building adjoining the new structure, the Southside Office of the Dickman Co., moved its offices from the second floor of this structure to a much larger office on the ground floor.

The building was purchased from Miss Minnie Kleepkamp, sister of the late John Kleepkamp, founder of the Kleepkamp Music Co.

REMLEY ARCADE ADDITION LOTS AT AUCTION, NOV. 14

An auction sale of lots in the Remley Arcade addition on Olive Street road at North and South road, is scheduled for Sunday, Nov. 14. The tract comprises 296 lots. The lots will be knocked down without limit or reserve to the highest bidders on terms of 20 per cent cash, with the balance in 36 payments, or in three years. Interest on deferred payments will be at the rate of 5 per cent.

Adjacent to Clayton, the addition has all modern conveniences, and social and educational advantages. The Remley Arcade market, one of the largest food emporiums in St. Louis County, constitutes a part of the addition.

WAGNER-GRANT-BELL TO MOVE REAL ESTATE OFFICE

As new quarters the Wagner-Grant-Bell Real Estate Co. has acquired a lease of the quarters formerly occupied by the Industrial Loan Co., on the ground floor of the International Life building, at Eighth and Chestnut streets. Possession will be taken Dec. 1.

The new quarters are among the most commodious and attractive on Chestnut street. The company, composed of Edward A. Wagner, Edward W. Grant and W. H. Bell, ranks with the foremost in real estate circles. Present quarters of the concern are on the second floor of the International Life building.

New Club Houses Started.

The Valley Park Realty Co. reports that foundations for three new clubhouses were started on Palm drive in Pharaoh Valley on the Meramec last week. It also reports leasing two clubhouses on Marshall avenue.

posed Missouri Pacific building, and is just west of the half block facing Twelfth boulevard from Pine to Olive, selected for the 37-story hotel project.

No definite announcement is made in connection with this purchase, which Weisels suggests is incident to the acquisition of a site of a tall building which will dominate the Memorial Plaza to the south.

Presumably the purchase has been made as a speculation predicated on the likelihood of an advance in ground values with the erection of the proposed Missouri Pacific Building. It is not believed that the purchase has been made in connection with the hotel plans.

The price paid for the parcel was not disclosed. It is understood that approximately $1500 a front foot was paid by the Missouri Pacific for the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Pine streets, on a basis of the Pine street frontage, and as high as $2000 a front foot for the adjoining ground on Pine street, the former owners selling before the Missouri Pacific project was disclosed.

A. M. Fromberg, attorney, recently purchased a strip adjoining and east of the site acquired for the new Missouri Pacific building. The strip extends through the block from Olive to Pine streets, with a frontage of 50 feet on Olive street and 71 feet on Pine. Negotiations for this purchase were conducted by Weisels, in connection with Cornet & Zeibig.

Permit Issued to Raze Buildings on Missouri Pacific Site.

A permit has been issued to the Missouri Pacific to raze six old buildings at 1226-28-30-34 Olive street, 210-18 North Thirteenth street, and 1227 Pine street. These structures occupy the site on the east side of Thirteenth street, extending from Pine to Olive street, acquired for the 17-story building of the Missouri Pacific. Plans are now being drawn for the structure, which ultimately is to be increased to 27 stories.

W. J. Holbrook, president of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., handled the negotiations for this site in connection with the Weisels company. Construction is to begin as soon as the plans are available, it is understood.

The east half of this block is under option for the 37-story hotel, which, however, is still in the promotion stage.

New Apartment Hotel and Business Buildings

The Ranelagh-Wilmar Apartment Hotel at De Baliviere and McPherson avenues. The eight-story building is the Wilmar, just completed.

WILMAR APARTMENT TO BE OPENED TODAY

New Apartment Contains 56 Apartments and 19 Hotel Rooms.

The new Wilmar Apartment Hotel at 445 De Baliviere avenue has been constructed as an addition to the Ranelagh Apartments at the northwest corner of De Baliviere and McPherson avenues. A lobby connects the two buildings.

Eight stories in height, the recently completed building has a frontage of 85 feet on De Baliviere avenue and contains 56 apartments including 19 hotel rooms with baths. On the first floor there are two shops and a restaurant which will be conducted by the hotel management.

Each apartment has large living room with folding beds, a dressing room, large closet space, a dining-room, tile bath with shower and a kitchen equipped with the latest refrigeration system. Floors are of hard wood throughout, except in the corridors, which are carpeted. Buffet apartments, an innovation, are an attractive feature.

Building's Advantages.

Through an ingenious arrangement all the apartments have the advantage of abundance of light and air.

Matt brick with terra cotta trimmings has been used in the construction which is fireproof and sound-proof throughout, and high-speed passenger elevators have been installed. A central refrigerating plant provides refrigeration and ice water for the entire building.

The new building overlooks Washington boulevard and Kingsbury place, and is within three blocks of the Jefferson Memorial entrance to Forest Park.

Transportation facilities include the University and Delmar cars with bus lines on Delmar and Waterman avenue. The new Wilmar will be opened formally today.

Built by Mrs. Housam.

The Wilmar and Ranelagh apartments comprise a total of 156 units, the two buildings having an aggregate frontage of 185 feet on De Baliviere and a depth of 125 feet on McPherson. They are under the management of the Housam Realty Co. of which Mrs. M. Housam is president. The new Wilmar was built under the personal supervision of Mrs. Housam and is the first major apartment hotel to be erected in St. Louis by a woman.

Mrs. Housam has dealt in apartment house properties on a large scale for a number of years and is considered an authority on real estate values.

During her career she has owned a number of large apartment buildings, at present is operating the Wilmar-Ranelagh, Browning and Cambridge Court apartments. She began in a comparatively modest way a number of years ago, increasing her holdings gradually.

In addition to personally handling all her holdings, Mrs. Housam maintains offices at 312 International Life Building, with the Housam Realty Co. She is a member of the Real Estate Exchange and of the Chamber of Commerce.

Westminster Place Home Sold.

The 12-room residence at 4410 Westminster place has been sold by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Augustine to Mr. and Mrs. Neil O'Day. Noel Carpenter of James M. Carpenter & Co. represented both parties.

FOX THEATER BUILDING TO BE 17 STORIES HIGH

Offices to Be Included in Structure Contemplated at Grand and Washington.

A 17-story theater and office building will be erected by William Fox, motion picture producer, on the site at Grand and Washington boulevard, where an old church and other buildings are being razed.

The building will be L-shaped, touching on the south and west the Humboldt Building, a landmark at the southwest corner of Grand and Washington. It is Fox's intention eventually to raze the Humboldt Building to make room for a hotel structure, to be joined with the theater and office building.

Blueprints of the theater and office building, submitted yesterday to Building Commissioner Christopher for approval, show it will be of steel and concrete, with exterior of brick, trimmed with terra cotta. The theater itself will have 5000 seats, a colonnaded lobby, 54x100 feet, and a vestibule, 54x25. Entrance will be on Grand. Estimated cost of the building is approximately $3,000,000.

14-Story Apartment Building on Lindell Is Planned.

A permit to erect a 14-story apartment building to cost $500,000 at 3733-37 Lindell boulevard, adjoining Hotel Coronado, was applied for yesterday by the Frances-Ralph Realty Co., in which Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Niedringhaus of 3733 Lindell are interested. The building would contain a basement garage, and set back 25 feet from the property line. Alderman Watts recently introduced a bill to require 40-foot setback in that vicinity.

School Board Would Remodel Central High School.

The Board of Education yesterday applied for permits to remodel and fireproof the floors and ceilings of the old Central High School Building, 1030 North Grand boulevard at a cost of $150,000, and to erect a three-story brick school building, with 30 rooms, on a site at 7212 Arsenal street, at a cost of $178,000.

BELLIS REALTY CO. REPORTS SALES OF SIX BUNGALOWS

The Bellis Realty Co. reports the following sales: 22 Gruner place, bungalow to Libbie Price; 2 Gregan place, bungalow, to Richard Wickham; 3114 Rolla place, bungalow, to Paul C. Jenson; 4830 Leduc avenue, bungalow, to Augusta Halwe for Charles J. Hawk; 3119 Hampton avenue, bungalow, for the account of Louisa Millerbaugh; 2722-24 Sulphur avenue, duplex bungalow, for H. Niemins.

Wenzlick Lists Bungalow Sales.

O. H. Jones, sales manager for the Wenzlick Realty Co., reports unusual activity in Clifton Heights district in moderately priced bungalows. Sales for the past week include: 5233 Lansdowne avenue, single flat; 1053 Hampton avenue, bungalow; 6145 Elizabeth avenue, bungalow; 2181 Clifton avenue, bungalow; 6017 Elizabet avenue, bungalow; 2420 Clifton avenue, bungalow; 4311 Darby avenue, bungalow; 7211 Dale avenue, bungalow; 6286 Cates avenue, double flat; 1391 Blackstone avenue, residence.

CONTINENTAL COMPANY PLANS TO FINANCE HOME BUILDING

J. De Witt Mills, secretary of the Continental Life Insurance Co., has announced that the Executive Committee of the company has taken definite steps to further co-operate with home owners and those who are purchasing or building homes.

The financial plan worked out by the Continental company provides that the loans made by the company to finance the purchase of homes shall be repaid in 120 monthly installments, which gives the borrower 10 years over which to extend his payments. This provides what may be termed permanent financing for the owner of the residence, bungalow or single flat. In many instances the monthly payments on such a real estate loan are smaller than the rent is on a similar property. Under this plan the borrower has the option of prepaying the loan in full at any time.

Mortgage loans, aggregating more than $6,000,000, secured by gilt-edged real estate in the real estate investment centers, are now held by the company as permanent investments.

SLONIM FIRM BUILDS STORE TO BE COMPLETED DEC. 15

The M. J. Slonim Realty Co., 621 Chestnut street, announces the construction of a store building at the southeast corner of Natural Bridge and Paris avenues for a client.

The lot, 30 by 125 feet, was recently sold through the Hotfelder Realty Co. and the Dubinsky Realty Co. to a client of the M. J. Slonim Realty Co. The building is being constructed by the A. H. Stiel Construction Co., 815 Chestnut street, and will be completed before Dec. 15.

New Pennant Building, at 17th and Locust streets, as it will appear with five additional stories.

SALE OF LOTS IN PAGEWOOD PASS $500,000, HALF SOLD

Sales of lots in Pagewood at Page boulevard and Woodson road have passed the $500,000 mark, representing more than half the addition. There is every reason to believe the tract soon will be out of the market.

The tract comprises 1000 lots, a subdivision of 280 acres, one of the largest developments placed on the market in several years. It was formerly the old Woodson farm.

Ben Altheim & Brothers Real Estate Co., bought the tract before the up-lift in the prices of county acreage, and are selling it at comparatively low prices. Sewer, water and gas mains, with other improvements are installed, and grading is completed, thus the tract is available for building operations without interruption. A number of bungalows have been erected, while plans for others are being made, according to the company.

Page boulevard, is hard surfaced to the subdivision from Grand boulevard. Terms of sale are, $1 down and $1 a week, with a discount for cash. William H. Christy is director of sales.

Korte Company Sells Flats.

The Korte Realty and Loan Co. reports the following sales: 3411 Marcus avenue, a flat, to John R. Sweet; 4740 Anderson avenue, a flat, to John J. Nelson; 2215 St. Louis avenue, a 10-room residence, to Henry Peron; 2558 West Dodier street, a cottage, to Joseph W. Rooney; 5104 Enright avenue, a nine-room residence, to Kate Staley.

ACTIVITY IN COUNTRY CLUB COURT ADDITION

Construction is proceeding on an aggressive scale in Country Club Court addition, especially on Polo drive, which traverses this section from north to south. Plans have been made for the erection of residences in this addition. Five are almost completed, with three sold virtually from the plans. The houses will range in price from $20,000 to $40,000, embracing the last word in residential construction of their class, according to William Remmert, president of the Remmert Construction Co., which is developing the addition.

Adjacent to Clayton on the south and just north of Wydown boulevard, the addition is most attractively situated for residences on a pretentious scale. Country Club Court, with Hanley road as its east boundary, is an adjoining development. Eighteen houses were erected in this addition by the Remmert company.

The new Polo drive houses are exciting more than ordinary attention. One of the most attractive of these has been placed on exhibition, furnished.

F. A. Singer Joins Weisels' Staff.

Frank A. Singer, oldest son of Adolph Singer, president of the Singer Brothers Cloak Co., has become connected with the Henry R. Weisels organization, as assistant to Francis H. Hoefner, manager of apartment buildings. Singer formerly attended Washington University and recently graduated from Colorado State College.

BUILDING PERMITS IN 37 STATES SHOW SLIGHT DECLINE

October Totals for Section East of Rockies $515,726,600; Drop of 8 Per Cent Below September.

CENTRAL WEST IS 70 PER CENT AHEAD

Contracts Also Exceed Same Month Last Year by 35 Per Cent; Texas Figures $16,361,000.

October construction contracts in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains amounted to $515,726,600, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was a decline of 8 per cent from September, and of 3 per cent from October of last year. Normally there is a slight rise in contract volume in October. The 37 states covered by this record include about 91 per cent of the total construction volume of the country.

The more important items in the October record were: $226,793,600, or 44 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $103,756,600, or 20 per cent, for public works and utilities; $63,601,400, or 12 per cent, for commercial buildings; $45,828,300, or 9 per cent, for industrial buildings; and $23,566,700, or 4 per cent, for educational buildings.

New building and engineering work started east of the Rocky Mountains during the past 10 months has amounted to $5,325,506,400, which is a 6 per cent increase over the corresponding period of 1925.

Contemplated new work was reported last month to the amount of $637,359,000, which was a 5 per cent increase over the amount reported in September, but a 25 per cent decrease from the amount reportd in October of last year.

Pittsburg District.

The total volume of construction contracts let in the Pittsburg district (Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky) during October amounted to $58,283,300. The above figure represented declines of 10 per cent from September, 1926, and 26 per cent from October, 1925. The October building record included the following items of note: $24,023,200, or 41 per cent of all construction, for public works and utilities; $17,114,300, or 29 per cent, for residential buildings; $5,682,200, or 10 per cent, for industrial buildings; $4,027,300 or 7 per cent for commercial buildings; and $2722,100, or 5 per cent, for educational buildings.

New building and engineering work started in these states during the first 10 months of 1926 amounted to $656,046,700, as compared with $738,463,000 in the first 10 months of last year, being a loss of 11 per cent.

Contemplated construction planned for the district, as reported in October, amounted to $65,080,800. There was an increase of 17 per cent over September, 1926. However, a decrease of 6 per cent from October of last year occurred.

The Central West.

Building and engineering contracts were awarded last month to the amount of $171,263,800 in the Central West (Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska). This figure exceeded September, 1926, by 70 per cent and October of last year by 35 per cent. The more important items in October's building record were: $65,862,800, or 38 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $38,328,400, or 22 per cent, for public works and utilities; $23,973,400, or 14 per cent, for industrial buildings; $20,223,900, or 12 per cent, for commercial buildings; and $9075,000, or 5 per cent, for educational buildings.

The Central West had $1,387,787,300 in contracts for new construction work during the first 10 months of 1926, which was an increase of 10 per cent over the amount ($1,257,987,500) for the corresponding period of 1925.

Contemplated construction planned for these states as reported in October amounted to $185,398,300. This was 7 per cent in excess of September of this year, but 4 per cent below October, 1925.

$16,361,000 in Texas.

The total volume of construction contracts let in the State of Texas during October amounted to $16,361,000. The above figure showed a decrease of 8 per cent from September of this year, but an increase of 53 per cent over October, 1925. Analysis of the building and engineering record showed the following classes of importance; $7,811,800, or 48 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $3,244,600, or 20 per cent, for public works and utilities; $2,382,200, or 15 per cent, for commercial buildings; $923,000, or 6 per cent, for public buildings; and $726,000, or 4 per cent, for industrial buildings.

Texas had $201,810,300 in contracts for new building and engineering work during the first 10 months of 1926, as compared with $157,271,300 in the corresponding period of last year, being an increase of 28 per cent. The 1926 10 months' total of contract awards has already exceeded the 1925 yearly total by the amount of the October contracts.

Contemplated new work reported for the State last month amounted to $19,902,400. There were increases of 5 per cent over September, 1926, and 65 per cent over October of last year.

ISAAC T. COOK & CO. REPORT THREE LEASES

Manufacturing Company Acquires Half of Floor in Building at 1700 Washington.

The Missouri Pants Manufacturing Co., occupying the storeroom at the northeast corner of Tenth street and Washington avenue, together with floor space in the upper part of the Martin Building, has leased from the Rosenthal-Sloan Millinery Co., the east half of the seventh floor of the Monogram Building at 1700-18 Washington avenue.

This company will occupy about 15,000 square feet of floor space, and will move into its new quarters the latter part of December. Julius Greenspoon is president and treasurer, and Harry Drazen, vice president and secretary.

The seventh floor of the Fashion Square Building, at Thirteenth street and Washington avenue, containing 18,000 square feet, has been leased for the Rose Realty Co. to Pokorny & Co., Inc., 1123 Washington avenue.

Oscar F. Wright, wholesale dealer in shoe findings, occupying the second floor of the northeast corner of Fifteenth and Olive streets, has leased a large part of the building at 725 Spruce street from George A. Sweet & Co., which has been occupying the entire building. Alterations will be completed at the building about Jan. 1.

All parties were represented by Isaac T Cook & Co., Inc., in the negotiations.

NUMEROUS SALES REPORTED BY LUPFER-ACKER, INC.

The Lupfer-Acker, Inc., 1138 Chestnut street, reports the following sales:

KANSAS COURT DECISION CUTS INSURANCE RATES

Companies Must Return About $4,000,000 to Holders of Fire and Tornado Policies.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 6.—Stock fire insurance companies doing business in Kansas must return approximately $4,000,000 to policyholders in this State, under a decision of the Kansas Supreme Court today in the suit pending in the Shawnee County District Court and the State Supreme Court more than four years. It involved the insurance rates on practically every business building and contents, some farm property and some residential property.

Under the Supreme Court opinion, the fire and tornado rates in Kansas are reduced approximately 15 per cent from the rates in effect Jan. 1, 1923. By the terms of the order, policyholders are to have returned them the difference between rates promulgated by the insurance companies and those ordered into effect by the State insurance department.

Counsel for the insurance companies announced an intention to appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

A. A. HOECH NEW PRESIDENT OF COUNTY TEACHERS

Arthur A. Hoech, Superintendent of Schools of Ritenour, was elected president of the St. Louis County Teachers' Association yesterday at the closing session of a three-day convention at Clayton High School. Other officers: Miss Alice E. Hall, principal of the Ferguson High School, vice president; Miss Clare M. Pruehs, commercial teacher in the Webster Groves High School, secretary; and Ernest F. Busch, superintendent of the Wellston schools, treasurer.

Resolutions were passed in favor of a state teachers' retirement fund, the establishment of a national bureau of education with a place in the president's cabinet, and indorsing health crusades in the public schools.

Among the principal speakers who addressed the convention were Prof. Jay Hudson of the University of Missouri, Dr. Raymond A. Kent of Northwestern University, Dr. James R. Jewell of the University of Arkansas, Dr. Frank L. Wright of Washington University, and Prof. Theodore B. Shank of St. Louis University.

1000 COAL MINERS TO WORK IN BELLEVILLE DISTRICT

Approximately 1000 miners have returned to work in and near Belleville in the last few days, according to Secretary James Mason of the Belleville Subdistrict of the Illinois Mine Workers' Union. Nigger Hollow Mine No. 1 of the St. Louis & O'Fallon Coal Co., started operations with 600 men after a shutdown of one year. The Kolb Co. Mine No. 2, at Mascoutah, east of Belleville, resumed work yesterday with 200 men, while the Golden Rule Mine of Lenzburg is again at work with 150 men. The Prairie Coal Co. mine in Ridge Prairie, north of Belleville, after being closed down for three years, is working again with 50 men. Other smaller mines also have resumed operations.

CHANGE IN ALCOHOL MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Indications that the industrial alcohol industry is turning away from the Cuban markets were seen last week, when the Eastern Alcohol Corporation received 1,500,000 gallons of African blackstrap molasses. Another consignment is en route from Java.

African sugar growers last year shipped about 40,000,000 gallons of molasses to Europe for alcohol manufactures, but until now the large American companies have depended almost entirely on Cuba. The net cost of the African molasses, including transportation, and the quality, are said to compare favorably with Cuban importations.

Flats Change Hands.

Included among sales last week by the Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co., was a flat owned by Eugene E. Sullivan, located at 4084 Botanical avenue. The property was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Meary, the consideration not being disclosed. Other sales involved tenement property at 2109-11-11½-13 Lynch street, purchased by Anna Michler, a nine-room residence at 1330 Goodfellow avenue. A four-family flat at 3903-04 Utah street, a lot in Vinita Park fronting 60 feet on Washington street by a depth of 165 feet and a seven-room residence of E. J. Pitber at 4010 Wyoming street.

Bray Company Sells Apartment.

The F. W. Bray Realty Co. reports the sale of 5225-27-29-31 Cates avenue, an eight-family apartment building on a lot 75 by 155 feet, to a client of the Glick Real Estate Co.; the sale of 3810 Beachwood avenue, a bungalow, to Robert E. Davis, and 4736 Ashland avenue, a bungalow, to Alfred A. Dugal.

To Teach History of Medicine.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 6.—Dr. William H. Welch, director of the Johns Hopkins school of hygiene and public health, has resigned to accept a Johns Hopkins professorship in the history of medicine, said to be the first full-time chair of its kind established in America. Establishment of the professorship was made possible by a grant of $200,000 from the Rockefeller General Education Board of New York City.

Rail Telegraphers Get Increase.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—Telegraph operators on the Reading system have received a wage increase of 2 cents an hour. The increase was effective Nov. 1.

RAILWAYS SHUN JOINT RATES ON BARGE LINE

Refuse to Act on Upper Mississippi Project Unless Ordered to Do So.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Railroads serving Northwestern territory refused today at a conference before the Interstate Commerce Commission to make joint rates over the projected upper Mississippi barge line unless ordered to do so by the commission.

By agreement with all parties concerned, however, a test case on joint rates will be presented to the commission immediately and Chairman Eastman announced that an endeavor would be made to expedite proceedings so that a decision would be issued in time for the beginning of operations next spring.

A large number of Twin City business men and spokesmen for Mississippi Valley interests participated in the informal discussion with the commission.

Representative Newton of Minnesota said that the Upper Mississippi barge line would go into operation next spring and the first joint rates sought would result in the hauling of freight from Chicago to Dubuque, Ia., and its transfer to barge there, and movement by water up the Mississippi River to St. Paul or Minneapolis.

F. B. Townsend, director of traffic for the Minneapolis Traffic Association, said the rates tentatively prescribed for such a movement would be considerably lower than all present rail rates. He added that the Twin Cities and transportation interests centered there all expected to see Northwestern railroads granted generally higher freight rates by the commission very shortly, as the general result of the earning situation. For this reason he held it to be necessary that the barge line be brought into operation.

The viewpoint was emphasized by other spokesmen for the delegation, before Chairman Eastman asked for the railroad opinion.

"In the judgment of the traffic officials of the principal roads serving the territory," said C. E. Spens, vice president of the Burlington, "it is not possible for us to make these joint rates voluntarily. The effect on the earnings of the road would be too great. We are now before the commission seeking rate increases, and if it should appear that we were voluntarily submitting to a reduction in our earnings by a transaction like this, it might prejudice our position. Then, too, we do not know where this policy of barge line operations will go toward reducing our earnings."

Mine, Closed 11 Months, to Reopen.

HERRIN, Ill., Nov. 6.—Mine No. 20 of the Big Ben Coal Corporation, just north of this city, will resume production Monday after a shutdown of 11 months. At the time of the shutdown last January more than 600 men were employed.

CONVICTED OF MAILING POISON TO JURIST

Denver Chemist Subject to Maximum Sentence of 20 Years and $10,000 Fine.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 6.—Alva W. Estabrook, Denver chemist, was found guilty on a charge of sending poison through the mails to the home of Judge E. E. Porterfield, veteran Kansas City Circuit Judge, by a jury in Federal Court here today. The jury deliberated 55 minutes. Judge Merrill E. Otis said sentence would be pronounced Tuesday morning.

Estabrook, a cereal chemist, who operated a drug store in Denver at the time of his arrest, May 28, was charged with sending a package of pancake flour through the mails to Judge Porterfield to revenge a bitter hatred developed over the Judge's decision in Estabrook's marital troubles. Judge Porterfield awarded custody of Estabrook's son to his mother after the couple were divorced. The pancake flour was analyzed and found to contain a large quantity of poison. All the members of the Porterfield family had been made ill from eating the cakes made from the flour. Judge Porterfield had received several threatening letters from Estabrook in Denver.

Attorneys said the maximum penalty fixed for the charge upon which Estabrook was tried was 20 years' imprisonment in the Federal penitentiary, and $10,000 fine.

Estabrook's attorneys pleaded insanity, without admitting the charge. "I am going to feel safer now," Mrs. Estabrook, divorced wife of the defendant, said after the verdict.

TEXAS TURKEY TROT PASSES

Birds Will Go to Market this Year In Motor Trucks.

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 6.—The days of the picturesque "turkey trot," the annual drive of holiday birds to market, have almost passed into history in Texas, along with the cattle drive and the round-up, and a majority of Thanksgiving dinners will go to market this year in automobile trucks.

The time was when South Texas produced almost 90 per cent of the nation's turkey crop and the fowls were driven in great flocks to the principal market centers. There the birds were herded much as cattle were herded for the round-up, and packing house buyers were given a chance to inspect millions of Thanksgiving dinners "on the hoof." The birds lost so much flesh in this process, however, that most of them are carried to market nowadays.

The State has produced a bumper crop of Thanksgiving fowls this season, experts estimating that at least 1500 carloads will be shipped North and East.

An Unusual Opportunity for ambitious people

ALL of us are eagerly waiting for opportunity to come our way. I have just had an experience so unusual that I want to put it before the people of St. Louis.

Out in Cleveland, Ohio, there is a great big national organization—the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers—who have been making a big name for themselves in the financial world. Their banks and financial activities extend from Coast to Coast. Their success has led them into new fields. They are now fostering a community comprising a model city, fundamental industries and intensive farms where any thrifty, earnest family can reach actual financial independence without slaving away the years but, rather, enjoying them in fresh air and invigorating sunshine.

And understand this; there was no idea of a Florida promotion as such—but Venice, Florida, was chosen because it won out in comparison with other places, some exceedingly interesting. Venice had the edge in location, climate, soil and other natural advantages.

Now, Venice is more than a plan; it is a lovely spot. I have just come back from a careful inspection of this great Brotherhood project. I have been on the ground, on the mainland beach on which the city fronts, walked along the boulevards, admired the spic and span buildings, enjoyed the hotels, feasted on the home grown, home cooked food, and spent hours on the farm lands, in the Venice Nursery and on the Venice Demonstration Farm, and I have this to say—

Really earnest people with some means are wanted, and will be given expert cooperation

Particularly in operating Venice Farms on five acres and up. The Venice Farm Board is composed of able men. They are there to give information, and when one gets started, they can help in many ways—from planting to marketing

There are other opportunities but this farm opportunity is the big one—the family opportunity—the opportunity for the mother and the kiddies as well as the man at the head of the table. A young couple ought to consider this seriously, too. Simply think of this—that three, even four crops can be raised here and sent to market in a year and this part of the state ships to the earliest markets and has strong local markets. Venice has its own dairy farm, also.

It is possible for a Venice farm to pay for itself in a few years. Crops grow easily and fast under the life-giving sun. It tingles in your own veins. I heard of people making $500 and more an acre a year in that part of the state.

I brought back some booklets that tell a good deal about it—but in offering these to my readers I want to warn them not to expect a Florida development and real estate promotion such as has been frequently before the public in recent years.

Bear in mind, when you read this, that Florida is the truck and fruit garden of a large part of our country, principally the East, and that the part of Florida in which Venice is located is the Manatee section, famous for crops, Gulf breezes, hunting and fishing.

It is a community of farms and farmers, some of whom would have considered no other farming proposition. Authorities say it is the largest and most comprehensive farm development ever projected in America.

The farms are located on good roads, cleared and ready to plant, with general drainage installed. The Venice Farm Board sells these farms at moderate prices on liberal terms and stands back of the purchaser with helpful information and service. This may be your best opportunity to get ahead, to throw off the burden of expenses that mean little, to get free of irking tasks and cares that bring little more than wrinkles.

I am ready to spend time with people interested and tell a lot more; this statement just skims the surface. I know this means happiness and profit for others, and I am enthusiastic in giving others the benefit of what I know.

Alluring offers could not tempt me into Florida last year. But Venice belongs to a different order. This comprehensive project, backed by an organization of such established repute and known resources, opens to the average man the opportunity of sharing in the great agricultural wealth of Florida—for years universally acknowledged.

If you let me hear from you I will mail the booklet, "A New Free Life of Independence," illustrated with photographs. Visit my office and I will be glad to discuss this unusual opportunity with you personally.

PERSIA PROTESTS TO LEAGUE

Cannot Accept Locarno View On Article 16.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Nov. 6.—Persia has notified the League of Nations that she cannot accept the interpretation of Article 16 of the League Covenant as given in the Locarno Treaty. Persia has always opposed any weakening of Article 10 of the Covenant, she says, and considers that the new interpretation of Article 16 would lead to equally undesirable weakening of the guarantees of security held by members of the league.

Article 16 binds the members of the league to economic and financial penalties against an aggressor state and provides for an indication of the military support they might give to a general scheme of military penalties against such a state. Germany, before entering the league, protested that she was not in a position to accept these obligations in toto because of her geographical position and her disarmed state under the Versailles Treaty. Consequently, at Locarno, the delegates of the Entente Powers gave the written opinion that each league member was bound to co-operate in support of the Covenant and in resistance to any act of aggression only "to an extent which is compatible with its military situation and which takes its geographical position into account."

PROWLER, ROUTED IN STOCKING FEET, CAUGHT AT KANSAS CITY

Says He Is Frank Krungen of St. Louis, Recently Released From Prison.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 6.—When William C. Moffitt, a night watchman for the Country Club Detective Association, walked to the rear of the home of James E. Goodrich, vice president and general counsel of the Commerce Trust Co., last night, two shots were fired at him.

Moffitt fired at something he saw moving around but evidently missed. Beneath a window he found four shoes. So he called the Country Club police station to tell the police if they found two men in stocking feet he knew where their shoes were.

Half an hour later Lee Knisley, a chauffeur for the police commissioner, was on his way to the home of Commissioner M. A. O'Donnell. He saw a man standing on a corner, hopping from one foot to the other. Knisley looked closer and saw the man didn't have any shoes, so he took him to the Country Club station.

Sergt. W. G. Cummings thought he knew where there was a pair of shoes that would fit the man and called Moffitt. Then Cummings, who had been a guard at the Missouri penitentiary, inspected the man's suit.

"Look's like prison clothes," he said.

"Yes, Texas," replied the man without shoes.

"Looks like Missouri," mused the sergeant.

"Yes—out Thursday," said the man.

The man without the shoes was Frank Krungen, 26 years old, of St. Louis, it developed. He was released from the State prison Thursday and came to Kansas City.

The police also are holding Joe Rivers who is said to be Krungen's companion.

Lewis Trial to Be Set Tomorrow.

CHINA ANNULS BELGIAN TRE... OF 1865; NEW PACT IS SO...

Belgium Rejects Proposal of ... "Equality and Reciprocity" Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, Nov. 6.—The Government today abrogated Sino-Belgian treaty of 1865 having received a reply from Belgian Government reject definitely rejecting Chinese proposals for formation of a treaty based on "equality and reciprocity," and reverted to its original position of proposing reference of the question to the Internation Court at The Hague.

Foreign Minister Wellington Koo about six months ago gave notice that his Government would set aside the old treaty—a pact of friendship, commerce, navigation and jurisdiction—and to make arrangements for a modus vivendi pending formation of a new one.

This proposal entailed the provision that, as soon as the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan conclude new treaties with China in the matter of jurisdiction, Belgium accept the same disposition as agreed upon between China and any of those Powers.

The abrogation was announced in the form of a presidential mandate annulling the treaty as of Oct. 1 and instructing the Foreign Minister to conclude a new treaty with the basis of equality and mutual respect for China's sovereignty, and directing that full and due protection in accordance with the rules of international law be extended to the Belgian legation, consulates and property of Belgian nationals by local authorities in China.

NAVY PERSONNEL TOO SMALL TO MAN AIRCRAFT CARRIE...

Department May Be Forced to Skeletonize the Crews of Six Battleships.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Navy forces on the Atlantic are faced with a reduction if the department is unable to find any other source from which to draw enlisted personnel to man the new aircraft carriers, Lexington and Saratoga now under construction.

This problem now is understood to have been the subject of conferences at the White House this week, attended by Navy and budget bureau officials. No sign has been given that any increase in the navy's budget to make provision for naming the carriers is contemplated.

While no official exposition of the Navy's plans has been made, it is expected that four, and probably five, of the six battleships now assigned to the scouting fleet, will be mothballed in the Atlantic, will be reduced to skeleton crews and put out of active commission to provide the 2600 men needed for the aircraft carriers. Whatever resolution is reached, however, it is regarded as unlikely that the present personnel of the battle fleet in the Pacific will be affected.

To Administer Potter Estate

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., Nov. 6.—Judge D. Morgan in County Court today appointed James W. and John T. Spiller administrators of the estates of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Potter. The action was on petition of Maurice Potter, a son, only survivor of the Potter family of W. O. Potter recently killed his wife, two daughters, two grandchildren and himself. The bond of the administrators was fixed at $4000 and $2000, respectively. The home was in Mrs. Potter's name. No inventory of property was given in the petition, but a $10,000 life insurance policy carried by W. O. Potter was among the papers filed.

TROTZKY DEFIES STALIN, RAKES SOVIET LEADERS

Refuses Either to Renounce His Own Views or to Swallow Theories Forced Upon Him.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Nov. 6. — Confident and defiant, Leon Trotzky, once the idol of the Red army, took the rostrum at the Communist party conference today and defended his principles in the face of disciplinary measures recently carried out against him and other opposition leaders.

"We decline to renounce any part of our principles or views," he shouted, "and we refuse to swallow those theories and ideas that are forced upon us. But, while we shall not abandon our views, we have no intention of aggravating the differences and factional strife within the party."

Insisting that the theories of Stalin, head of the party, Rykoff and Bukharin, members of the central executive committee, were based on false premises, Trotzky declared:

"Comrade Stalin must find stronger arguments if he wishes to impress the world with my failings." Then, turning to Bukharin, Trotzky cried, "Comrade Bukharin says that we can build socialism, provided we are not menaced by foreign intervention, but I say we shall never build socialism if we advance at a tortoise-like pace, because our industrial progress depends entirely on imports of machinery and raw materials from capitalistic countries."

Then to Rykoff, he said, "Rykoff claims that the country has reached pre-war production in almost every industry, but I say that not only do we not approach the pre-war level, but the population is much worse off now than then."

Trotzky declared the crops were poorer than had been expected and added, "We may be proud of whatever economic success we have achieved, but what we have accomplished up to the present is merely the first serious advance on the long bridge separating socialism from capitalism."

Stark County, O., Grand Jury to Be Convened on Eve of Trial of Three Men.

By the Associated Press.

CANTON, O., Nov. 6.—With many angles of the Don R. Mellett murder mystery yet unsolved and with Prosecutor C. B. McClintock declaring several more persons may be indicted for first degree murder, the Stark County grand jury will be convened within a few days to consider new evidence.

Before the grand jury meets, however, Patrick Eugene McDermott, one of three men already indicted, will enter his plea to the charge and prepare to face trial Dec. 6 or earlier. His arraignment is set for Monday. The grand jury work is expected to be completed before he goes on trial. Immediately following McDermott's trial, Louis Mazer, jointly indicted, will be tried and later, Ben Rudner, on the same charge.

The prosecutor says the grand jury is to consider an indictment against Norris Nadel of Cleveland, alleged to have concealed McDermott after the murder and to have been identified as the man who shadowed the publisher shortly before he was slain.

SWITZERLAND'S ENVOY TO U. S. IS DINNER GUEST IN ST. LOUIS

Dr. Marc Peter Entertained by 100 Representatives of Swiss Societies.

Dr. Marc Peter, Swiss minister to the United States, departed last night for a celebration in Chicago of the covenant of the Rutli, after being guest at a dinner in St. Louis of about 100 representatives of Swiss societies at Swiss Hall, and a luncheon given by Gaston DuBois of the Missouri Athletic Association.

The covenant is celebrated on Aug. 1 in Switzerland, but in November in the United States. Dr. Peter will go from Chicago to colonies in Wisconsin, where settlers, who brought their own cattle from Switzerland, make domestic Swiss cheese, then to Detroit and to New York for a celebration next Sunday before he returns to Washington. The occasion commemorated was the meeting in 1291 of three patriots who swore to keep Switzerland free of Austrian rule.

Order to Spread Its Evidence That Catholics Are Being Unjustly Treated.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Every instrument for disseminating public information will be employed by the Knights of Columbus to spread in the United States the order's evidence that Roman Catholics have been unjustly treated by the Government of Mexico, the Board of Directors and the State deputies of the body decided today.

The printed word, public speaking, and the radio will be used in a nationwide campaign to arouse American opinion against the Mexican Government's treatment of Catholic worshipers. Although no direct request will be made for withdrawal by the United States of the recognition extended to the Mexican Government in 1917, members of the conference which terminated today indicated the hope that such action would ensue.

James H. Flaherty, Supreme Knight, declared that American recognition was based, among other things, on the promise of Mexico to allow freedom of worship, and declared the belief that this pledge is being flouted in recent edicts of the church forbidding church ownership of property.

FRANCE DOESN'T WANT QUARREL WITH ITALY

But Paris Papers Suspect Fascist Intrigue in Catalonian Conspiracy.

By the Associated Press

PARIS, Nov. 6.—France has no quarrel with Italy and wants none, was the only comment in official circles in Paris today. There is a tendency to minimize the Catalonian and anti-Fascist conspiracies.

Col. Ricciotti Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian liberator, is declared to have been one of the leading Italians concerned in the Catalonian plot. French newspapers say that Garibaldi has admitted receiving 500,000 lire from Italian police, and the inference is that the Italian Government was aware of the intrigues in which he was engaged. Some of the papers are inclined to suspect an Italian conspiracy to embroil France with Spain.

Further stores of arms for the now disbanded liberators of Catalonia were found today near Perpignan, where police are rounding up the scattered and demoralized forces of Col. Macia, head of the conspiracy. Police work is about ended and the examining magistrates will now proceed to interrogate the leaders and their principal lieutenants.

The examination of Garibaldi, who was brought here from Nice, seems to have established a direct connection between Fascist activities along the French frontier and the attempt to wrest Catalonia from Spain.

CLEVELAND HIGH INVITES VISITORS TO SEE DISPLAY

"Education Week" Program Will Show Modern Methods in Practice.

The public is invited to visit Cleveland High School, Louisiana avenue and Osceola street, this week to observe modern educational methods in practice as part of the school's "Education Week" program.

A "hospitality committee" will conduct visitors through the institution and explain the various exhibits. Every department will have special displays, including exhibits of work done by the classes in art, botany, chemistry, mechanical drawing, shop work and manual training. In addition there will be general displays showing the activities and work of the school as a whole. Special noon auditorium programs will be presented by the different classes daily for the entertainment of visitors.

A feature of the week's program will be demonstrations in cooking and sewing by members of the household arts class, who will entertain their mothers at luncheon on Wednesday.

Education Week is sponsored by the National Educational Association and the American Legion. It also will be observed in the other public schools here.

GIVES $50,000 TO HOSPITAL TO HONOR PARENTS

Mrs. William H. Keech, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Holmes, Endows Two Rooms at St. Luke's.

A $50,000 gift to St. Luke's Hospital was announced last night by the board of directors. It was made by Mrs. William H. Keech of Hotel Chase, and is to endow two rooms in perpetuity in the hospital in memory of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Holmes.

The gift is one of the largest ever received by the hospital, and was unsolicited, coming as a surprise to the hospital directors. Early last week, Mrs. Keech asked Frank V. Hammar, vice-president of the board of directors, to call on her and notified him of her intention of endowing the two rooms.

Two attractive rooms have been chosen by her and bronze tablets will be attached to the doors. The rooms will be dedicated in the near future with a single ceremony.

John A. Holmes died ten years ago, and his wife two years ago. Both were well known for their interest in philanthropic and educational projects and gave liberally to many causes. They were natives of Pennsylvania. Mr. Holmes came here in 1856 and became associated in the lumber business with his uncle, Robert Holmes. On the death of Robert Holmes in 1857, John A. Holmes formed the firm of J. A. Holmes & Co., which afterward was incorporated as the J. A. Holmes Lumber Co., and is now conducted by his son, Robert, and J. Howard Holmes.

Mrs. Keech several years ago gave an addition to the West Penn Hospital of Pittsburg, Pa., in memory of her husband.

Annual interest on her gift to St. Luke's Hospital will aid each year in decreasing the deficit of the hospital.

JAPANESE AMBASSADOR TO BE ENTERTAINED HERE THIS WEEK

Will Pass Through St. Louis Tomorrow Night, but Will Return Wednesday.

T. Matsudaira, Japanese Ambassador to the United States, will arrive in St. Louis tomorrow night, en route to Columbia, Mo., where Tuesday he will present formally a stone lantern to the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri. He will be accompanied by Teijiro Tamura, Japanese Consul at Chicago.

During his brief stay in the city, the Ambassador will be the guest of honor at a banquet given by James E. Smith, honorary consul of Japan in St. Louis; F. Ernest Cramer, chairman of the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, and James A. Troy, assistant general secretary of the chamber. Immediately following the banquet, Ambassador Matsudaira will leave for Columbia. The lantern which he will present to the university is the gift of the American-Japan Society of Tokio, Japan.

The Ambassador will return to St. Louis Wednesday to address a luncheon meeting of the members' conference of the Chamber of Commerce. He has been invited by Chancellor Hadley to be a guest of honor at a dinner at the Hadley home, Wednesday evening, and later to attend the Horse Show, where W. Frank Carter, president of the St. Louis Horse Show Association, has reserved a box for him. Thursday, the Ambassador will address the student body at Washington University.

DENY C. & O. WILL REPLACE NICKEL PLATE IN MERGER

Bankers in Wall Street Assert No New Proposal Has Been Adopted for Van Sweringen Plan.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Report that the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway would replace the Nickel Plate as the central unit of the projected Van Sweringen railroad merger today lacked confirmation in Wall Street, where those in close touch with the Cleveland magnates said that no new plan had been adopted.

Proposals to make the Chesapeake & Ohio the principal holding company were discussed when the original consolidation was outlined two years ago, bankers explained, and rejected as unworkable at that time. Chesapeake minority stockholders, it was said, probably would favor such a plan, but it might be impossible to obtain the agreement of the other roads to the change.

The Pere Marquette railway already is bound to the new Nickel Plate company under the revised leasing agreement executed last July. Chairman E. N. Brown said today that he had heard of no contemplated changes in the general setup of the merger. Others interested in the consolidation indicated that efforts were still being made to bring about the grouping along the original lines.

ARMISTICE DAY PROCLAMATION

Mayor Miller has issued a proclamation regarding Nov. 11, the eighth anniversary of the signing of the armistice, and suggesting as a special observance that "at the eleventh hour on the eleventh day of the eleventh month of the year, all industry and all street traffic, insofar as possible and practicable, cease for two minutes."

TWO BROTHERS AND WOMAN HELD FOR HOLDUP OF SALOON

East St. Louis Police Receive Reports from Collinsville and Peoria Involving Men.

Thomas O'Brien, 18 years old, and his brother, David, 28, both of Pekin, Ill., with a woman who lives in East St. Louis, are held in East St. Louis for Madison County authorities. The brothers having admitted, police say, that they held up the saloon of John Cagnola, at Collinsville, Friday, taking $50. The woman said she waited in an automobile, not knowing a robbery was in progress.

The three were arrested two hours after the robbery, when they drew up at the Plaza Hotel in an automobile. Authorities at Peoria, Ill., had notified the East St. Louis police that the O'Brien brothers are suspected of 20 or more robberies there. This report had been received before that of the holdup of the saloon at Collinsville. David O'Brien, the police say, has admitted holding up a grocery at 2447 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, last Tuesday noon.

PRIZES AWARDED FOR THUMB-BOX EXHIBIT

Thirteen, Besides Five Honorable Mentions Given by Judges of Display at Art Museum.

Awards in the twelfth annual Thumb-box Exhibition of works by St. Louis artists, on view in five galleries of the City Art Museum, were announced yesterday afternoon at an informal reception in the galleries. Thirteen prizes and five honorable mentions were bestowed by the jury of awards.

First prizes of $50 each, for groups, were awarded to E. Oscar Thalinger for paintings in oil, Mildred Bailey Carpenter for water colors, Gustav F. Goetsch for etchings, Caroline Risque for sculpture and Eugene Geissler for handicraft.

Second prizes of $25 each for groups went to Kathryn E. Cherry for oil paintings, Hazel Weedel Goetch for water colors, Cornelia Maury for etchings, Nancy Coonsman Hahn for sculpture and Ruth L. Barry for handicraft.

Prof. Edmund H. Wuerpel received the Elizabeth Robinson prize, $25, for his painting "The Land of Sky and Water"; Miss Mary McColl the Morris Skrainka prize, $25, for her picture of artists sketching. Tom P. Barnett and Thomas Blow divided the $50 Thumb-box sketch prize.

Thalinger's first-prize group of six paintings is of Missouri landscapes. Mrs. Goetsch's water colors are New England landscapes. Miss Risque displays a sculptured head and the figure of "My Little Nymph." Prof. Wuerpel's work has the dreaming quality of reflective, decorative art.

SUPPOSED BURGLAR PROVES TO BE FRIEND OF FAMILY

Woman Found Sleeping on Porch; Cannot Explain Presence There.

It wasn't a burglar that awoke the family of Frank Giannino, 5335 Bischoff avenue, early yesterday, but a friend, Mrs. Ethel Marorgilli, 30 years old, of 2707 South Fifty-ninth street. Under the mistaken apprehension that a burglar was present, the family sent for policemen, and the latter found Mrs. Marorgilli sound asleep, fully clothed, on the Giannino front porch, with Giannino's loaded revolver beside her.

She could not explain her presence there, unless she had walked in her sleep from her home, 10 blocks away. She has been a frequent visitor there. Giannino said he missed the revolver last Thursday. Mrs. Marorgilli was taken home by her husband.

Mrs. Lena Mayers Will Filed.

The will of Mrs. Lena Mayer, 5595 Waterman avenue, who died Oct. 30, was filed yesterday. She left $5000 in trust for the benefit of her son Sigmund; $2000 to her son, Julius Mayer, of New Orleans, and $5000 each to Edward Wise Jr., and Erna Bottigheimer, her grandchildren. The residue, the value of which was not stated, goes to Mrs. Sol Bottigheimer of Cincinnati, Mrs. Edward Wise of the Waterman avenue address, Miss Evelyn Mayer and Leo Mayer, her daughters and son, but Miss Mayer's share is left in trust.

SAYS LONGWORTH WILL RACE SMITH IN 1928

Senator Edwards Thinks New York Governor Will Win on Wet Issue.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6. — Declaring that prohibition would be an outstanding issue in 1928, Senator Edwards (Dem.) of New Jersey today picked Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York and Speaker Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, as the Democratic and Republican presidential candidates, and he picked Smith to win. President Coolidge will have to give way to a "more liberal-minded candidate," Edwards said.

Analyzing the results of Tuesday's election as a wet Democrat, Edwards made these observations:

"The right arm of Mr. Coolidge was cut off because Massachusetts refused to point the way to either prohibition reform or prohibition enforcement. In New York a most able and fit legislator (Senator Wadsworth) was sacrificed on the altar of prohibition because he talked wet to his constituents and wrote dry in his platform. In Kentucky a personally wet, politically dry senatorial candidate (Ernst) was defeated by a bone-dry candidate (Barkley) from a state fairly dripping with moonshine and illisit liquors."

Pennsylvania—"A candidate besmirched with primary scandal and corruption, had the courage, at least, to stand 100 per cent on a wet platform, and was elected."

Maryland—"An opportunist wet was defeated by a consistent, unafraid wet."

New York, Illinois, Wisconsin, Nevada and Montana—"By majorities of from 4 to 1, to 2 to 1, said Volsteadism was a failure."

"One fourth of the people of the United States," said Edwards, "said 'No' to the cry of Wheelerism and Volsteadism, when their names were counted."

ENGINEER MISSING 2 YEARS FOUND IN DAZED CONDITION

Recognizes Wife; Police at Peoria (Ill.) Think Him Victim of Slugging.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 6.—Alvin Wilson, locomotive engineer of Urbana, who disappeared nearly two years ago, after taking a Peoria & Eastern Railroad train into Peoria and who was found in Peoria Tuesday, dazed, recognized his wife when she appeared before him this afternoon. Mrs. Wilson moved to Missoula, Mont., after a nationwide search for the missing engineer failed to find him.

Wilson will be placed in a sanitarium for treatment. He lost nearly 100 pounds during the two years. Police believe Wilson was slugged on the day of his disappearance and that he has been wandering about dazed, since that time.

Zinc Ore Drops to $47, Lead to $100

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., Nov. 6.—Ore prices in the tri-state zinc and lead district took the slight slump that was indicated, but did not come about a week ago. Zinc ore dropped $1 a ton to $47, and lead ore slumped $2.50 to an even $100 basis. There is an increasing amount of talk about going to a five-day week basis in the district, though if anything of the sort is done it will be individual and not complete. It is considered a practical method of holding down production to such a point as will not deleteriously affect ore prices. Shipments were good and the week's turn-in was worth $1,250,000.

NO WATER DEEP IN MINE WHERE 51 MEN WERE KILLED

Jury Chosen for Inquest in Ispheming, (Mich.) Disaster, But No Time Is Set.

By the Associated Press.

ISHPEMING, Mich., Nov. 6.—Penetrating 420 feet down the wrecked shaft of the Barnes-Hecker mine, workmen this afternoon encoutered conditions which indicated that little, if any, water would be found below the first level on which 13 of the 51 men killed in Wednesday's disaster, are believed to have perished. The shaft probably is filled with sand nearly to the first level, 600 feet below the surface.

Workers could see a huge mass of timbers, criss-crossed in the shaft like a log jam, about 40 feet thick. Three men managed to climb through 20 feet of the jam and reported that there was no indication of water below.

Coroner Blewett announced that he had selected a jury for an inquest into the mine disaster, but said no time had been set for the inquest. A plan for permanently rehabilitating families of the 51 men who lost their lives in the Barnes-Hecker tragedy is being worked out by officers of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., owners of the mine.

Work of recovering bodies will be continued, night and day. No one could estimate just when more bodies would be reached.

FORECLOSURE SUITS ROUT WILLIAMSON BOOTLEGGERS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., Nov. 6.—Although the new officials of Williamson County do not take office until the first Monday in December, it is believed that the bootleg war is over. Foreclosure suits were filed yesterday against four of the larger bootleg places by a Marion lumber dealer who furnished the lumber for the buildings. An effort to find several of the men who have been operating stands throughout the county disclosed that they were "out of the county" and the places were dark.

Charley Birger's Shady Rest, the largest place in the county, was not named in the foreclosure suits, but Birger has had practically no business since the fight between his gang and the Sheltons started.

CHESS TOURNAMENT BY CABLE

London Team Defeats Chicagoans In First Match of Kind.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Six London chess masters were apparent victors over a team of Chicago experts at the close of play in the first inter-city chess tournament ever held by cable last night. The Londoners had a definite score of 1½ games to their Chicago challengers' half when time expired at 6 p. m. The Chicago team sat in the Hamilton Club, the Londoners in the Spring Garden Galleries, London, and the moves were cabled back and forth.

The conditions of awarding the cup in this cable play are such that the cup may be challenged for annually by any American or British city, with final possession to rest with the winner of three consecutive matches. The cup is a solid silver vase in the form of a chess castle. It was donated by Samuel Insull, public utilities magnate. The rapidity of the play was made possible by use of a new code invented by M. S. Kuhns of Chicago, chairman of the chess committee of the Hamilton Club. The players today were: Chicago—Edward Lasker, Samuel D. Factor, L. J. Isaacs, H. Hahlbohm, Charles W. Phillips and Orrin Frink; London—R. P. Mitchell, E. G. Sergeant, C. Buerger, W. Winter, B. E. Siegheim and M. E. Goldstein.

ROYAL NEWLYWEDS ON WAY TO BRUSSELS

Belgian Capital Prepares Welcome for Crown Prince Leopold and Bride.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 6.—The Belgian capital today was putting the finishing touches on preparations to welcome the newly wed Crown Prince Leopold and his bride, Princess Astrid of Sweden, who are on their way here from Stockholm for a church wedding Wednesday.

A wireless message this afternoon from the steamer Marie Jose reported that the Belgian royal family, including Prince Leopold, was enjoying the voyage homeward. Princess Astrid, who is traveling to Belgium with her parents, left Malmoe yesterday aboard the Swedish cruiser Fylgia.

The church wedding, which will follow the civil ceremony performed in Stockholm last Thursday, will be brief. According to Le Soir, this is due to the fact that it will be a mixed marriage, Leopold being a Roman Catholic and Princess Astrid a Lutheran. There will be no celebration of mass with a formal benediction afterward. Instead, the pair merely will exchange the usual marriage vows, after which there will be a brief benediction.

Wedding presents continue to arrive at the royal palace. The Maharajah Kapurthala sent a splendidly chiseled solid silver tea service. The Rotary clubs of Belgium have decided to present a bronze statue symbolizing Rotary international. The national wedding fund has reached 600,000 francs.

ST. LOUIS JEWS END CAMPAIGN TONIGHT

Committees to Make Reports on Effort to Get $500,000 for European Relief.

The campaign among St. Louis Jews for $500,000 as part of the $25,000,000 being raised in this country by the United Jewish Campaign for the benefit of suffering Jews of Europe will be closed with a meeting of workers and others interested at the Columbian Club at 8 o'clock tonight. Standing of the fund will be announced then. A week ago somewhat more than half of the local quota had been raised. Workers here have been stimulated by the following telegram from David A. Brown of Detroit, national chairman of the campaign:

"Requirements for our work for balance of the year $3,000,000. Only $100,000 in treasury. I said to bankers on Distribution Committee, 'Go and spend your money; make all your plans. You needn't worry about the Jews of America. They will come through with $3,000,000 before Dec. 31.' Am I right, Jewish men and women of St. Louis?"

Teams of solicitors for the fund have been competing closely. So far the group headed by Irvin Bettmann, Mrs. Charles M. Rice, Ira L. Bretzfelder and Mrs. Morton J. May is in the lead, with subscriptions for $55,252.

Second is the team of Edward G. Platt, Mrs. Sydney Shoenberg, Samuel Meyer and Mrs. Helen Glaser-Fox, with $49,017. Third is that of Isidore Mathen, Mrs. M. Golland, Mrs. Edwin B. Meissner, Abraham Tober, Mrs. A. Hertzman and Mrs. Julius Glaser, with $39,926.

2500 Cotton Pickers Needed.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 6.—More than 2500 cotton pickers are needed in Southeast Missouri, Roy B. Hinkle, State Labor Commissioner, said today. The communities of Hayti and Kennett need 1000 pickers each; New Madrid, 400, and Sikeston, 200.

Child Gets Sick, Cross, Feverish if Constipated
Look at tongue! Then give fruity laxative for stomach, bowels
"California Fig Syrup" can't harm children and they love it
Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.
When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.
Nothing equals "California Fig Syrup" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious, "fruity laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.
Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by "The California Fig Syrup Company."

M'ADOO ASSAILS HIS SUMMONS IN FUND INQUIRY

Politicians Are Making Joke Out of Government and the Senate, He Says on Stand.

QUESTIONED ON ARIZONA ELECTION

Asserts He Knows of No Money Having Been Sent From California to That State, as Charged.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 6.—William Gibbs McAdoo, indignant at being called as a witness here today before Senator William H. King, appointed to investigate Arizona campaign funds, declared on the stand that "it is making a joke out of the Government and Senate when any politician can bring reputable persons before the Senate on grounds such as these."

McAdoo, called as the first of seven witnesses subpenaed to testify at the hearing adjourned here from Phoenix, Ariz., replying to questions by Senator King, testified he had no knowledge directly or indirectly of any money having been sent from California to influence the recent election in Arizona.

Senator Not at Hearing.

Ralph H. Cameron, defeated Republican candidate for re-election for the Senate, has charged that California money was sent to Arizona to defeat him. Cameron was not present at the hearing.

Thomas J. Croff, counsel for Cameron, asked the former Secretary of the Treasury if he had not stated in a speech recently at Long Beach, Cal., that about $1,600,000 had been raised for the purpose of educating Arizona regarding the Colorado River and other industrial developments and the political situation in that State.

"I made no such statement," McAdoo replied. "It is purely imagination. I never thought of such a thing."

McAdoo, asked by Senator King if he wished to make a statement, demanded that Cameron be brought before the hearing and compelled to state why he had "hauled up a reputable citizen" to testify in the matter.

"It is an absolutely indefensible thing in which he (Cameron) knew I had no connection. I want to cross-examine him and find out on what grounds I was subpenaed."

Senator King said there was no implication that McAdoo had been connected with any fund in Arizona.

Five other witnesses professed utter ignorance of the "flood of gold" which Cameron charged was poured into that state to defeat him. They included Harry Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times; A. H. Ballard, vice-president of the Southern California Edison Co.; William B. Matthews, counsel for the Los Angeles water & power department, and Mark Rose, director of the Imperial Valley Irrigation district.

Chandler's testimony centered about a series of articles printed by the Los Angeles Times under the "by line" of Will Irwin, who is expected to testify next week. The publisher said the articles were offered by the Northern American Newspaper Alliance and that after deleting portions and checking the remainder, he passed them for publication.

TRUTHFUL SEAMAN SAYS A BEE-STORM HIT LINER AT SEA

Swarm Crippled Radio and One Sailor, Declares Skipper of the President Adams.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—A storm of bees threatened the comfort, if not the safety, of the crew of the Dollar Liner President Adams on her recent trip through the Mediterranean. Capt. W. A. Ross, a veracious mariner, has the proper entries in his log to substantiate every detail, and the ship's hospital record shows that Seaman Mike McGraw, spent three days convalescing from duty "repelling boarders."

"It was a calm afternoon," reports the captain, "when a point or so off the beam I saw a black spot. Thinking we were in for a hurricane, I ordered everything battened. The spot spread and a buzz like several airplane motors was perceptible. Through my glasses, I could see the air teeming with bees."

The log describes the impact of the bee-storm. The Queen bee lit on the radio aerial with a million of her retainers and the equipment promptly collapsed, preventing an S O S call had one been necessary. Seaman McGraw had had some dealings with bees, so he was sent aloft with an oil smudge to clear the wires. Mike was three days under doctor's care. It's all in the record.

Captain Ross did not capture any of the bees for evidence.

$300,000 Fire at Columbus, O.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 6.—Fire, which for a time threatened to destroy the entire plant of the Teachout Sash & Door Co., early today was confined to the company warehouse, causing a loss estimated at $300,000. One fireman was injured. Origin of the fire is not known.

CALLES MOVES TO MAKE CHURCH LAW MORE SEVERE

Mexican President Presents Bill to Congress to Make Impossible Evasions of Present Regulations.

RIGIDITY INCREASED IN MANY DETAILS

Laymen Who Perform Any Functions of Priests or Ministers Would Be Subject to Its Provisions.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 6.—Mexico's religious regulations, which already have resulted in grave controversy between the Government and the Roman Catholic Church, are made considerably more drastic in a new bill which President Calles today submitted to Congress.

In a message accompanying the bill, the President said that its purpose was to seal every loophole making possible evasions in the present regulations and to prepare the way for complete and absolute enforcement of the religious clauses of the constitution.

The new bill re-enacts all the restrictions of the regulations which caused the Catholic Episcopate to order its priests to suspend church services and resulted in an economic boycott by the Catholic laity. The new provisions increases their rigidity in numerous details.

Small Concession to Church.

The only point in which the new bill lightens the present restrictions is in a clause permitting non-Spanish speaking foreign colonies to have priests or ministers for their churches for a period of six years. This concession is made conditional on the agreement that such foreign ministers will teach and prepare native Mexicans to take over their pulpits at the end of the six-year period when they must withdraw. At present no foreign ministers are functioning in any churches in Mexico, being forbidden to do so under the constitution.

In another section, however, the new bill places in the same category as ministers all laymen who represent religious denominations and organizations or perform any of the functions of priests and ministers. This would prevent laymen conducting church services, which has been the custom at Christ Church, the Episcopal Cathedral in Mexico City. Laymen have been functioning there since the Rev. Dobson Peacock, a British subject, but under the jurisdiction of the American Episcopal Church, signed an agreement that he would cease officiating if the Mexican Government would withdraw an order for his deportation as a foreign clergyman.

The limitations upon religious newspapers and periodicals of all kind are made more severe and the penalties for their infringement are made heavier, fines and prison terms being provided for.

Priests Required to Register.

The new bill requires priests to register with the municipal authorities before they can perform any religious ceremonies or services at all, thus preventing them from conducting masses in private homes while the church services are suspended by the Episcopate. The Episcopate has refused to allow the priests to register because they feel that the Government's terms of registration are an acceptance of the Mexican Government, instead of the Pope as the supreme head of the church in Mexico.

The bill specifies that no religious marriage ceremony can be performed by any priest or minister until after a civil marriage has been gone through. Priests also are required to report every marriage they perform to the civil authorities within five days.

Article five of the bill states that the law does not recognize the personality of any religious group, but will deal only with priests and ministers directly or with members of congregations connected with the services. Ministers and priests refusing to obey this law and claiming that orders must be given them by their established hierarchial authorities will be punished.

Other clauses make more stringent the regulations concerning the ownership of property by priests, forbidding them publicity or privately to criticise in any way the Mexican constitution or the acts of the Government and providing for complete inventories of church property.

Maryland Dry Chief Quits.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Edmund Budnitz, prohibition administrator for Maryland, today submitted his resignation—effective not later than Dec. 14—to Assistant Secretary Andrews. H. H. White, former administrator over Texas and Oklahoma it is thought will get the office. White was called to Washington last week for an unnamed assignment.

BAPTISTS ASSAIL RUMANIA

World Alliance to Protest Against Religious Intolerance There.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—A million Baptists will protest to the League of Nations against religious intolerance in Rumania, Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president of the Baptist World Alliance, said today on his return from Europe.

The executive council of the Baptist World Alliance, he said, was preparing a petition to this effect to be circulated throughout the world. Mullins declared Rumania to be the "darkest spot on the continent" and "ten times worse than Russia in the matter of religious liberty."

GIRL OF YESTERDAY

By William Auerbach-Levy, American Painter-Etcher

TEARING THE TINSEL FROM G. WASHINGTON

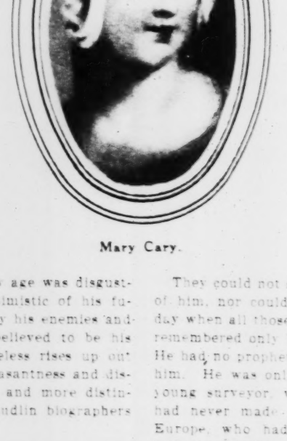
Rupert Hughes Writes a Biography Proving That the Father of His Country Was a Human Being Heir to the Faults and Frailties of Men

THE Father of his Country was a swell from his sixteenth year on. He consorted with English Lords, rode to hounds, learned to love foppery and all the elegancies, became a past master of dancing, of gambling, polite drinking and exquisite flirtation. He shone in everything but the successful making of love.

The above paragraph comes out of "George Washington, the Human Being and the Hero," a highly interesting and engaging biography written by Rupert Hughes, the novelist, and recently published by William Morrow & Company.

Last January, at a dinner in Washington, Hughes made a speech in which he declared that George Washington was "profane, irreligious and pleasure loving." He was set upon from far and wide. So the novelist took upon himself a self-appointed task, to instruct the people that the Father of His Country was a human being, and a great one. That the number of histories already written about the Virginia aristocrat is legion made no difference to Mr. Hughes. Rather, their very number in the past caused the writing of this one, for the author explains that almost without exception they have been compiled with the object of making Washington a cold, impassive statue designed as an example for Sunday school classes and altogether lacking any of the charm or requisites of a pulsing human being.

Besides dispelling numerous myths about the statuesque Washington of the pawing white horse, Hughes, through research, has uncovered and, for the first time, circulated tales and incidents about the First President which, while destroying the tinsel and silk and fabrication, substitute the blood and breath of a man who was able to err, and often did; who at an early age was disgusted with himself and pessimistic of his future, who was maligned by his enemies and sometimes by those he believed to be his friends, but who nevertheless rises up out of all this welter of unpleasantness and disappointment as a greater and more distinguished man than his maudlin biographers have ever made him.



Mary Cary.

THE above-mentioned volume discusses the first 30 years of Washington's life, a period formative and absorbing. The following is from Mr. Hughes' biography:

No youth of such after fame ever took his puppy loves more seriously, or was more inconstant or more unlucky than George Washington. They drove him as far as the writing of poetry, which was, if possible, worse even than the verse of Abraham Lincoln.

His own confessions are the authority for them. And the list of his hapless loves is long.

It is from these letters that we learn of the girl concealed, perhaps forever, under the haunting phrase, "the Lowland Beauty." Nobody knows who she was, though "half a dozen Virginia families still claim that their ancestress was the Lowland Beauty." And none of them can prove it.

He had evidently made ardent love to the anonymous girl and been sharply rebuffed, as he was by another girl who would not on him "pity take." But it was always hard for George to give up anything that was dear to him, and he was a glutton for defeat.

He was still smarting with the loss of the Lowland Beauty and the humiliation which must have been conspicuously well known to his friends, and still tingling with desire for her conquest, when he went up into Fairfax County to be with his brother, Lawrence, and the Fairfaxes at Belvoir. Here he was beguiled but not at first consoled by Mary Cary. He had to put his highly important emotions on paper, and when his delighted pen happened on a phrase that sounded grandiloquent, he felt it too good to use once and throw it away, so he repeated it.

By some whim of good luck we have his own copies of three letters he wrote at this time, misspelled, awkward, but exceedingly human and juvenile. There was a certain pomposity in his phraseology, but it was the laughable, lovable monkey-pomposity of a young ape, deliciously but hopelessly perplexed and too headlong for punctuation.

LUCY GRYMES is one of the candidates for the glory of being the scornful Lowland Beauty and the target of his poems. She lived in Richmond County on the estate called Morattico. She threw away the chance to marry the Father of his Country and married Henry Lee of Stratford.

A still more likely Lowland Beauty was the girl who rejoiced in the pretty name of Betsy Fauntleroy. We know that she rejected Washington at least once, for he says so himself, and she was a Lowland beauty.

Betsy was beautiful, of course, and her hand much sought in marriage. But she was coquettish and kept a number of swains in suspense. She kept Washington hoping for three years after she rejected him. She must have been hard to forget.

But if Betsy were fickle, so was Washington, for even while he was pouring out his grief for the Lowland Beauty his versatile heart is accused of falling deeper and deeper in love with Mary Cary, whom he had spoken of as "the very agreeable young lady lives in the same house."

George's heart had a busy youth. All of these flames had leapt and lapsed and he was not yet 20. The strange thing to us, seeing him in the clouds of glory, is that none of these women would even be engaged to him or promise to wait until he grew up and won a competence. They must have laughed at him. Why?

They could not see what time would make of him, nor could he have dreamed of the day when all those delicious belles would be remembered only because they scorned him. He had no prophetic second sight to console him. He was only an overgrown lout of a young surveyor, who could not spell, who had never made the Grand Tour through Europe, who had never been sent "back home" to study, who had no great prospects and no immediate fascination.

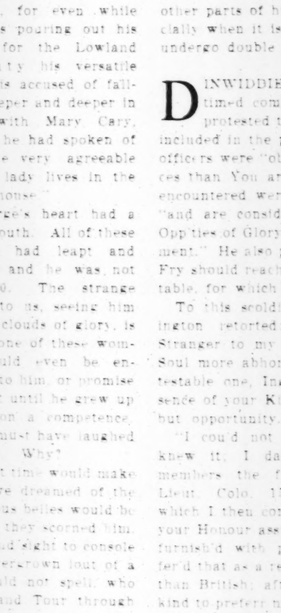
When Washington was 21 he was sent by Governor Dinwiddie of Virginia with a message to the French, telling them they were encroaching on British territory. But the French thought otherwise. Troops were then raised by the Virginians. Dinwiddie put Washington in charge of them and sent him off toward the Ohio.

If Washington ever told his father he could not tell a lie, he found the acquired ability useful in his new life. He had already vied with the French in deception and now he used his skill to keep his own men quiet. Having no knowledge of where money, food or clothing could come from, he says:

"I have soothd and quieted them as much as possible under pretense of receiving your Honour's instructions in this particular."

But supplies were hard to get forward.

There were other reasons for despondency. His officers, wet, weary and lost in morasses and swamps, were receiving neither rum nor money. He protested to Dinwiddie, who was equally unable to wring funds out of the assembly. Washington's letters reveal a strange and persistent quality in his character, an odd mingling of high personal pride and meek devotion to duty, as to money, a determination to work for nothing, rather than take poor wages or take less than the King's officers received.



Mary Washington.

His officers had grown mutinous and refused to accept the pay they did not receive, especially as the usual liquor and table allowances were denied them. They demanded that other officers be sent to replace them, and declared that nothing kept them at their posts but the danger about them. They were grateful to Dinwiddie for their commissions, but disgusted with the committee.

Washington wrote that he was in sympathy with his officers, and yet, though he found "so many clogs upon the expedition" that he quite despaired of success, he humbly begged to be continued in his post, "but by no means on my present pay."

"Let me serve voluntarily, then I will, with the greatest pleasure in life, devote my services to the expedition without any other reward than the satisfaction of serving my country; but to be slaving dangerously for the shadow of pay, 'throug' woods, rocks, mountains—I would rather prefer the great toll of the daily laborer, and die for a maintenance, . . . than serve upon such ignoble terms; for I really do not see why the lives of his Majesty's subjects in Virginia should be of less value, than those in other parts of his American domains, especially when it is well known, that we must undergo double their hardships."

DINWIDDIE answered that his "ill-timed complaints" were unreasonable. I protested that wine and beer were not included in the pay; explained that English officers were "obliged to many more Expences than You are," and that the hardships encountered were usual to a military life, "and are consider'd by Soldiers rather as Opp'ties of Glory than objects of discouragement." He also promised that when Colonel Fry should reach them they could eat at his table, for which £100 a year was provided.

To this scolding, spanking letter, Washington retorted: "Nothing is a greater Stranger to my Breast, or a Sin that my Soul more abhors, than that black and detestable one, Ingratitude. I retain a true sence of your Kindnesses and want nothing but opportunity.

"I could not object to pay before I knew it. I dare say your Honour remembers the first Estimation allow'd a Lieut. Colo. 15s. and Majr 12s. 6d. which I then complain'd very much of, till your Honour assur'd me that we were to be furnish'd with proper necessary, and offer'd that as a reason why the pay was Less than British; after this, when you were so kind to prefer me to the Com'd I now have, and at the same time acquainted me that I was to have but 12s. 6d. This, with some other Reasons, induced me to acquaint Colo. Fairfax with my intention of Resigning, which he must well remember, as it happ'd at Belhaven, and was there that he dissuaded me from it and promised to represent the trifling pay to your Honour, who would endeavor (as I at the same time told him that the Speaker thought the Officers pay too small) to have it enlarg'd.

"As to the Numbers that applied for Commissions, and to whom we were prefer'd, I believe, had those Gentlemen been as knowing of this Country, and as Sensible of the difficulties that would attend a Campaign here, as I then was, I conceive your Honour w'd not have been so troublesomely solicited as you were; yet I do not offer this as a reason for quitting the Service, for my own part I can answer, I have a Constitution hardy enough to encounter and undergo the most severe tryals, and I flatter myself, resolution to Face what any Man dare, as shall be prov'd when it comes to the Test, which I believe will be on the Borders of

"There is nothing Sir, (I believe) more certain than that the Officers on the Canada Expedition had British pay allow'd, whilst they were in the Service . . . as this can't be allow'd, suffer me to serve Volunteer, which I assure you will be the next reward to British pay, for as my Services so far as I have knowledge, will equal those of the best Officer, I make it a point of Honr (not') to serve for less and accept a medium.

"Nevertheless, I have communicated your Honour's Sentiments to them, and as far as I could put on the Hipocrite, set forth the advantages that may accrue, and advised them to accept the Terms, as a refusal might reflect dishonour on their character, leaving it to the world to assign what reasons they please for quitting the Service. . . . They have promised to consider of it, and give your Honour an answer.

George Washington as Colonel of the Virginia militia. Painted by C. W. Peale at Mount Vernon, 1772.

"I WAS not ignorant of the allowe which Colo. Fry has for his Table, but being a dependt there myself, deprives me of the pleasure of inviting an Officer or Friend which to me w'd be more agreeable than the Nick Nacks I shall meet with there.

"And here I cannot forbear answering one thing more in your Honour's Letter on this head, which (too) is more fully expressd in a paragraph of Colo. Fairfax's to me, as follows: 'If on the British Establishment Officers are allow'd more Pay, the Regimentals they are oblig'd annually to furnish, their necessary Table and other Incidents being consider'd, little or no savings will be their Portion.'

"If they don't save much, they have the enjoyment of their Pay, which we neither have in one sense nor the other. We are debarr'd the pleasure of good Living, which, Sir, I daresay, with me you will concur, to one who has always been used to it, must go somewhat hard; to be confin'd to a little salt provision and water, and do duty, hard, laborious duty, that is almost inconsistent with that of a Soldier, and yet, the same Reductions as if we were allow'd luxuriously.

"My Pay, according to the British Establish't and common exchange, is near 22s. p'r Day, in the Rim of that, ye Committee (for I can't, in ye least, imagine y'r Hr had any h'd in it) has provided (12s. 6d.) so long as ye Service requires me, whereas one-half of ye other is ascertain'd to British Officers forever. Now, if we sh'd be fortunate enough to drive the French from Ohio—as far as your Honour w'd please have them sent to—in any short time, our Pay will not be sufficient to discharge our first expences.

"The motives that lead me here were pure and noble. I had no view of acquisition but that of Honour, by serving faithfully my King and Country."

This is not the Washington that is usually pictured. But there he had to sit in his tent, and spend his precious hours writing about his own and his officers' money, while the French closed in upon him.

Washington's expedition was over. He had been defeated. If ever a man had need of woman's kindness, Washington needed it now. He was disgusted with the world of men. He had finished with "the Art Military." Being only 22, it was perhaps natural that he should turn for comfort to an older woman. He had had enough of proposing to 14-year old chits.

It is no longer questionable that at this time Washington began to yield his heart to the love of his life, who was the wife of his best friend—unless she herself had been his best friend.

The authority is Washington himself, who heaps up the evidence in many documents.

When the infatuation overcame him, how far it carried him, there is no knowing. There is no proof, and no reason to assume, that it went beyond wretched courtship on his part, and teasing, yet tyrannical evasion on hers. But that it went that far it is mere obstinacy to deny.

Sarah Cary, in December, 1748, married George William Fairfax, to whom Washington owed much of his tuition and opportunity as a surveyor, and at whose father's house, Belvoir, Washington made a long visit during his recovery from his rejection by the Lowland Beauty. Sally Cary was born in 1730, two years before George. She was five years younger than her husband.

For a time, according to a disputed story, Sally's younger sister, Mary, consoled Washington so well that he tried to marry her, but lost her to Edward Ambler, as he lost his other loves to other men. He lost Sally in advance of his love.

His endeavors in the field of war were no luckier. He was not even lucky at cards. His military reverses and disappointments kept him in such a frenzy as only those can realize who read his letters and his incessant threats to resign. It was inevitable that an old friend like Sally Fairfax should try to cheer him and persuade him that he was not the hopeless failure that he must have begun to think himself. But the consolation of jilted bachelors and heart-broken heroes is a most perilous charity for married women.

SALLY FAIRFAX cannot be ignored in Washington's life story. She ought not to be. She deserves the honor of having a profound influence on the formation of his character. She stirred his heart more deeply than any other woman ever did. It was the tragedy of all his tragedies that in a youth, crowded with brave deeds that came to naught, and desperate endeavors that brought only defeat, his wandering heart should finally have settled upon the woman who had been his familiar counselor for years, and whom he could not make his own because she belonged to his best friend; and would not, or could not, give her life to him.

For a man of his deep earnestness and high integrity this discovery could only have been terrifying and bewildering. Whatever her heart may have felt for him, there was no temptation to a breach with her husband and a union with Washington. Divorce was almost undreamed-of then, more unimaginable a solution than an airship as an escape from a trap. Sally doubtless tried to prevent her tremendous lover from making a knave of himself or an outcast of her.

There is no knowledge of just what Sally said or did or thought or wrote. But we know that Washington was in an alternation of joy and torment. His letters reveal the torment, and in the last years of his existence he wrote to her that the happiest moments of his life had been spent with her. And he underscored it heavily with an ancient fervor.

SALLY FAIRFAX was a woman of education at a time when learning was available in a high degree to women. Few made the best of their opportunity, but those few shone.

It was George William Fairfax who gave Washington his first opportunity as a surveyor, and they went together into the unknown lands of the Shenandoah Valley. After that, when George visited Belvoir, he found Sally Fairfax installed there.

At that time she was the great personage and he the unlicked cub. He came of a good line, but he was little schooled except in roughing it, and he was earning his own living by running off boundary lines in all weathers and in wild lands.

Evidently, she saw in him something magnificent that could be marred or made. Perhaps she tried to save him from being a drunken roysterer and blustering soldier such as too many men were in that astonishing mixture of savagery and baronial luxury.

He must have seen in her the value of acquaintance with the fashions not only in clothes but in thought and speech as well. She may have read to him from books. In one of his letters he speaks of his longing to play Juba to her Marcia. Juba was the hero and Marcia the heroine of Addison's "Cato," the tragedy that had such success following its production in London in 1713 that it was considered better than any of Shakespeare's. It was performed at William and Mary in 1736 "by the Young Gentlemen of the College." After 1750 there were regular engagements of professional actors at Williamsburg.

Washington may have seen a performance of Cato there, for he never missed going to the theater when he had the chance.

She probably made fun of George Washington's ludicrous inability to keep a sweetheart from marrying another man. She may have flirted him out of the doldrums now and then. What is more appealing to a woman than a broken-spirited, abused, misjudged and defeated male? With a good and tender-hearted woman, a man is at his best when he is at his worst.

EVENTUALLY, Sally must have fallen pretty deeply into the romance, unless his letters are not to be believed. She may have come to be afraid of him. He could fly into appalling rages and sweep all before him. She may have taught him some of that discretion and self-control that afterwards rarely failed to hold his passions in leash.

In any case, they dwelt together, in close communion. They were related vaguely by marriage.

Since George Washington wrote himself down a tormented devotee of Mrs. Fairfax, let a better man than Washington destroy his confessions. The rhapsody of the dance till dawn never wearied him. The exhilarant frenzies of the fox hunt and the horse race kept him alert to his last years.

Washington did an amazing number of things amazingly well, but he never even tried to be a Puritan. There was probably no name he would have resented more.

Just when George fell in love with Mrs. Fairfax there is no telling.

Just about this time Washington lost another sweetheart, Mary Philipse, whom he had met on a trip to New York. This lady jilted Washington and married an English Army Captain.

To the new wounds of Washington's disprized love was added the hot pepper of a crushing humiliation in politics. Even the voters jilted him.

He had long cherished an ambition to enter the House of Burgesses. He stood

"Affectation is the first thing that will be spotted over the radio," he says in his recently published book, "You're On The Air," and he sagely adds, "It is the last thing the radio audience will stand."

McNamee is talking over KSD. He is asking his audience to send its out-moded radio sets to the Southwest Radio Show, that the officials may distribute them among invalids—"shut-ins"—the blind, the bedridden who thus can keep in touch with an outside world. Before the microphone he is perfectly at ease. One has the conviction, as the voice rolls out through the loud speaker, that he is giving of himself the best. It is a curiously resonant, vibrant voice, with a clear, crisp, perfect diction. Manifestly, the talk is impromptu. There has been a prefatory reference to "the late unpleasantness" of the world series, which McNamee broadcast—like a loyal New York fan. In the spontaneous humor one gets a glimpse at the working of an alert, quick-thinking mind.

"You will be remembered," he says, telling of the happiness the radio will bring to shut-ins, "in their prayers." And his left hand strikes emphatically his right, as he drives home that statement to the audience that is invisible.

From his pose before the microphone you know that McNamee is at home. He falls into an attitude of ease, from which only his enthusiasm arouses him. A man rather short in stature—say 5 feet 8. His body rather chubby, though well made. His face long and astonishingly thin, its bony structure padded not at all. Rather an insignificant man, you would say, if you did not hear that vibrant voice.

His voice and his sincerity have made Graham McNamee town crier to the world. His is the job of telling 20,000,000 people what's going on. He is the first radio reporter. "Hear ye! Hear ye!" cried the old town crier to his bell's accompaniment, and to those within the sound of his voice he retailed matters of common report. McNamee's job is different. For his audience of 20,000,000 he makes what becomes common report. He tells what is happening as it is happening. He is not a clearing house for information. He is information's source.

"ROGERS HORNSBY is up. The third man up in the first half of the first inning." It is McNamee reporting the 1926 world series now. "The crowd is giving him a glorious reception. Hornsby is a great batsman, but he has a peculiar style. He stands almost outside the box. Here comes a curve ball that goes over as a strike. Right over the middle of the pan. Now a fast ball, too close to the batter. Hornsby hits the next one . . . a long hit; yes, a two-base hit to right field. Ruth recovers the ball and throws it to second, but doesn't get Hornsby. This is Hornsby's first hit in the series.

He is the onlooker reporter. Hot off the bat comes his news. The world crier doesn't wait like the town crier waited of old, to have somebody bring the facts to him. He gets them for himself—and for you.

The essential of art is emotion, and Graham McNamee has made of broadcasting an art. He feels the game as it is played. And an intense personality carries that emotion, through the medium of McNamee's voice, to the waiting 20,000,000.

And yet, when you see the man, at first, you can't believe he has a personality. He is naturally modest and unassuming. But the first word that will occur should you try to classify the man you have just met is "insignificant." He might be a salesman or a clerk. He talks the language of the street. By his broad speech you know him for a Middle - Westerner, for all that now his home is in New York. He chatters about nothing in particular and "kids" a lot. But in three minutes the personality has pierced that veil of inconsequentialities. It is a personality at once curiously naive and shrewd. But altogether sincere. You are proud to think of McNamee as friend.

"You're on the air." McNamee broadcasting in the studio.

His photographs belie the man. They give no inkling of the responsive animation of his face. They disclose merely a shell that isn't McNamee at all. The mobile sensitivity of his face you cannot see in them.

His hair is thinning, as hair may do at 37. Light brown, with glints of gold, it recedes from an already high forehead. Penthouse brows overhang the luminous, hazel eyes, with long and dreamy lashes such as a girl might envy. The nose is long and rounded at the tip. The ears, small and lobeless, are set well down upon the head. The upper lip is long, the lower heavy and with a slightly sensual fullness. He has a rounded and not prominent chin. The face is so thin, its bones so prominent, it seems scarcely fitted to the rather chubby body of the man.

Inconspicuous are his clothes. Well made. One gathers from his attire that McNamee gives thought to it. A gray suit. A shirt with collar, of a small blue check. A tie of gray, with diagonal stripes of gold. His hands are well-kept, carefully manicured, and have the short and rounded fingers of a musician.

And, indeed, it was a musician Graham McNamee wanted to be—and is. He has, in fact, two careers, running concurrently. He is at once the broadcaster, with an audience of 20,000,000, and a concert artist, who, last year, had above 60 recital engagements. The one job helps the other. Graham McNamee wouldn't be the outstanding broadcaster that he is if he lacked the equipment—the voice production, the diction, the knowledge of music which his professional studies gave him. He wouldn't be so much in demand for concerts if the world didn't know him so well through broadcasting.

McNAMEE was born in Washington, D. C., in 1889, his father being a legal adviser to Judge Lamar, who was Cleveland's Secretary of the Interior. The elder McNamee was, shortly after the birth of his son, offered a position as attorney for the Hill interests at St. Paul, and he moved west. So that Graham grew up, like most any boy would grow, in comfortable surroundings in the city of St. Paul.

His mother, who herself was a pianist, wanted her son to be a musician. While he was yet a child, before, even, his given name had "stuck," he was called to his daily practice at the piano. "Ba-bee! Ba-bee!" The word became almost a battle cry. "The mocking chorus that dogged my footsteps precipitated many a fight that delayed practice considerably," he says. When his mother called her son to practice, the other boys took up the cry. And Graham McNamee clenched his fists and did his utmost to avenge the insult. There you have the beginning of the radio-reporter who covered the Dempsey-Tunney fight. Between times—as his story is told—you discover that McNamee, when he grew up, joined an athletic club and did a little boxing.

HE "dubbed along"—the words are McNamee's own—"like any kid," until he reached the age of 18. Then a sense of the importance of music overwhelmed him. He was filled with boyish emotion—probably he didn't know just what it was all about—and he found that with his voice he had an outlet for that emotion. So he began a serious study with the view of becoming a concert artist. "I turned from the piano to singing," he says, "and fairly ate it up. I had found what I loved."

From that time on his life was devoted to voice culture, to a study of diction, to vocal placement, to those dozen and one things that make up the technic of a concert artist.

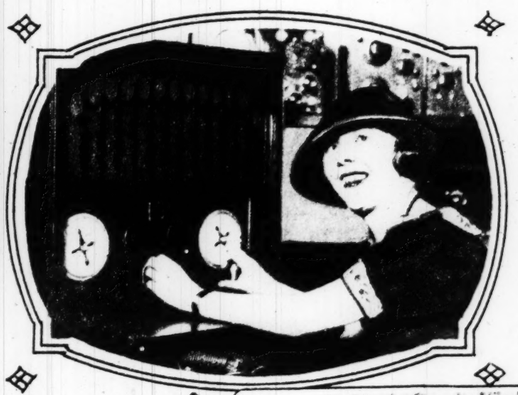
He had studied German and Italian at Cretin High School, St. Paul, and with that knowledge of language as a basis he had little difficulty in learning enough French, Spanish and other tongues to correctly voice the words of his songs.

Meantime, another interest had come into the life of the boy. He had "gone crazy"—according to the family notion—about athletics.

He had discovered that he had a body, and that his body was made up of a bone-frame and muscles. And that the muscles would do his will.

From playing baseball with the Cretin High School he had learned that he could pitch baseball. He was a left-hander — a southpaw — and southpaws are in demand. So it came about that he joined the Laurel Athletic Club of St. Paul. It was a semi-professional organization, and has since been absorbed by the St. Paul Athletic Club. McNamee was successful as a "southpaw" pitcher. But he had one handicap. He weighed, in those days, only 128 pounds. It takes more frame, more body, more steam, than 128 pounds provide, to consistently hurl a nine-inning ball game to victory.

Of course, when he wasn't playing baseball he was playing something else. As hockey. The Laurel hockey team in those days had for its captain Eddie Fitzgerald, who later captained an American Olympic team and carried it through to a defeat by Canada—which was what most naturally would happen with Canada in the field.



Mrs. McNamee, as she "listened in" on her husband at the Democratic convention of 1924.

At work. McNamee reporting the Republican convention of 1924.

And this McNamee boy boxed a bit, as well. Tom Gibbons and Mike Gibbons were members of the Laurel Club, and he put on the gloves several times with them.

He had already graduated from football when he graduated from Cretin High School, on whose team he had been quarterback.

The day came, after a time, when Graham's mother could take her son back East. She—now dead—was at his side when he invaded New York as a singer. That was 15 years ago. Engagements were not easily to be had. There was considerable struggle before an opening as a choir singer in a New Jersey town started McNamee on his singing career.

Followed several years of this and that in the way of singing jobs. After talking to McNamee one has a conviction that he never saw himself, even in dreams, upon the stage. He knew an operatic career was not for him. Yet he sang some opera. And he studied dramatic art. Simply to be able to sing his songs as a recitalist, to best advantage.

That study helped him, too, when there was need for bread and butter. He appeared in some light opera offerings on the New York stage. He "trouped" for a time with a musical organization.

UP IN Westchester County, New York, he was singing the role of the Duke of Plaza-Toro, in the Gilbert & Sullivan opera, "The Gondoliers." Rehearsals had gone off well. Suddenly, one of the sopranos became ill. A substitute must be had at once. Someone told the manager that there was a girl in Bronxville who could do the role, and the girl from Bronxville was hired to sing Gianetta. "I was singing on Sundays in a church in Bronxville then," says McNamee. "I didn't know this girl, but I'd heard about her. She really had a fine voice. And she was pretty and vivacious. She was what theatrical folks call 'a quick study,' too. That is, she learned her role almost at sight. So she came to sing Gianetta. And I married her. I owe a lot to my wife. She still continues her singing career. You may possibly know her as Josephine Garrett."

Slowly, McNamee was making his way as a concert baritone. Mrs. McNamee, a soprano, was also getting engagements. Graham had gone through the usual routine, making his debut in Aeolian Hall in 1923, with favorable notices from the critics. That was at the end of spring. Summer came. Mrs. McNamee left town. Her husband stayed. By some chance—he can't exactly tell you why—he drifted into the offices of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company on Broadway, one afternoon that summer. Probably he was seeking an opportunity to sing before the radio. What he really got was a job.

"How'd you like to try the work? We're looking for someone here like you," he was told.

It was summer. There wasn't anything to do. And he took the job, specifying, however, that he would be released to fill any possible concert engagements.

Radio was then in its infancy. McNamee had been hired principally because he knew the difference between a sonata and a tonneau. In other words, he—with his knowledge of languages—could announce the French song someone was to sing, and really make the announcement intelligible to those who knew both French and music. So he began. "Ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience"——

He had stage fright at first, talking into his "piece of tin." It was worse than facing an audience. But he soon conquered that. And the phrase with which he had started his first announcement seemed to "go good." The radio audience responded. "Blessed," said Elbert Hubbard, "is that man who has found his job." McNamee had found his.

"The best job in the world," he says. He wouldn't do anything else. And—if you happen to be interested—he is going to be a fixture with WEAF even after that station is absorbed by the Radio Corporation of America. "Of course, it's the best job there is," he says. "There's pleasure. There's interest. I am always meeting people who mean something in the world. If there's anything really happens, I'm sent to be on the job. And besides that, I have the finest correspondence that there is."

Some idea of that correspondence may be gained by knowledge of the fact that after the world series of 1925 McNamee received over 50,000 letters commenting on his work.

"And there is nothing half-way about those letters," he says. "None of them is lukewarm. They are either for you or against you."

"What letter," you may ask, "of all those you have received has made you the maddest?"

"They don't make you mad," he answers. "You see, even the most insulting of them are worth money." A shrewd look passes across his mobile face. Probably you have noticed that look before. Often, as you talk with him, Graham McNamee's face discloses a silent calculation that even you can almost figure out in dollars and cents. "You see," he continues, "I just pick out the worst of them and read them over the radio. They give my audience a big laugh. And laughs are worth money."

He continues for a moment in that vein. "Take my concerts," he says. "I give about a 30-minute talk on broadcasting. I sing a couple of groups of songs. I usually have a soprano with me to sing two more song groups and the accompanist usually plays a solo or two. That takes up about an hour and a half. The soprano and the pianist don't cost much. You see, the radio audience don't know about them. They don't command a price. Well, I get up there and start my talk: 'Ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience,' I say, just as if I was broadcasting. That brings a laugh. The audience is my friend from that moment. You see how laughs bring money."

BROADCASTING at first was simply announcing a musical program. Meantime, Major Andrew White of the Radio Corporation of America had begun to tell about current events—about prize fights. Came the 1923 world series. WEAF decided to cover the ball games by radio. A newspaper man was picked for the job. In the middle of the third game he broke down. McNamee was on the job. He carried on. His knowledge of sports stood him in good stead. He could report the game as one who knew baseball. "He did a swell job," wrote Heywood Broun in an introduction to McNamee's book. That happens to have been an unsolicited testimonial. "I never met Broun," says McNamee. "Fact is, I had never even corresponded with him until after the book came out. I knew what he had said. And I wanted to thank him for it. But my vanity—I guess—wouldn't let me even write to thank him until after the book was on the stands."

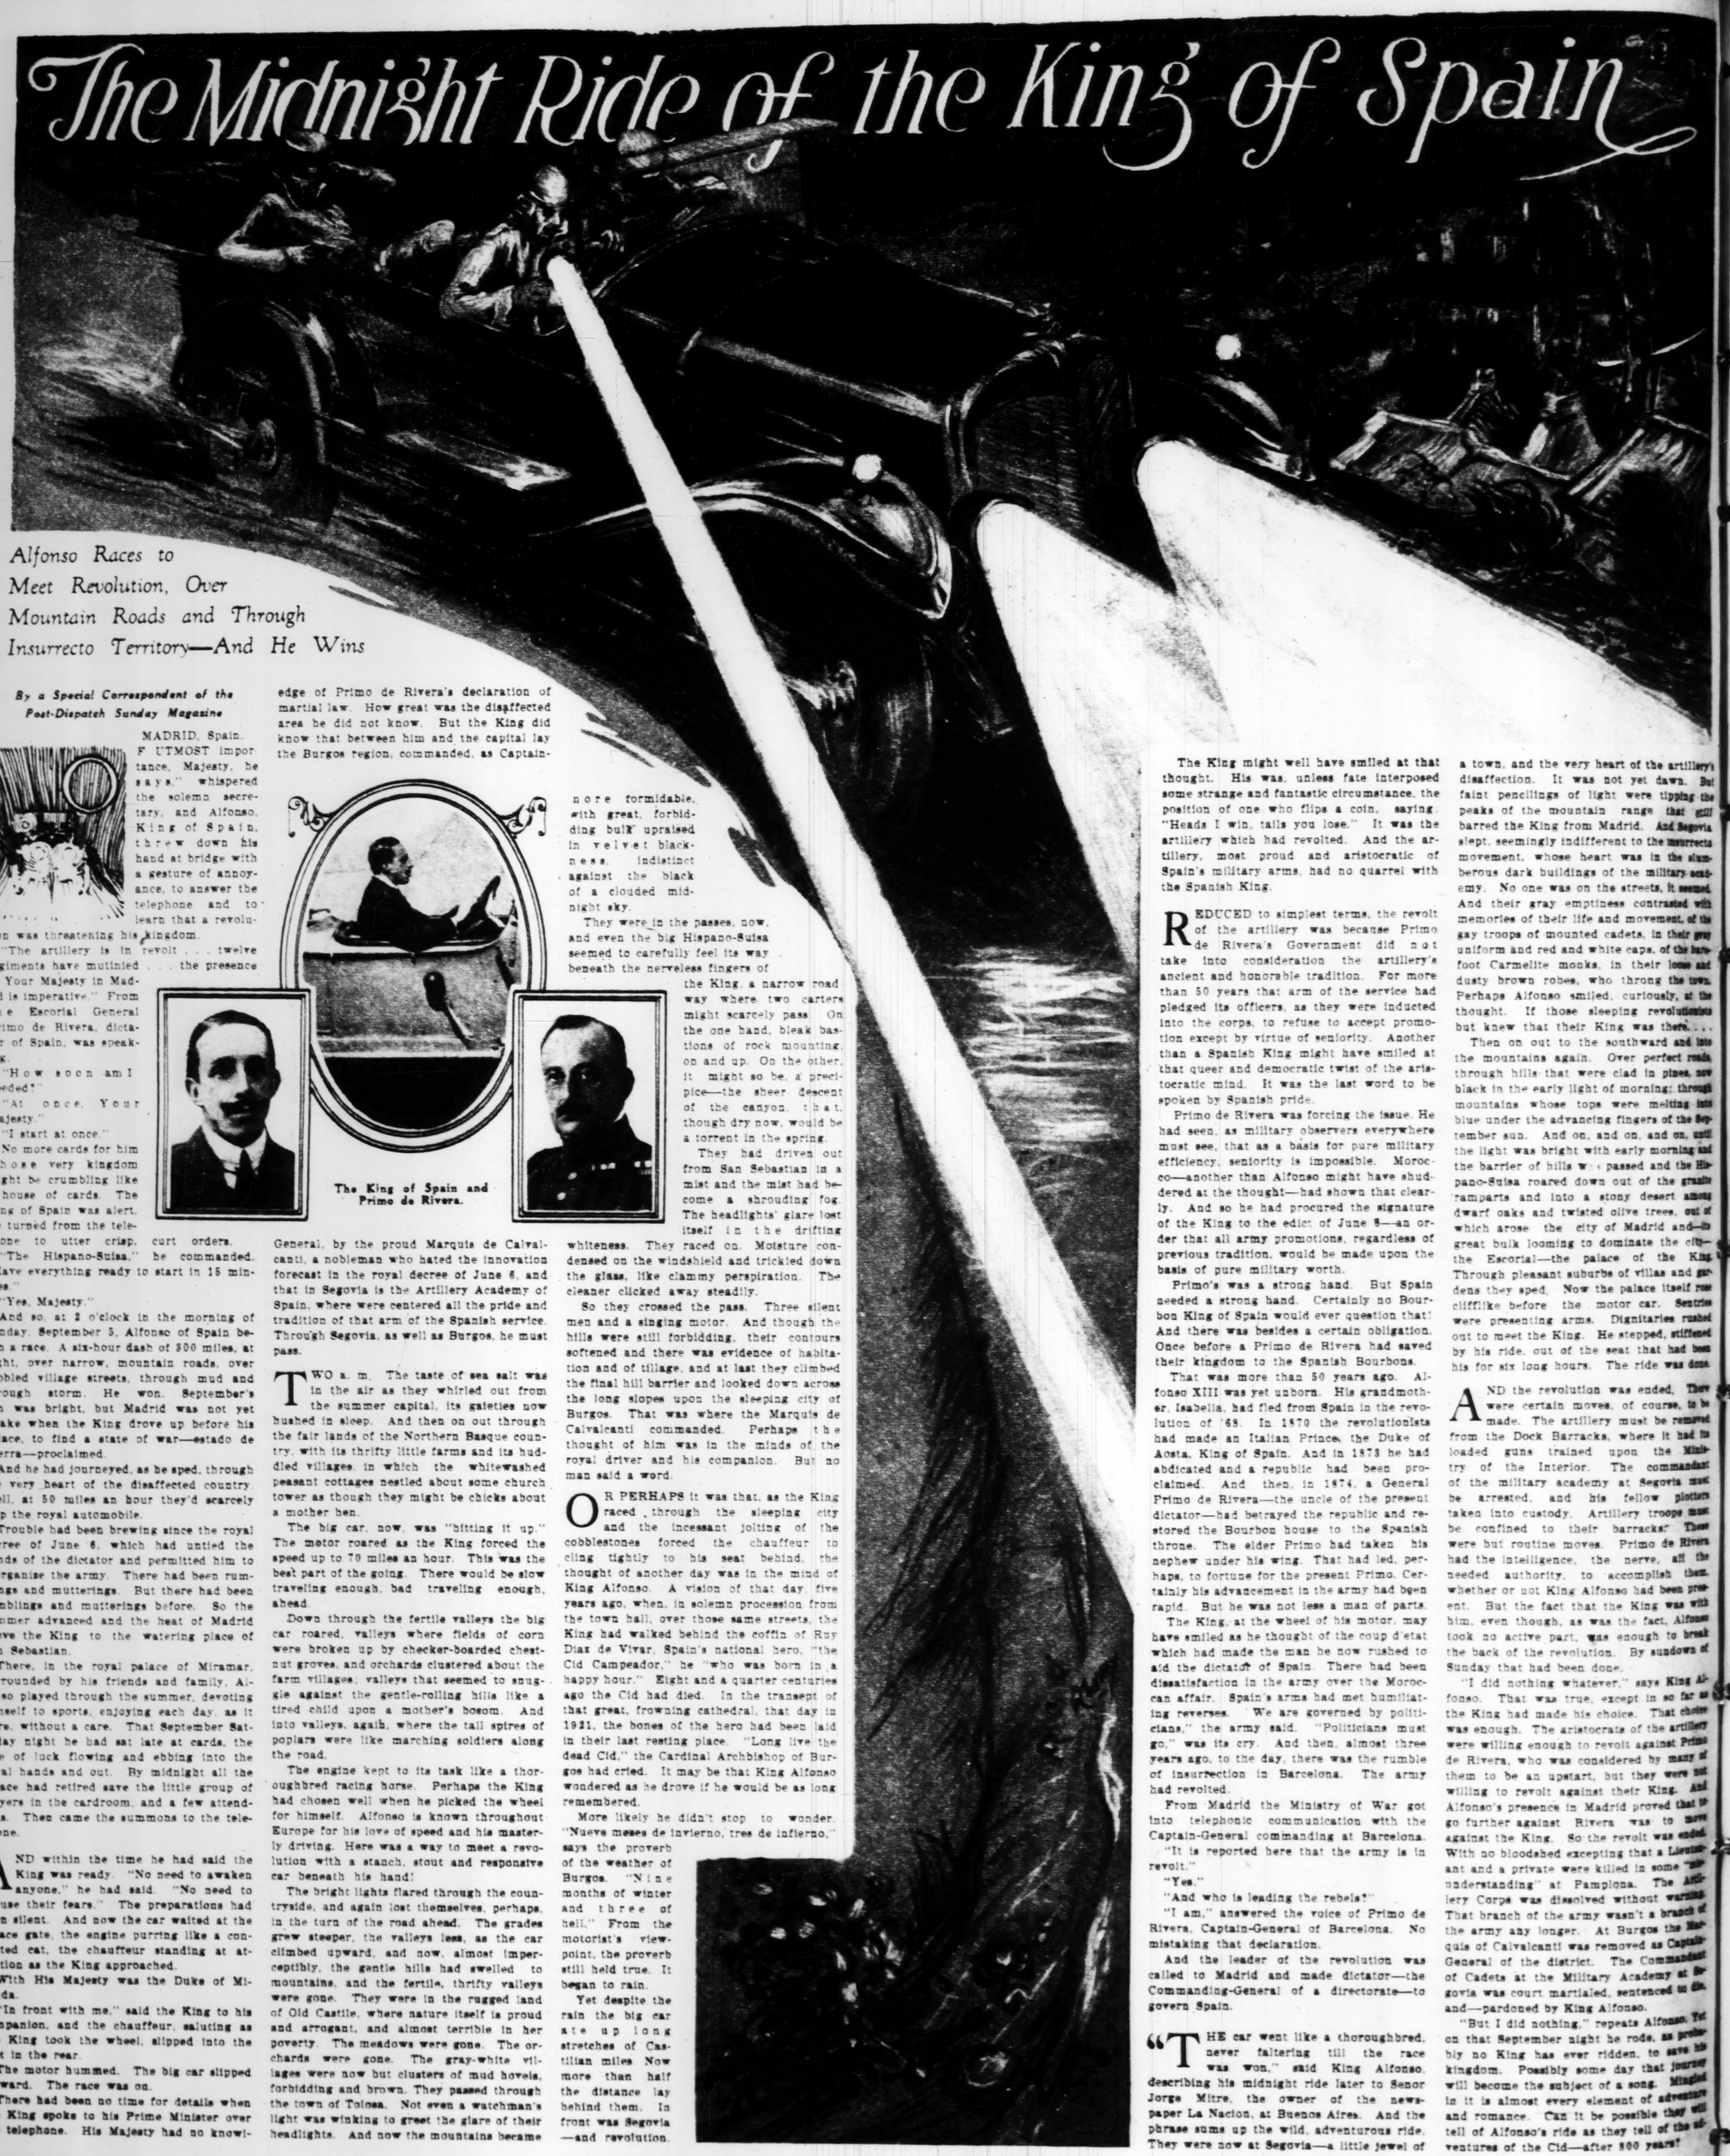
Those naive confessions are part of the charm of McNamee's personality when you meet him face to face. He is, just a little bit, vain. He likes the adulation of the crowd. And frankly so. Adoring femininity doesn't bother him a bit. Naturally, the women flock around him. They want him to autograph his book, or their printed radio station logs. He is naively willing to be the lion. For all of them he has a bit of persiflage. He is quite a "kidder."

But he is not a professional humorist. "If there's one man you want to steer away from," he says, "it's the fellow who is always trying to be funny. That's why in routine broadcasting I don't believe in trying to be humorous. If something strikes you as funny, tell it, of course. As I do in broadcasting a ball game. But you can't cook up humor in advance and get away with it. There's nothing so easily spotted over the radio as affectation."

He's really proud of being the first radio reporter. He looks back over four world series, over several important boxing matches, including the Dempsey-Tunney fight, over a score or more of big football games, over two national conventions, over a presidential inauguration, over the trial flight of the Los Angeles. All these, as a reporter, he has covered.

And, while he likes his job, McNamee doesn't see it as a thing with a future in itself. The shrewd look comes into his face again. You can see that he is calculating. "It's a great job," he says, "because it gets you publicity—and publicity means concert engagements."

The Midnight Ride of the King of Spain



Alfonso Races to Meet Revolution, Over Mountain Roads and Through Insurrecto Territory—And He Wins

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

MADRID, Spain.

"UTMOST importance, Majesty, he says," whispered the solemn secretary, and Alfonso, King of Spain, threw down his hand at bridge with a gesture of annoyance, to answer the telephone and to learn that a revolution was threatening his kingdom.

"The artillery is in revolt . . . twelve regiments have mutinied . . . the presence of Your Majesty in Madrid is imperative." From the Escorial General Primo de Rivera, dictator of Spain, was speaking.

"How soon am I needed?"

"At once, Your Majesty."

"I start at once."

No more cards for him whose very kingdom might be crumbling like a house of cards. The King of Spain was alert. He turned from the telephone to utter crisp, curt orders.

"The Hispano-Suisa," he commanded. "Have everything ready to start in 15 minutes."

"Yes, Majesty."

And so, at 2 o'clock in the morning of Sunday, September 5, Alfonso of Spain began a race. A six-hour dash of 300 miles, at night, over narrow, mountain roads, over cobbled village streets, through mud and through storm. He won. September's sun was bright, but Madrid was not yet awake when the King drove up before his palace, to find a state of war—estado de guerra—proclaimed.

And he had journeyed, as he sped, through the very heart of the disaffected country. Well, at 50 miles an hour they'd scarcely stop the royal automobile.

Trouble had been brewing since the royal decree of June 6, which had untied the hands of the dictator and permitted him to reorganize the army. There had been rumblings and mutterings. But there had been rumblings and mutterings before. So the summer advanced and the heat of Madrid drove the King to the watering place of San Sebastian.

There, in the royal palace of Miramar, surrounded by his friends and family, Alfonso played through the summer, devoting himself to sports, enjoying each day, as it were, without a care. That September Saturday night he had sat late at cards, the tide of luck flowing and ebbing into the royal hands and out. By midnight all the palace had retired save the little group of players in the cardroom, and a few attendants. Then came the summons to the telephone.

The King of Spain and Primo de Rivera.

AND within the time he had said the King was ready. "No need to awaken anyone," he had said. "No need to arouse their fears." The preparations had been silent. And now the car waited at the palace gate, the engine purring like a contented cat, the chauffeur standing at attention as the King approached.

With His Majesty was the Duke of Miranda.

"In front with me," said the King to his companion, and the chauffeur, saluting as the King took the wheel, slipped into the seat in the rear.

The motor hummed. The big car slipped forward. The race was on.

There had been no time for details when the King spoke to his Prime Minister over the telephone. His Majesty had no knowledge of Primo de Rivera's declaration of martial law. How great was the disaffected area he did not know. But the King did know that between him and the capital lay the Burgos region, commanded, as Captain-General, by the proud Marquis de Calvalcanti, a nobleman who hated the innovation forecast in the royal decree of June 6, and that in Segovia is the Artillery Academy of Spain, where were centered all the pride and tradition of that arm of the Spanish service. Through Segovia, as well as Burgos, he must pass.

TWO a. m. The taste of sea salt was in the air as they whirled out from the summer capital, its gaieties now hushed in sleep. And then on out through the fair lands of the Northern Basque country, with its thrifty little farms and its huddled villages, in which the whitewashed peasant cottages nestled about some church tower as though they might be chicks about a mother hen.

The big car, now, was "hitting it up." The motor roared as the King forced the speed up to 70 miles an hour. This was the best part of the going. There would be slow traveling enough, bad traveling enough, ahead.

Down through the fertile valleys the big car roared, valleys where fields of corn were broken up by checker-boarded chestnut groves, and orchards clustered about the farm villages; valleys that seemed to snuggle against the gentle-rolling hills like a tired child upon a mother's bosom. And into valleys, again, where the tall spires of poplars were like marching soldiers along the road.

The engine kept to its task like a thoroughbred racing horse. Perhaps the King had chosen well when he picked the wheel for himself. Alfonso is known throughout Europe for his love of speed and his masterly driving. Here was a way to meet a revolution with a stanch, stout and responsive car beneath his hand!

The bright lights flared through the countryside, and again lost themselves, perhaps, in the turn of the road ahead. The grades grew steeper, the valleys less, as the car climbed upward, and now, almost imperceptibly, the gentle hills had swelled to mountains, and the fertile, thrifty valleys were gone. They were in the rugged land of Old Castile, where nature itself is proud and arrogant, and almost terrible in her poverty. The meadows were gone. The orchards were gone. The gray-white villages were now but clusters of mud hovels, forbidding and brown. They passed through the town of Tolosa. Not even a watchman's light was winking to greet the glare of their headlights. And now the mountains became more formidable, with great, forbidding bulk upraised in velvet blackness, indistinct against the black of a clouded midnight sky.

They were in the passes, now, and even the big Hispano-Suisa seemed to carefully feel its way beneath the nerveless fingers of the King, a narrow road way where two carters might scarcely pass. On the one hand, bleak bastions of rock mounting on and up. On the other, it might so be, a precipice—the sheer descent of the canyon that, though dry now, would be a torrent in the spring.

They had driven out from San Sebastian in a mist and the mist had become a shrouding fog. The headlights' glare lost itself in the drifting whiteness. They raced on. Moisture condensed on the windshield and trickled down the glass, like clammy perspiration. The cleaner clicked away steadily.

So they crossed the pass. Three silent men and a singing motor. And though the hills were still forbidding, their contours softened and there was evidence of habitation and of tillage, and at last they climbed the final hill barrier and looked down across the long slopes upon the sleeping city of Burgos. That was where the Marquis de Calvalcanti commanded. Perhaps the thought of him was in the minds of the royal driver and his companion. But no man said a word.

OR PERHAPS it was that, as the King raced through the sleeping city and the incessant jolting of the cobblestones forced the chauffeur to cling tightly to his seat behind, the thought of another day was in the mind of King Alfonso. A vision of that day, five years ago, when, in solemn procession from the town hall, over those same streets, the King had walked behind the coffin of Ruy Diaz de Vivar, Spain's national hero, "the Cid Campeador," he "who was born in a happy hour." Eight and a quarter centuries ago the Cid had died. In the transept of that great, frowning cathedral, that day in 1921, the bones of the hero had been laid in their last resting place. "Long live the dead Cid," the Cardinal Archbishop of Burgos had cried. It may be that King Alfonso wondered as he drove if he would be as long remembered.

More likely he didn't stop to wonder. "Nueve meses de invierno, tres de infierno," says the proverb of the weather of Burgos. "Nine months of winter and three of hell." From the motorist's viewpoint, the proverb still held true. It began to rain.

Yet despite the rain the big car ate up long stretches of Castilian miles. Now more than half the distance lay behind them. In front was Segovia—and revolution.

The King might well have smiled at that thought. His was, unless fate interposed some strange and fantastic circumstance, the position of one who flips a coin, saying, "Heads I win, tails you lose." It was the artillery which had revolted. And the artillery, most proud and aristocratic of Spain's military arms, had no quarrel with the Spanish King.

REDUCED to simplest terms, the revolt of the artillery was because Primo de Rivera's Government did not take into consideration the artillery's ancient and honorable tradition. For more than 50 years that arm of the service had pledged its officers, as they were inducted into the corps, to refuse to accept promotion except by virtue of seniority. Another than a Spanish King might have smiled at that queer and democratic twist of the aristocratic mind. It was the last word to be spoken by Spanish pride.

Primo de Rivera was forcing the issue. He had seen, as military observers everywhere must see, that as a basis for pure military efficiency, seniority is impossible. Morocco—another than Alfonso might have shuddered at the thought—had shown that clearly. And so he had procured the signature of the King to the edict of June 6—an order that all army promotions, regardless of previous tradition, would be made upon the basis of pure military worth.

Primo's was a strong hand. But Spain needed a strong hand. Certainly no Bourbon King of Spain would ever question that! And there was besides a certain obligation. Once before a Primo de Rivera had saved their kingdom to the Spanish Bourbons.

That was more than 50 years ago. Alfonso XIII was yet unborn. His grandmother, Isabella, had fled from Spain in the revolution of '68. In 1870 the revolutionists had made an Italian Prince, the Duke of Aosta, King of Spain. And in 1873 he had abdicated and a republic had been proclaimed. And then, in 1874, a General Primo de Rivera—the uncle of the present dictator—had betrayed the republic and restored the Bourbon house to the Spanish throne. The elder Primo had taken his nephew under his wing. That had led, perhaps, to fortune for the present Primo. Certainly his advancement in the army had been rapid. But he was not less a man of parts.

The King, at the wheel of his motor, may have smiled as he thought of the coup d'etat which had made the man he now rushed to aid the dictator of Spain. There had been dissatisfaction in the army over the Moroccan affair. Spain's arms had met humiliating reverses. "We are governed by politicians," the army said. "Politicians must go," was its cry. And then, almost three years ago, to the day, there was the rumble of insurrection in Barcelona. The army had revolted.

From Madrid the Ministry of War got into telephonic communication with the Captain-General commanding at Barcelona.

"It is reported here that the army is in revolt."

"Yes."

"And who is leading the rebels?"

"I am," answered the voice of Primo de Rivera, Captain-General of Barcelona. No mistaking that declaration.

And the leader of the revolution was called to Madrid and made dictator—the Commanding-General of a directorate—to govern Spain.

"THE car went like a thoroughbred, never faltering till the race was won," said King Alfonso, describing his midnight ride later to Senor Jorge Mitre, the owner of the newspaper La Nacion, at Buenos Aires. And the phrase sums up the wild, adventurous ride. They were now at Segovia—a little jewel of a town, and the very heart of the artillery's disaffection. It was not yet dawn. But faint pencilings of light were tipping the peaks of the mountain range that still barred the King from Madrid. And Segovia slept, seemingly indifferent to the insurrecto movement, whose heart was in the slumberous dark buildings of the military academy. No one was on the streets, it seemed. And their gray emptiness contrasted with memories of their life and movement, of the gay troops of mounted cadets, in their gray uniform and red and white caps, of the barefoot Carmelite monks, in their loose and dusty brown robes, who throng the town. Perhaps Alfonso smiled, curiously, at the thought. If those sleeping revolutionists but knew that their King was there. . . .

Then on out to the southward and into the mountains again. Over perfect roads, through hills that were clad in pines, now black in the early light of morning; through mountains whose tops were melting into blue under the advancing fingers of the September sun. And on, and on, and on, until the light was bright with early morning and the barrier of hills was passed and the Hispano-Suisa roared down out of the granite ramparts and into a stony desert among dwarf oaks and twisted olive trees, out of which arose the city of Madrid and—its great bulk looming to dominate the city—the Escorial—the palace of the King. Through pleasant suburbs of villas and gardens they sped. Now the palace itself rose cliff-like before the motor car. Sentries were presenting arms. Dignitaries rushed out to meet the King. He stepped, stiffened by his ride, out of the seat that had been his for six long hours. The ride was done.

AND the revolution was ended. There were certain moves, of course, to be made. The artillery must be removed from the Dock Barracks, where it had its loaded guns trained upon the Ministry of the Interior. The commandant of the military academy at Segovia must be arrested, and his fellow plotters taken into custody. Artillery troops must be confined to their barracks. These were but routine moves. Primo de Rivera had the intelligence, the nerve, all the needed authority, to accomplish them, whether or not King Alfonso had been present. But the fact that the King was with him, even though, as was the fact, Alfonso took no active part, was enough to break the back of the revolution. By sundown of Sunday that had been done.

"I did nothing whatever," says King Alfonso. That was true, except in so far as the King had made his choice. That choice was enough. The aristocrats of the artillery were willing enough to revolt against Primo de Rivera, who was considered by many of them to be an upstart, but they were not willing to revolt against their King. And Alfonso's presence in Madrid proved that to go further against Rivera was to move against the King. So the revolt was ended. With no bloodshed excepting that a Lieutenant and a private were killed in some "misunderstanding" at Pamplona. The Artillery Corps was dissolved without warning. That branch of the army wasn't a branch of the army any longer. At Burgos the Marquis of Calvalcanti was removed as Captain-General of the district. The Commandant of Cadets at the Military Academy at Segovia was court martialed, sentenced to die, and—pardoned by King Alfonso.

"But I did nothing," repeats Alfonso. Yet on that September night he rode, as probably no King has ever ridden, to save his kingdom. Possibly some day that journey will become the subject of a song. Mingled in it is almost every element of adventure and romance. Can it be possible they will tell of Alfonso's ride as they tell of the adventures of the Cid—after 800 years?

The commandant of the military academy at Segovia must be arrested, and his fellow plotters taken into custody. Artillery troops must be confined to their barracks. These were but routine moves. Primo de Rivera had the intelligence, the nerve, all the needed authority, to accomplish them, whether or not King Alfonso had been present. But the fact that the King was with him, even though, as was the fact, Alfonso took no active part, was enough to break the back of the revolution. By sundown of Sunday that had been done.

"I did nothing whatever," says King Alfonso. That was true, except in so far as the King had made his choice. That choice was enough. The aristocrats of the artillery were willing enough to revolt against Primo de Rivera, who was considered by many of them to be an upstart, but they were not willing to revolt against their King. And Alfonso's presence in Madrid proved that to go further against Rivera was to move against the King. So the revolt was ended. With no bloodshed excepting that a Lieutenant and a private were killed in some "misunderstanding" at Pamplona. The Artillery Corps was dissolved without warning. That branch of the army wasn't a branch of the army any longer. At Burgos the Marquis of Calvalcanti was removed as Captain-General of the district. The Commandant of Cadets at the Military Academy at Segovia was court martialed, sentenced to die, and—pardoned by King Alfonso.

"But I did nothing," repeats Alfonso. Yet on that September night he rode, as probably no King has ever ridden, to save his kingdom. Possibly some day that journey will become the subject of a song. Mingled in it is almost every element of adventure and romance. Can it be possible they will tell of Alfonso's ride as they tell of the adventures of the Cid—after 800 years?

The PERFECT CRIME Fails Again

Lindsay Marshall, whose plot to murder his wife was almost perfect.

One Flaw Marred the Carefully Executed Plan Which Lindsay Marshall Devised to Carry Out the Murder of His Wife, End His Own Life, and Destroy All Evidence by Fire.

LONDON, England.

FLAW has been discovered in yet another perfect crime—the ambition of innumerable criminals.

Along a deserted, willow-hung road near the quiet, little town of Blunham, England, Private Frank Goodwin, on leave from the Grenadier Guards, was bicycling homeward at about 11 o'clock on the night of September 9. Rounding a curve in the road he saw before him a blaze.

Spurting swiftly ahead, he soon made out a closed motor car enveloped in flames. He shouted for aid, fearing that several lives might be in danger. And even as he called out he saw several nearby householders rushing toward the scene.

When Private Goodwin reached the burning car two or three others already stood there, terrified and silent. The flames leaped up so high that they licked at the telegraph wires above.

Private Goodwin made out against the glow of the blaze two figures on the front seat. One in the driver's seat sat erect; the other was slumped down wearily against its erect companion.

The flames were so fierce that Private Goodwin and the others could only stand there gaping. One of the onlookers held in his hand the handle from one of the doors. The first to reach the scene, at the risk of his life he had tried to open the door of the car. But apparently wedged fast, it would not yield, and at last he succeeded only in wrenching away the handle. The flames then had forced him to step back.

Ernest King, one of those who had been attracted by the blaze, identified the erect figure as Lindsay Marshall, a well-to-do County Councilor, who farmed some 600 acres of land near Blunham. The other occupant of the car King was able to make out as Mrs. Marshall.

As the flames continued to rage, a little knot of country folk gathered about the blazing car. They all knew the Marshalls; they were shocked to learn that their respected and wealthy townsman and his wife had met their deaths so tragically.

It was after midnight before the debris had cooled sufficiently to permit officers of the law, Private Goodwin and a few others who remained to approach. They found difficulty in prying open the doors of the sedan to remove the two bodies, charred beyond all human semblance. The machine rocked perilously on the edge of a ditch, supported only by a telegraph pole.

It was a grewsome task, and Private Goodwin's thoughts were somber as he continued on his way again, shortly after 3 a. m., shaking his head dismally over this misfortune which had come to the Marshalls.

THE Lindsay Howitt Marshalls had always led the happiest, most uneventful lives. They had been married 20 years and they had a fine son of 16 years, attending the fashionable and expensive Bedford School, and a daughter, 11.

So far as was known there had never been a break in the even drift of their lives. Their home was attractive, and both were young enough to retain no little physical charm.

Naturally, in the course of his farming operations, Marshall borrowed money. At the time of his death, in fact, he had outstanding loans of about $70,000 at the bank at which he transacted all his business. But this was not an urgent loan, and the bank would have gladly extended Marshall additional credit.

Moreover, this loan was secured by his share in his father's estate, which would eventually have brought him almost $100,000. Another portion of the loan was secured by a friend who was satisfied with the financial arrangement.

The Marshalls' pleasures were simple. They lived the lives of a hundred thousand other normal, sane-living English people of their class and wealth.

Their motor car was of American make, and Marshall was justly proud of it, was fond of going on long, night drives through the fair English countryside, with only his wife at his side. They had numerous friends on neighboring farms and estates and enjoyed going calling of an evening, often dropping in at nearby houses at most unexpected hours.

Friends of the Marshalls often remarked on their comradeship, their gay intimacy. They were known as the very best of pals.

On the night that terminated so tragically for the Marshalls they decided, as they had done so often in the past, to go calling on friends.

Mrs. Marshall went to the nursery to kiss her little daughter, Jean, good-bye.

"We're just going for a run in the car," she called back to the maid, who was to stay with Jean. "We may see some friends," she added.

And, looking around the lower rooms to see that the lights were properly dimmed, Mrs. Marshall joined her husband, who waited beside the car. It was a lovely, clear night, and they sped swiftly over rolling hill and dale.

The two called first at the home of the John McElvies, in Bedford, with whom they were on intimate terms. The McElvies were always glad to see the Marshalls.

Here they drank a glass or two of cider, gossiped and laughed for perhaps an hour. On leaving, about 9 o'clock, Mrs. Marshall made arrangements for the McElvies' youngsters to visit her Jean on the following day. They waved gayly to their friends, who stood in the doorway to watch them off, for, as they supposed, their own home.

Less than two hours later their car was found in flames on a little-used road, not directly leading to the Marshall farm. Apparently it was a tragic accident.

A CORONER'S jury, country folk who had known the Marshalls very well, was called. They would meet, it seemed certain, and pronounce solemnly and officially what was already obvious to everyone: that the Lindsay Howitt Marshalls met their deaths by tragic accident while motoring on the night of September 9.

And so—at first, at least—the Coroner's hearing went.

John McElvie testified concerning the circumstances of that last visit. The Marshalls, he said, seemed very happy, never more like the "particular pals" they were.

Marshall's brother, Harry, sole executor of the Marshall estate, testified that his brother had been financially solvent at the time he met death. Marshall's banker gave similar testimony. The maid told of that last, happy farewell in the nursery.

The jurymen were even willing to overlook certain inexplicable elements in the investigation. Ernest King, whose home is near the scene of the accident, testified that he had glanced from his window to see Marshall's car come to a stop. A minute or two later it had burst into flames for no apparent reason.

Another witness testified, too, that as far as could be discerned when he reached the scene, neither of the Marshalls had apparently made any effort to save themselves. There was the question, too, of the gasoline can which was found in the rear of the car. This aroused the suspicions of insurance adjusters, but it did not alter the view of the kindly people who made up the Coroner's jury.

As the Saturday on which the inquest was held came to a close, the jurymen grew impatient. They wanted to get the melancholy business over and go about their own affairs.

But the evidence of the gasoline can, and certain other facts which had come to light, had aroused the suspicions of Gregory Whyley, the Coroner, and he announced to his jurymen at the close of the day that the hearing would be resumed on Monday.

THEY had scarcely met together on Monday when Coroner Whyley called a witness whose testimony startled the jurymen, opening up a shocking and horrible perspective that they had not before contemplated.

A Bedford druggist, James H. Lloyd, testified that on the morning of September 9 Marshall had purchased one ounce of prussic acid, which the druggist had given to him in the brown, glass bottle in which it is customary to put poison. Marshall had told the druggist that he wanted the poison to kill a dog.

When the druggist had finished his testimony a police inspector next took the stand and placed on the witness table a few particles of partly-melted, brown glass, found in the charred wreckage of the car where the driver had been sitting. The druggist, when questioned, stated that those fragments might have been a part of the poison bottle, fused and lightened in color by the heat of the flames.

The Coroner next produced a gun which Lindsay Marshall had acquired three days before the tragedy. It had been found by small boys playing along the shallows of the River Ouse.

There followed on the witness stand two women who testified that on the night of September 9 they had heard two shots as a motor car had rumbled over the River Ouse bridge near their home. This was close to the spot where the gun had been found.

Before their eyes, as witness followed witness, the startled jurymen saw built up the outlines of an amazing crime plot. As the intricate chain of evidence was pieced together they were forced to the reluctant conclusion that the two shots that had rung out on the night of September 9 had sent Mrs. Lindsay Marshall to her death.

After 20 minutes' deliberation they returned, as Coroner Whyley had said it was almost inevitable they should return, a verdict of murder and suicide. Lindsay Marshall had shot his wife to death as she rode beside him, had driven to a spot where he had hoped the car would overturn, had soaked the interior with gasoline, swallowed the prussic acid and lastly had set fire to the upholstery of the car.

AND once more, in the annals of crime, one flaw, one careless step, has robbed a carefully executed plot of what might otherwise have been perfection.

There is a huge and inevitable "if" which perhaps confronts Lindsay Marshall across an eternity.

If Marshall had thrown the gun into deep water, instead of shallow; if only the car had overturned as it blazed, obliterating all evidence; if the telegraph pole had not been there to check it; if the fragments of the brown bottle had not been found; if events had not shaped themselves as they inevitably do, there might have been the perfect crime.

Some such chance circumstances as these invariably thwart the most minutely, skillfully laid plans of even master criminals; some curious, human blunder brings to light the first hint of the long, devious trail, built up with so much patience and care.

There are, of course, certain things about the Marshall murder which seem destined never to be known, certain things which only those two, perhaps only Lindsay Marshall himself, knew.

Why did Marshall murder his wife and then end his own life? Did he fear a financial crash? Did he want to place at the disposal of his two children the $75,000 life insurance which he carried, so that they might always be assured of the position in life which they occupied at the time of his death?

Was Mrs. Marshall murdered without warning as she rode along through the misty English countryside? Or did some deeply concealed hatred exist between them?

These are only a few of the many, many questions which raise themselves like serpents' heads, never to be put down. But the oldest of the old, old laws, the law of destiny itself, was not broken: the murder of Eve Marshall was found out.

Eve Marshall, slain by her husband before he took his own life.

THE BRITISHER WHO IS CHIEF OF POLICE IN PALESTINE

Raids and Murder, the Arab Substitute for Football, He Combats. He Rushes in to Soothe a Religious Wrangle in Soccer Togs. They Even Go to Him When They Have Twins.

Captain Frederick A. Partridge

(Captain Frederick A. Partridge, Palestine Police Chief, now in America, tells some lively stories of his adventures in the Holy Land. A typical British soldier, such as Kipling knew and celebrated, Captain Partridge has been for the last five years Deputy Superintendent of Police of the Jerusalem district, a territory of about 1000 square miles, including the sacred historical cities of Jerusalem, Jericho and Bethlehem. Through all his experiences, fortunately, he has never lost sight of the humorous element inseparable from the diplomatic execution of peculiarly delicate official duties.)

By CAPTAIN F. A. PARTRIDGE

As Told to Alan Macdonald

"I'VE arrested a murderer, sir. I've got the body of the victim and all the evidence."

The speaker was one of my Arab policemen, who had been on the police force of the Jerusalem district for only a few weeks, so I wasn't sure to share the enthusiasm with which he stood before my desk. His black eyes were like coals in his eagerness—directly in contrast with the bearing of the nondescript, thoroughly cowed fellow countryman he had by the arm.

"That so?" I said, evenly. "Tell me about it."

I won't attempt to quote the strange story he told me. He had been passing by one of the many walled gardens of old Jerusalem when he heard sounds of an argument beyond the wall. He climbed the wall and silently dropped to the ground inside. There, in the shadow of olive trees on a moonlight night, two men were quarreling bitterly. Presently they grappled. The native policeman waited patiently, but consumed with eagerness. The men drew knives. They fought in the dark, unknowing that they were, in fact, under the eyes of the law. At last one dropped with a knife blade in his vitals. The policeman rushed in and grabbed the victor.

"BUT why didn't you stop them?" I protested. "Hang it, man, you should have arrested them for assault! You could have saved a life. Couldn't you see that?"

My henchman looked crestfallen, but he clung to the arm of his murderer.

"Anybody could arrest two men for assault," he said at last, in his own tongue. "I wanted a murderer. Murderers get the worst punishment. I thought they were most important. You yourself said" . . .

And, after all, I was stumped. You see, after Allenby's capture of Jerusalem I had suddenly been ordered to organize a police force, a purely civil body. The Turks had left things in pretty much of a mess. We could not enlist any of the old policemen who had been on the Turkish force for fear of conspiracy and bribery. Therefore, I had to take what men were at hand. Few Jews could be hired for the money we had to pay. So the police came to be mostly Arabs, who were put into uniform and sent out to beats and duty almost the day they were hired. They had had no training or instruction save personal talks. No wonder if they were a long time getting straight on Occidental ideas of murder. But they surely brought in some weird cases.

Incidentally, there's one classic tale that makes this "watchful waiting" policy of my Arab policeman quite explicable. Among the tribes, especially in Trans-Jordania, the land across the River Jordan, life doesn't mean anything. After the Turks left, good Mauser rifles, made in Germany, were to be found everywhere. Men picked them up, cleaned them and went through the country selling them.

ONE day one of these peddlers came to an old shepherd on the hills who carried an old-fashioned, breech-loading rifle. The peddler, decrying the old man's gun, offered him one of the Mausers. The aged fellow shrugged and said: "No, this is good enough for me."

The peddler gazed off over the sunny, purple-misted hills. Far down in the wadi, or valley, at their feet was an Arab, peacefully standing beside a small flock of sheep. Far up on the opposite hillside were two others, silhouetted in their voluminous robes against the sky. The peddler squinted a shrewd eye.

"Can you hit that man down there with your rifle?" he queried.

The shepherd nodded sagely.

"Can you drop one of the pair upon the hill?"

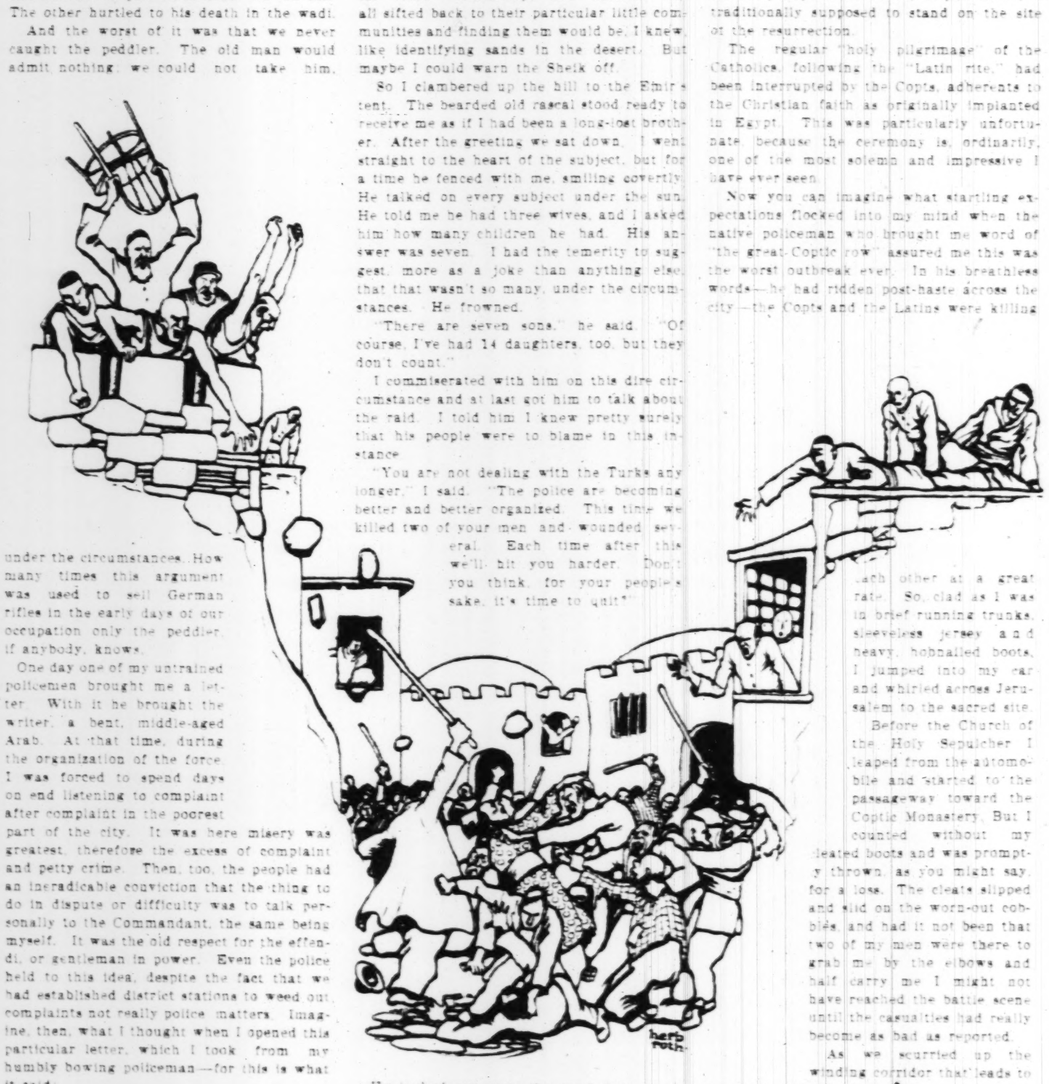
Gauging the distance with the experience of years, the ancient acknowledged that his gun wouldn't "bite" at that yardage. The peddler hoisted the Mauser to his shoulder.

"If I topple one of those fellows will you buy the gun?"

The old Arab agreed; the Mauser barked and one of the pair stood alone on the hill. The other hurtled to his death in the wadi.

And the worst of it was that we never caught the peddler. The old man would admit nothing we could not take him, under the circumstances. How many times this argument was used to sell German rifles in the early days of our occupation only the peddler, if anybody, knows.

One day one of my untrained policemen brought me a letter. With it he brought the writer, a bent, middle-aged Arab. At that time, during the organization of the force, I was forced to spend days on end listening to complaint after complaint in the poorest part of the city. It was here misery was greatest, therefore the excess of complaint and petty crime. Then, too, the people had an ineradicable conviction that the thing to do in dispute or difficulty was to talk personally to the Commandant, the same being myself. It was the old respect for the effendi, or gentleman in power. Even the police held to this idea, despite the fact that we had established district stations to weed out complaints not really police matters. Imagine, then, what I thought when I opened this particular letter, which I took from my humbly bowing policeman—for this is what it said:



"MOST honorable, worshipful, all-powerful Commandant of Police. Knowing that thou art always kind and good and wishful to help all, I make appeal to you.

"This morning my wife birthed twins, and I am very poor and do not see how I can support all. Will you please take one?

"God save the King and the noble Captain Partridge, Commandant of Police."

But these duties were not the only ones we had to perform. In addition to the city, the Jerusalem district takes in a territory of about 1000 square miles. Much of this territory is more or less arid desert, and along with other land to the south, was continually being raided by bands of tribesmen from across the Jordan. The raiders lived in numerous localities in their own country. They would meet, for instance, at a chosen spot, ford the river and swoop down on some unsuspecting town. Maybe they would raze it, but in any event they would drive off the camels, cattle and other livestock, and on occasion take away with them three or four young women who happened to strike their fancy. They were as interesting a lot of bandits as anyone could imagine.

Report of a raid would come in, and hours afterward we would set out. Weeks of hard riding sometimes ensued and even then we would be unable to trace down more than one or two of the culprits. None of the tribesmen would talk, of course, and it was practically impossible to identify the stolen cattle. Sometimes all trace of the women would be lost; again we would find them unharmed and be able to return them to their homes.

ONE night there came in a report of a raid far in the south, and we had the good fortune to meet the bandits on their way across the desert toward the Jordan. A running fight ensued, two of the bandits were shot down and we had reason to believe others had been wounded. But in the end the rest of the band got away.

We had a pretty good idea as to where the raiders had come from, and so, the day after the foray, I set out with my orderly on a visit to the Sheik or Emir, of that particular tribe. Naturally the raiders had all sifted back to their particular little communities and finding them would be, I knew, like identifying sands in the desert. But maybe I could warn the Sheik off.

So I clambered up the hill to the Emir's tent. The bearded old rascal stood ready to receive me as if I had been a long-lost brother. After the greeting we sat down. I went straight to the heart of the subject, but for a time he fenced with me, smiling covertly. He talked on every subject under the sun. He told me he had three wives, and I asked him how many children he had. His answer was seven. I had the temerity to suggest, more as a joke than anything else, that that wasn't so many, under the circumstances. He frowned.

"There are seven sons," he said. "Of course, I've had 14 daughters, too, but they don't count."

I commiserated with him on this dire circumstance and at last got him to talk about the raid. I told him I knew pretty surely that his people were to blame in this instance.

"You are not dealing with the Turks any longer," I said. "The police are becoming better and better organized. This time we killed two of your men and wounded several. Each time after this we'll hit you harder. Don't you think, for your people's sake, it's time to quit?"

He looked out over the sand hills, then he turned and put a hand on my knee.

"You play football, I hear," he said, softly. "You knock men around pretty much. But it's sport. Well, so with the raids. It's our only sport out here."

He looked really aggrieved and had he accused me of spoiling his sport I should not have been surprised.

But all our dealings with the Sheiks of Trans-Jordania did not end so easily or so neatly. There were other "shows," as we call them out there, that had much more serious consequences, that took on the guise of real war and the mystery of capital detective stories.

Organizing football teams in Jerusalem and Palestine has been one of my pet hobbies. I regard the game as one of the best means of teaching Occidental ideas to the Arabs and other inhabitants of that Biblical land. So it was not at all surprising that I was on the gridiron of the Sports Club, some distance from the walled city, when word was brought to me of what we still call "the great Coptic row."

A pitched battle, I was told, was being fought between two religious sects in front of the Coptic Monastery, near the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which, as you know, is traditionally supposed to stand on the site of the resurrection.

The regular "holy pilgrimage" of the Catholics, following the "Latin rite," had been interrupted by the Copts, adherents to the Christian faith as originally implanted in Egypt. This was particularly unfortunate because the ceremony is, ordinarily, one of the most solemn and impressive I have ever seen.

Now you can imagine what startling expectations flocked into my mind when the native policeman who brought me word of "the great Coptic row" assured me this was the worst outbreak ever. In his breathless words—he had ridden post-haste across the city—the Copts and the Latins were killing each other at a great rate. So, clad as I was in brief running trunks, sleeveless jersey and heavy, hobnailed boots, I jumped into my car and whirled across Jerusalem to the sacred site.

Before the Church of the Holy Sepulcher I leaped from the automobile and started for the passageway toward the Coptic Monastery. But I counted without my cleated boots and was promptly thrown, as you might say, for a loss. The cleats slipped and slid on the worn-out cobbles and had it not been that two of my men were there to grab me by the elbows and half carry me I might not have reached the battle scene until the casualties had really become as bad as reported.

As we scurried up the winding corridor that leads to the courtyard before the Monastery I strove to figure what had happened, that I might know how to act at once. I knew that every Friday the Latins "made the Stations of the Cross," going over the very route which they believe our Savior took on His way to Calvary. I recalled that the ninth station, or the spot where Christ fell for the third and last time under the terrible weight of the cross, is directly before the Coptic Monastery. It is marked by a pillar. The Copts claim the land, but because of precedent centuries old allow other sects to visit the holy spot.

Imagine the scene that met my eyes in the little courtyard. On one side towered the monastery. Every window was filled with shouting Copts, hurling a storm of crockery, furniture and whatever they could lay hands upon down on the heads of the Latin pilgrims. Other Copts along the three walls that made up the inclosure were adding noise and hastily grabbed missiles, some had even torn bricks from the walls. Several of the Copts had sallied from the monastery and fist fights were at their height. Numerous noses had been broken, to judge from the blood, and a woman's skull, it was learned, had been fractured. Along the walls, stricken combatants had retired to nurse their wounds.

Aided by my two native policemen and my practice of football, I plunged through the struggling mass to the steps of the monastery. Shouting and shaking those about me, with the help of my men, I finally made myself heard.

Then, before any semblance of order was restored, they all began turning on me, each striving to get the judicial ear first. A deluge of appeals in a dozen tongues!

AT LAST I got a moment of silence and demanded what was wrong. It appears that when the Latins arrived before the pillar marking the ninth station, in the "Path of Sorrows," they found a chair belonging to the Copts directly before it. The Latin Bishop, or leader, feeling, no doubt, great indignation over what he considered a desecration of the spot where the Savior suffered so much, demanded that the chair be removed. Never before had a chair been there; it must go! No, declared the Copts, the chair must stay! One of the Latins attempted to throw the offending piece of furniture out of the way, and the Copts seized him.

"Why was the chair there?" I demanded of the Coptic Bishop, though I thought it probable he had used it for one of the Copts own ceremonies and had forgotten it.

"It was always there, and must not be removed," he shouted, obviously almost out of his mind with rage.

The Bishop was a great, stalwart man, who, on another and more peaceful occasion, had lifted me bodily to show his strength and held me above his head.

"You know the chair hasn't always been there," I challenged him. "These pilgrimages have been going on ever since I've been here and there never was such a fight before. Do you want to throw over all precedent?" (Precedent is the final law at the church.)

"Remove that chair!"

I took a step forward. The Bishop plunged down the short steps. Raising his great arms so that the sleeves of his heavy brown robe fell about his shoulders, he let out a bellow of protest and threat.

"The man who touches that chair dies!" he shrieked. "He dies, do you hear? Let none obey that order!"

TRULY, it was rather a tremendous moment. Cries of approval went up from the Copts; defiant shouts from the Latins. Other tongues of that polyglot city joined in. I was in the center of a throng swept by fanaticism—the representative of law and order in a football combat! No wonder there were some jeers. Nevertheless, there was only one thing to do, and I did it. I picked up the chair, carried it over to the wall and stood there.

"Now," I said, "what are you going to do about it?"

The Coptic Bishop had made a great play, but mine was a bit better. Raging and shaking his fists, he retired to the monastery. But if I thought I had settled things I was mistaken.

"Now go on with your ceremony," I said to the Latin prelate.

Fancy my amazement when he shook his head violently and burst out: "No, no!" which expletive was echoed by his followers.

"Why not?" was my astonished inquiry.

"The Coptic chair is still in the courtyard! Away, away with it, before the ceremony can go on! The chair is a sacrilege."

Again the confused outcry, and some incipient renewal of the combat as the Latins scented complete victory. But again, perforce, the best play was mine. There wasn't another thing to do. All my authority, in a way, was at stake. I went over to the chair—and the slipping of my cleated shoes on the cobbles didn't add much to my dignity—sat down and lighted a cigaret. This may seem sacrilegious, but I only did it for emphasis. I knew these people, essentially reverent, were at this time scarcely accountable for their unhappy emotional outbreak.

"I'm very tired," I explained. "I have been playing football all afternoon. I propose to sit here until you hold your ceremony and leave, or go without holding it. The Coptic chair bides with me."

My two men flanked me, expecting trouble. There was much protest and muttering, but finally the pilgrims composed themselves for prayer. Their ceremony completed, they departed.

We treated the whole thing as a criminal case, though, as you can see, it involved delicate issues. There were several hearings, and in the end the Copts decided to punish their own offenders. They sent the monastic Hercules to a rock monastery, a sort of correctional institute, at Wadi Kilt, in the south, about the hottest place I have ever heard tell of—save, of course, one.

"The Coptic chair is still in the courtyard! Away, away with it, before the ceremony can go on! The chair is a sacrilege."

Again the confused outcry, and some incipient renewal of the combat as the Latins scented complete victory. But again, perforce, the best play was mine. There wasn't another thing to do. All my authority, in a way, was at stake. I went over to the chair —and the slipping of my cleated shoes on the cobbles didn't add much to my dignity— sat down and lighted a cigaret. This may seem sacrilegious, but I only did it for emphasis. I knew these people, essentially reverent, were at this time scarcely accountable for their unhappy emotional outbreak.

"I'm very tired," I explained. "I have been playing football all afternoon. I propose to sit here until you hold your ceremony and leave, or go without holding it. The Coptic chair bides with me."

My two men flanked me, expecting trouble. There was much protest and muttering, but finally the pilgrims composed themselves for prayer. Their ceremony completed, they departed.

We treated the whole thing as a criminal case, though, as you can see, it involved delicate issues. There were several hearings, and in the end the Copts decided to punish their own offenders. They sent the monastic Hercules to a rock monastery, a sort of correctional institute, at Wadi Kilt, in the south, about the hottest place I have ever heard tell of—save, of course, one.

Pluribus Jones and How He Came Into His Own

By SEWELL FORD

Through No Personal Ambition, But Because of Somebody Else's Blunder, He Is Called Upon to Do Impossible Things. As His Feeling of Self-Confidence Grows, His Exploits Become More Startling, With Their Climax on the Deck of a Foreign Warship.

LOGICALLY, there should have been nothing in common between Pinkey Barstow and Pluribus Jones. They were as unlike as an apple-dumpling and a soda-cracker. Physically, socially and mentally they were different, from their various attitudes toward life as a whole to their respective tastes for tobacco. Barstow indulged moderately in cigarettes, Jones was incessantly whittling a black plug to fill his cutty-pipe. Pinkey, to return to the simile, was the apple-dumpling and Pluribus the soda-cracker.

It was through their relations to the Pan-American Construction Company that they were discovered to each other. Mr. Barstow happened to be vice-president of the concern. Not that he was a captain of industry, or anything of the sort. His natural talents fitted him better to be a brigadier of leisure.

At one and thirty, by which time a man is supposed to have given some indication of the sort of thing which may be expected of him, Pinkey Barstow could point to but one instance when he had achieved distinction. During his senior term he had coached an unpromising crew of 'varsity oarsmen into such shape that they won an unexpected victory, and for five years thereafter he had done nothing more, save live in the manner which his somewhat luxurious tastes dictated.

INCIDENTALLY, he had been persuaded by an old friend of his father to invest the remainder of his fortune in purchasing a one-third interest in the Pan-American Construction Company, accepting the complimentary office of vice-president under protest. Occasionally after that, chiefly because it seemed rather a humorous thing to do, he would appear at his desk in the company's offices and ask absurd questions as to the concern's complicated interests. One day, however, to the astonishment of all interested, he announced that he had secured some business for the company.

"Met a chap at dinner last night and fixed up a deal," he observed. "I have the papers, all drawn up and clinched with signatures, too. There they are," and he tossed a fat envelope on the directors' table.

An examination of the documents produced consternation and dismay. Mr. Barstow, in his capacity as vice-president, had not only undertaken a contract to furnish the city of Guanica with a complete water works system within five months from date, but had agreed to give forfeit bonds to a scandalous amount binding the company to finish the job at the specified time.

"Great Scott!" gasped the gray-haired, keen-eyed president of the Pan-American Construction Company. "Why didn't you ask us about this thing before you signed it?"

"Never thought of that," responded Pinkey blandly. "Just what is this Guanica, anyway?"

GUANICA, he was informed, was the capital of one of those tempestuous little republics bordering the Caribbean, a state in which revolution was the chief industry and from which yellow fever was the principal export.

"The senor said it would be a good thing for us," protested Pinkey. "Isn't the price right?"

"Oh, yes, the price is all right; too good to be true, in fact. It's the five months' forfeit clause that's all wrong. Suppose we should slip up and had to pay that? Why, it would wipe us out."

"Then we'd better not slip up," sagely commented Mr. Barstow, and with that he dismissed the matter.

Luckily, they were able to sublet the machinery and building contracts, but no one wanted the job of delivering and laying the pipes—not at any price. The reason was soon apparent. Iron water-pipes were just then very difficult anywhere in the country. The Pittsburg puddlers, whoever or whatever they might be, were on strike. In other places where water-pipes were made the stock on hand had been ordered months in advance.

"I'm afraid it's all day with us," groaned the president, after these facts had been ascertained. Barstow, it's up to you."

"To do what?" asked Barstow blankly.

"To get those water-pipes, take them to Guanica, and lay 'em."

"You can't?"

The heads of the Pan-American Construction Company assured him that they could not.

"Then I'll do it," said Pinkey complacently.

It was then that he sent for Pluribus Jones.

THAT was not his christening name, to be sure, but it was the name which had been carried on the payroll of the Pan-American Construction Company for more than a dozen years. Originally it had been E Pluribus Unum Jones, and whoever first made this application of the national motto had a nice sense of fitness, if not of reverence. For truly he was a Jones out of many. He was not as other Joneses. He was original, unique.

Among the few amusing traditions which the company had accumulated during its existence most of them had to do with Pluribus Jones. Being sent with a wrecking gang to pull down a condemned tenement block, he was found attacking with crowbars and screwjacks a brand new flat building in calm defiance of the frantic owner and panic-stricken tenants. It required a court injunction and a squad of police reserves to stop him. Someone had sent him to the wrong street.

He had other unusual traits, such as a fondness for wearing bizarre clothes, a passion for raising cabbages during his leisure summer hours, and a habit of throwing up his job about once in six months—always being persuaded to return to it next day. But mainly his distinguishing characteristic was a lack of self-confidence, an absence of initiative, an absolute dependence on the letter of his instructions.

Of most of these things Pinkey Barstow had heard, and he had chuckled over them. He had even hunted up Jones at his work and watched him with silent enjoyment. Now he was gazing at him with the enthusiasm of a discoverer as Mr. Jones sat on the edge of a chair in the vice-president's private office, hesitating whether to put his hat on the rug or hold it in his lap.

MR. JONES was not a handsome man, nor a big one. He was lean and undersized and of uncertain age, probably somewhere in the forties. Also he was amazingly plain featured, with a bristly, undecorative sandy mustache, a peculiar scar bisecting his left jaw, and one useless eye which stared stonily, sternly and unseeingly straight ahead, while the other shifted uncertainly this way and that.

This lack of personal attractiveness, however, rather increased than impaired his value to the Pan-American Construction Company. Under the baleful glare of that sightless eye a gang of Italian laborers would do more work in a day than any foreman could get out of them in three. And no wonder. Judging him by that bristly mustache, that bisected chin, that one bad eye, you might believe him capable of committing almost any atrocity, from plain assault and battery to multiple homicide.

YET at heart Pluribus was a mild, peace-loving person. His ordinary speaking voice was a low-pitched, apologetic monotone, although when he was deeply stirred it had in it a few squeakily harsh notes. He was almost a timid man, too, and had not chance bestowed on him a deceptive exterior he would have been generally bullied.

Such was the lieutenant whom Pinkey Barstow had chosen in this crisis of his affairs.

"Jones," said Barstow, beaming genially upon him, "you and I have got to get 150 tons of water-pipe delivered in New York within fifteen days. The foundry people say we can't have 'em. But we must. I want you to find a way to make those fellows loosen up. How soon can you start for Pittsburg?"

Pluribus Jones gasped. He could have been no more astonished had he been asked to take a wheelbarrow and dam the Hudson.

"Me, Mr. Barstow! You don't want me, do you?"

"Of course I want you. Why not?"

"But—but— Why, Mr. Barstow, I—I— couldn't—"

"Oh, yes, you could," interrupted Barstow soothingly. "You're the only man connected with this concern who can do it. I know it, because I've had an eye on you for the past few months. I've seen what's in you. Now don't bother me with details, for I don't know 'em; and don't fuss about expense. Go where you like, spend what you please, but get—that—pipe." Whereupon Pinkey Barstow put his heels on the closed cover of his roll-top desk and opened his morning paper to the sporting page.

MOPPING the perspiration from his forehead, Pluribus Jones retreated to the outer office, slumped into a chair, and remained in a dazed condition for fully half an hour. Then he roused and tiptoed to the door of Mr. Barstow's room. Pinkey beamed once at him over his newspaper, and gave him no more attention. Twice this performance was repeated. At 12:30 Mr. Barstow departed for luncheon, patting Mr. Jones on the back as he passed.

Then arose Pluribus Jones, demanding facts, figures, time-tables and a checkbook. The six-o'clock express bore him west. He was absent ten days. When he reappeared there were lines about his mouth corners, his forehead was wrinkled, his eyes were sunken. He announced that the water-pipes were on their way east.

With the vicissitudes attending the further progress of those water-pipes toward Guanica this narrative is not chiefly concerned. Doubtless the details would be interesting from an industrial or a technical standpoint. For there were vicissitudes. They began with a scarcity of South American bound steamers. How the half-owner and captain of the Norwegian banana-carrying tramp, King Olaf, was induced to accept cargo for a port two days' sail beyond his legitimate destination, how the voyage started with a bump from an East River car float, and was further enlivened by encountering a tropic-born hurricane off the island of Jamaica—these items must be accepted in a lump.

The eccentric behavior of a propeller blade during the storm, however, is of more or less importance. The blade had been cracked by contact with a piece of wreckage. Ultimately it was "raced off" the shaft, but instead of dropping quietly and decently to the bottom of the sea, it elected to be hurled violently through the stern plates, leaving a jagged hole exactly at the King Olaf's water-line. You could have thrown a cat through that hole. Promptly the Caribbean began pouring in faster than two steam-pumps could lift it out. To lighten the stern it was found necessary to shift part of the water-pipes to the forward deck, where they were piled hastily and promiscuously.

Thus it happened that when the rusty-funneled banana steamer, after some fifteen days of unquiet navigation, finally limped within sight of Guanica, she was woefully down by the head, steering like a mud-scow and looking like a floating foundry. Then, with the coveted port nearly gained, with a much-needed dry-dock almost within hail, the final blow fell.

PLURIBUS JONES had come below to make report of it. Leaning against a cabin stanchion, he gazed dolefully at Mr. Barstow.

That gentleman, although the hour was only eight in the evening, was reclining in his berth. This was because he spent most of his time there, not by reason of illness, but from choice. He was attired, as usual, in striped pajamas of baby blue and white. He had clasped his hands behind his head, revealing two bare forearms, dimpled at the elbow and of that fair softness of tint which made his nickname appropriate. Mr. Barstow was not posing. He had assumed that position in order to avoid being spilled out on the cabin floor, for the King Olaf was still wallowing most ungracefully over the perturbed surface of the Caribbean.

"Well, Pluribus," observed Pinkey Barstow, "I see that the old tub is still afloat. But why have they stopped her? Engines broken down?"

"It's worse than that, sir," gloomily responded Mr. Jones. "The engines are all right, but we can't go into port. We've just been warned to stay out."

A revolution, it seemed, was then in progress. The rebels had seized the Guanican navy, one second-class gunboat, and were about to try conclusions with the antiquated old fort which was supposed to guard the city. An outgoing coastliner had just hailed the King Olaf, bringing news of the state of affairs.

"That's interesting, eh?" commented Mr. Barstow. "And what does Captain Andersen say?"

"Say!" ejaculated Jones. "He says a lot. First he ups and cusses us and them water-pipes most outrageous. Then he says he's going to pitch 'em overboard and steam back to Jamaica after repairs and bananas."

"THROW our pipes overboard!" Mr. Barstow lifted himself on a dimpled elbow. "The deuce he is! Pluribus, you go up and tell that pie-faced old viking not to touch one of those pipes—not a single one."

"That's just what I've been a-doing, Mr. Barstow."

"Yes; and then?"

"Then he jumps for me with an iron belaying-pin and I guesses he means for me to go below—so I came."

Pinkey Barstow grinned appreciatively. "Pluribus, you're a mind-reader. Have you any idea what you're going to do next?"

"No, sir."

For a moment Mr. Barstow fixed on him those mild, blue eyes. Then he spoke, calmly and without passion. "Well, you're going back on deck and see that those pipes are not thrown overboard and that Captain Nudd Andersen takes this leaky old kettle straight into Guanica and ties her up at the nearest wharf."

The one good eye of Pluribus Jones stared in astonishment at the pajama-clad person in the berth.

"But, Mr. Barstow, the—the revolution. They'll be shooting cannon-balls all over the harbor. They'll"——

"See here, Jones; what have we come all the way down here for? To bring these water-pipes and lay 'em in the streets of Guanica, haven't we? And now that we're here, do you suppose we're going to be stopped by one of their dinky little revolutions? We are on a civil business. Those chaps will not dare shoot at us—couldn't hit us if they did. So you go on up and tell that fool captain to steam ahead. You seem to know how to tame him."

"But—but—" The complexion of Pluribus Jones had become a light pea-green under the rays of the swinging lamp. His lean fingers clasped and unclasped nervously.

NOT to make a mystery of these symptoms, Mr. Jones was frightened. He had less fear of the angry Norwegian captain, however, than of the responsibility involved. His face had not blanched during the hurricane. The management of the steamer had rested on other shoulders. He had smoked his pipe and watched the fury of the storm with an impersonal interest, like a spectator at a play. Nor had he been frightened when he had been chased below. No, Jones was not that kind of a coward. It was this being thrown on his own resources which made him quail.

"Bueno! Los Americanos!" exclaimed the frock-coated personage, delightedly. "That is excellent, senors, excellent."

But now, as previously, he began to feel the influence of those calm, confident eyes of Mr. Barstow. They were regarding him once more in a way that suggested a wonderful faith in him. Gradually the unhealthy hue faded from the cheeks of Pluribus Jones.

"Perhaps, Jones, you'll need that artillery of yours that we've lugged along. Better get it out."

MR. BARSTOW spoke with careless ease, just as if all obstacles had already been met and overcome. Reaching under his pillow, he brought forth his cigarette materials and proceeded to manufacture one. As he fitted a leaf of rice paper between the fingers of his left hand he glanced up at Pluribus and smiled. It was a most engaging smile, conveying as it did a hint of unbounded confidence in the object of it.

Jones hesitated no longer. Going to his own berth opposite, he pulled from a locker two long-barreled revolvers of big bore—blue-steeled, business-like appearing engines of sudden death. Then, buckling around his waist a leather belt bristling with cartridges, he started up the companion-way stairs.

On deck the preparations for jettisoning those objectionable pipes were under way. A derrick-boom had been rigged above the main hatch and the blocks were beginning to creak under the weight of a dozen six-inch pipes. Captain Nudd Andersen, wide-eyed, beetle-browed, bull-throated, looked up to see Mr. Jones coming forward. He had anticipated further argument, for he still gripped the iron belaying-pin.

This Jones, however, seemed a very different personage from the one who had so recently been chased below. Nor was the difference wholly due to the big revolvers and the cartridge belt. His whole bearing was formidable. There was a menacing look in those unmated eyes of his.

Mr. Jones wasted no time. Elevating one of his weapons to an angle of forty-five degrees directly above the captain's head, he pulled the trigger. The revolver spoke roaringly, and a forty-five calibre bullet flattened itself with a vicious spat against the steamer's funnel.

THE ensuing panic was immediate and comprehensive. The derrick tackle ceased creaking. The crew took to cover. Captain Andersen scrambled behind a water-butt and lay down, with his face to the deck. Again Jones fired, the bullet zipping through the forward rigging. There was no response. The King Olaf's crew contained no impromptu heroes. It was composed entirely of Norwegian sailormen, hired at a ridiculously low monthly wage, and not one of them had a desire to be shot at. Pluribus was master of the situation.

So, after a quarter of an hour's powwow between Mr. Jones and Captain Andersen, the latter emerged cautiously from behind the water-butt and gave the order to go ahead. Lumbering, the King Olaf got under way and made for the black mouth of the inner harbor that was outlined on either side by winking range lights. As she poked her junk-piled nose past the first of these lights those aft could make out a gunboat at anchor abreast the frowning walls of the distant fort. It was true, then. There were lights on the gunboat, and from her decks came the rattle of ammunition hoists and the shrill call of a bo'sun's whistle. She was clearing for action.

Mrs. Dumbly

A Little Nap.
In Her Quiet Flat.
Heavens, What Noises.
And Such Different Kinds.

DID you ever sleep in a flat? But what an absurd question. Few persons ever sleep in flats. The longer you've lived in a flat the less you're able to sleep in one. Don't I know? Don't I live in one? Didn't I spend two hours yesterday afternoon trying to sleep in it? Didn't I lie down and close my eyes and go—no, not to sleep, but to the door.

As I was about to utter the first snore the bell rang urgently, importantly. I answered it and found a beautiful young man, with blue eyes, a lovely smile and a raincoat with pen-and-ink hieroglyphics all over it.

"Oh, I'm so glad to find you at home," he said, turning a thousand-candle-power smile full on me.

"Yes?" I answered, gathering my bathrobe around me, so that my figure would be divine rather than divined.

"I have something to say to you," he said, softly, looking deeply into my eyes. "Something to ask you."

"Oh," I gasped, thrusting my toes deeper into my bedroom slippers, for though I am a married woman that personal tone—oh, well!

"Will you," he asked gently, his gaze becoming even more tender as he leaned forward, "will you help me through college? You have only to buy a subscription to The Housewife's Weekly Splurch, The Whatkno' Embroidery Special and Secret Sins."

"Help him through college," I muttered as I closed my eyes and covered myself up again. "Help him through college! The only question I'm interested in is, 'Who's going to help me to go to sleep?'"

"Me, me, me, me, me!" came the answer from across the court in high E flat. If there were as many flats in this block as there are in Mrs. Highnote's voice, the rent returns would soar as she sings.

I REALIZED as I listened that she needed those vocal lessons as badly as I needed sleep, so I closed my eyes and was about to make an attempt to sleep fast to make up for lost time when the telephone rang.

"When you sent my shirt home it was all out of whack," complained a masculine voice. "It was green when I sent it to you, but when you returned it it was pink and white striped, and it had grown to two sizes larger. Now, if you don't do something about it I'm going to ram it down your throat!"

"I've never seen your shirt," I replied. "I'm not interested in pink-and-white green shirts. I want to take a nap!"

"And I want to know who has my three collars?" he continued threateningly.

"Me-me-me-me-me," sang Mrs. Highnote.

"Isn't this the complaint department of the Acid Test Laundry?" he inquired.

"No," I answered. "It's a private complaint department."

And I laid down and covered myself up and closed my eyes while the vacuum cleaner on the floor above added its deep tones to the flathood symphony, the little dog in the court below barked a piccolo accompaniment and Mrs. Highhorse's angora cat out on the fire escape sang a light obligato.

"I'll just close my eyes and breathe deeply three times and see what happens," I decided. I did and the doorbell rang.

I opened the door and found myself confronted by a man who looked as if he'd stopped off on his way to a funeral.

"I'm very busy resting and sleeping," I told him.

"INDEED," he answered, shaking his head solemnly. "That takes us right up to the subject I wished to discuss with you. You have plenty of time now to sleep and rest, but how will it be with you in your old age? Have you decided to provide for your declining years when you will be feeble and old—perhaps an invalid—who knows? Have you ever thought what misfortunes may confront you in the future?"

"My heavens!" I said.

"Yes," he replied, sadly. "You must be ready should you fall prey to some disease. What if your husband should be killed tomorrow! What if you should be in a railroad accident! Think!"

"Good gracious!" I exclaimed.

"Now, your insurance policy"——

"You have been listening to the Daytime Blues, Station D A R N," cut in the radio from across the court.

"You came through all right, for once," I thought, as I slammed the door and lay down and covered myself up, listening to it as it continued. "You will now hear an imitation of a shrieking hyena by the famous animal imitator—eeeek wowo eeek."

Mrs. Highnotes: "Me-me-me-me-me-Tra-la-la-la-la!"

The radio: "Eeeeek-whoooooo, e'r'r'r'r'r ccccccc wheeeeee—Station D A M N."

The dog in the court: "Wuff, wuff, gr'r'r'r'r wow!"

The cat on the fire escape: "Phsit, pssst, psst, meow!"

The vacuum sweeper: "Whirr, whirrib'a r'a'a buzza!"

Mrs. Highnotes: "Pa-pa-pa-pa-pa!"

The radio: "Miss Daisy Dinglepot and Miss Susie Fishwhaker will sing 'Go to sleep, my little honey!'"

Me: "Blah!"

Ring Lardner

Gets Soft Job.
At Ticket Window.
Ring Advises Patrons.
Story of the Pretty Widow.

DR. PEARSON, on the day of my release from the hospital, warned me that I would have to be careful for at least a year and advised me not to turn to the nerve-racking profession of journalism.

"Get into some calmer line of work," he said; "something that won't be much of a physical or mental strain."

"What, for instance, Duck?" I inquired.

(Editor's note: The author doubtless meant to say "Doc.")

(Author's note: The author meant what he said. Pearson was a notorious quack.)

"The calmest, most leisurely calling I can think of," replied the doctor, "is that of a ticket agent in a large railroad terminal."

In compliance with this hint, I investigated and found that applicants for such a position were required to take a week's training. The training outfit consisted of a ticket rack, in which were tickets to every town in the country, arranged in alphabetical order; a flat shelf equipped with date stamps, pencils and pens, and an iron grating which separated the student from the practice customers.

The applicant had to report at 8 o'clock in the morning. His first duty was to brush the points of the pens and pencils and set the date stamps either six months behind or ahead of the current date. Then, all day long, until 6 in the evening, crowds of practice customers kept coming up and standing in front of the grating. The applicant was instructed to keep his eyes fixed firmly on the floor except twice during the day, when he might look at a customer and wait on him, there being a rule that no one agent may sell more than two tickets per diem.

THE first practice customer whom the applicant deigned to notice would, we will say, ask for a ticket to Baltimore. The applicant would look through the T's, M's, K's and any other six letters; then turn his attention to the B part of the rack and produce a ticket to Baltimore. He would then twirl his date stamp six months ahead or behind, as the case might be, and stamp the ticket. If the fare to Baltimore was $4.10, he would have to borrow a good pencil or pen from another applicant and write one under the other, the figures $4.00 and .10 on an envelope; then scratch his head and add them and write down the total—$4.10. The practice customer would then submit a $5 bill and the applicant would repeat to himself the names of all his friends in a painstaking effort to think of somebody who might have change.

I learned all these tricks easily and was given a position at one of the windows in Grand Central Station, New York. On the first day I lived up to the rules, looked at only two people and sold two tickets. But after that, my natural imaginativeness and individuality overcame my sense of duty and I proceeded to revolutionize the ticket-selling industry. One or two samples of my methods, and their results, may prove interesting.

A beautiful widow with two children asked for tickets to Peekskill.

"Madam," I said, "Peekskill has many attractions, but I think you would find Ardsley just as nice, and it's nearer and cheaper."

"All right, make it Ardsley," said she. "And how about my kiddies? Are they half-fare?"

"NOT half as far as their mummy," said I. "But, joking to one side, I think it is a mistake to take them at all. I know a fellow in Ardsley who wants to marry a widow, and I will gladly give you a letter of introduction to him. But he hates children and if you were to show up with these two, well, to put it mildly, whelps, your chances of matrimony would go glimmering."

"Mamma," whined one of the whelps, "let's go glimmering."

This remark may have settled the issue. At any rate, the little lady made the trip alone, leaving her children in the waiting room, where, I heard later, they were quite a nuisance for a couple of days after which they disappeared. Their mother married the Ardsley wight, who left her in four years with three new children, or none on what she had before, to say nothing of the superior quality of the later bunch.

On another occasion, my frankness led me into a lasting comradeship with Nora Bayes, who came to my window one afternoon and demanded a ticket to Albany and a lower berth to Syracuse.

"But, Miss Bayes," I remonstrated, "if you are only going to Albany, why do you want a berth 'o Syracuse?"

"Because I always sleep past my station," was her reply.

This struck me as so comical that I hurried up to the athletic field of the University of Columbia.

Story of the Pretty Widow.

DR. PEARSON, on the day of my release from the hospital, warned me that I would have to be careful for at least a year and advised me not to return to the nerve-racking profession of journalism.

"Get into some calmer line of work," he said; "something that won't be much of a physical or mental strain."

"What, for instance, Duck?" I inquired.

(Editor's note: The author doubtless meant to say "Doc.")

(Author's note: The author meant what he said. Pearson was a notorious quack.)

"The calmest, most leisurely calling I can think of," replied the doctor, "is that of a ticket agent in a large railroad terminal."

In compliance with this hint, I investigated and found that applicants for such a position were required to take a week's training. The training outfit consisted of a ticket rack, in which were tickets to every town in the country, arranged in alphabetical order; a flat shelf equipped with date stamps, pencils and pens, and an iron grating which separated the student from the practice customers.

The applicant had to report at 8 o'clock in the morning. His first duty was to break the points of the pens and pencils and set the date stamps either six months behind or ahead of the current date. Then, all day long, until 6 in the evening, crowds of practice customers kept coming up and standing in front of the grating. The applicant was instructed to keep his eyes fixed firmly on the floor except twice during the day, when he might look at a customer and wait on him, there being a rule that no one agent may sell more than two tickets per diem.

THE first practice customer whom the applicant deigned to notice would, we will say, ask for a ticket to Baltimore. The applicant would look through the T'S, M's, K's and any other six letters; then turn his attention to the B part of the rack and produce a ticket to Baltimore. He would then twirl his date stamp six months ahead or behind, as the case might be, and stamp the ticket. If the fare to Baltimore was $4.10, he would have to borrow a good pencil or pen from another applicant and write, one under the other, the figures $4.00 and .10 on an envelope; then scratch his head and add them and write down the total—$4.10. The practice customer would then submit a $5 bill and the applicant would repeat to himself the names of all his friends in a painstaking effort to think of somebody who might have change.

I learned all these tricks easily and was given a position at one of the windows in Grand Central Station, New York. On the first day I lived up to the rules, looked at only two people and sold two tickets. PLURIBUS JONES AND HOW HE CAME INTO HIS OWN

ON THE banana steamer terror, or a good imitation of it, reigned. Amidships were gathered most of the crew, pointing nervously at the warship and casting glances of appeal astern. Just forward of the after-cabin stood Captain Andersen and his mates, exchanging gruff whispers. Against the taffrail leaned Pluribus Jones, one of his big revolvers in either hand, and his good eye fixed sternly on the man at the wheel. Mr. Jones was getting nervous, too.

At this critical moment a high-pitched shout of warning arose from the gunboat. The next instant the white finger of a searchlight was stretched out across the dark water and touched tentatively the King Olaf's quarter deck. As Mr. Jones turned his dazzled eyes away from the blinding light his gaze fell upon Pinkey Barstow, who, immaculate in white ducks, had just emerged from the companionway. Then a gun boomed on the warship, and off to the leeward was heard a sousing splash. The knot of Norwegian sailors in the waist ducked as one man.

"The beggars meant that for us, didn't they, Jones?" observed Mr. Barstow.

"I—I guess they did," admitted Jones faintly.

"Well, they mustn't do it again. We'll run in a little nearer, Jones, and then you take a boat and go over and tell 'em to stop. Tell 'em you'll send for the whole United States Navy if they don't."

"Yes, sir, I'll tell 'em. I'll get ready right away." There was a note of relief in the voice of Pluribus Jones. Once more his responsibility had been shifted. All that remained now was to obey orders, and, compared to acting for himself, that was easy.

EAGERLY, he darted down into the cabin. When he reappeared he was wonderfully garbed. About his spare form hung in loose folds a long-skirted policeman's coat, with two rows of brass buttons up and down the front. On his head was a huge fireman's helmet, one of those garnished leather affairs, with a shield in front and an eagle's head on top.

"I see you have your visiting clothes on, Jones," suggested Mr. Barstow. "Are you all ready?"

"Yes, sir; all ready."

The King Olaf was stopped. Jones ordered a boat lowered, and when it was in the water, singled out a sailor to accompany him. Sullenly the man dropped into the boat and took up the oars. Off into the uncertain haze of cloud-filtered moonlight went Pluribus Jones on his audacious errand.

Really, it was more than audacity. To most of those on the King Olaf's deck it looked like sheer folly. Why Pinkey Barstow should send Jones on such a foolhardy enterprise no one will ever know. Mr. Barstow himself did not know at the time, as he has since confessed. Perhaps it was merely an impulse born of utter desperation, perhaps it was prompted by a reckless desire to discover just how strong was his control over the pliable Pluribus. To those who knew him best, Pinkey Barstow could be accounted for only in algebraic terms: Let x equal the unknown quantity, which was Pinkey. That Mr. Barstow had no definite plan beyond sending Jones off to the insurgent gunboat the subsequent events clearly showed.

The noise of the oars grew fainter and fainter, and died away. Five minutes passed—ten. Over the darkened harbor of Guanica settled an ominous silence. There lay the gunboat, her lights still shining, but no more cannon shot boomed across the water. Off to port, nearly two miles away, loomed the black bulk of the silent fort; beyond that, rising tier on tier as the streets climbed the hills, glimmered the capital of Guanica.

Half an hour elapsed without word or sign from the gunboat. What did they mean to do? Did they intend to fire on the steamer again or would they begin their duel with the fort? And what was happening to Jones?

Finally, coming faintly but distinctly, was heard a hail:

"Oh, Bar-stow!"

It was the voice of Pluribus Jones.

"What—do you—want?" roared Pinkey, through his hands.

"Come—over—here; I've—got—the—gunboat," responded the invisible Jones.

Incredible as the import of the words might be, there could be no mistaking it, for the shrill voice of Pluribus had good carrying qualities.

"Got the gunboat!" echoed Pinkey Barstow, staring blankly at the bull-throated Captain Andersen. "What the dence do you suppose he means by that?"

"I dank he go looney by himself," growled the sailor.

"Well, you're mistaken, captain. If Jones says he's got the gunboat, then he has. We'd best run over and see. Get under way."

The King Olaf's commander grumbled some, but gave the order, and within a few minutes the banana steamer was laid alongside the warship, and Mr. Barstow had transferred himself to her deck. He was greeted by Pluribus Jones, who, unharmed, unfettered, the fire helmet cocked rakishly over one ear, swaggered forward with the air of a conqueror.

"I've got a warship here, Mr. Barstow, and I'd like to know what to do with it," was his salutation.

"Pluribus, what the devil do you mean by saying that you've got the gunboat? Where's the crew?"

"Blessed if I know, Mr. Barstow. There wasn't a soul aboard when I got here. I could hear them rowing off down the harbor, and when I got to the ship there wasn't one of 'em left. I couldn't tell 'em what you said, of course, so I just climbed up and took possession."

AND that was all there was to it. It was a mystery—a full-fledged, life-size mystery. Search as they might, they could find no clew to it. On the decks were certain traces of confusion and hasty departure. The six-pounders had been cast loose and prepared for action. There were the swab-buckets and the piles of solid shot, just as the gunners had left them. In the cabin articles of uniforms were scattered about, while rummaged lockers spoke of a sudden leave-taking.

A 45-caliber bullet flattened itself with a vicious spat against the steamer's funnel.

But what had been the cause? Why should the Guanican rebels abandon their prize just at the moment when they were about to train her guns on the old fort? Mr. Barstow gave it up.

As for Jones, he was not interested in the conundrum. The one important fact to him was that, unaided, single-handed, and of his own motion, he had captured a warship. No one had told him to do it. The feat had not even been suggested. But he had done it. Here was substantial evidence of his achievement. Moment by moment he straightened and stiffened. He held his chin well up. He wagged his head when he talked. His stride became a strut. With a delicious air of proprietorship he conducted Pinkey Barstow about the gunboat, finally leading him up to the bridge.

"I'm going to have a look at that fort," he declared, swinging the searchlight around and fumbling with the switch keys.

Presently he found the proper combination, and a broad, white ray leaped over the water. Out of the distant darkness jumped the crumbling bastions and moldy casements of Guanica's century-old moro. As the circle of light swung up the walls the central tower was revealed, and they saw that from a staff a flag was floating.

"Jones, isn't that a white flag?" demanded Mr. Barstow.

"I should say it was white."

"Then the fort must have surrendered."

"Yes," observed Mr. Jones complacently, "I expect I've captured that, too."

Never did Roman General thundering down the Via Appia with his victorious legions at his heels enjoy a keener satisfaction than was granted to Pluribus Jones there on the deck of Guanica's only gunboat. His pose was superb. Thrusting one hand between the brass buttons of the police coat's capacious breast, squaring his shoulders anew, he gazed at the white rag that waved dejectedly above the old tower.

"Do you know, Mr. Barstow, this is the first warship I ever took, and that's the only fort I ever captured? It's a funny feeling, ain't it?"

With never a smile on his bland features, Pinkey Barstow turned and held out his hand.

"Mr. Jones, allow me to congratulate you. But you were bound to do it sooner or later. I knew that long ago."

"Honest, Mr. Barstow? Did you think I could?"

"Think! Why, I was certain of it from the first."

ALONG, deeply-breathed sigh of content escaped from Mr. Jones. With it he breathed out the last of his unreliance on self. From then on he was captain of his soul.

It was not until the gray, uncertain dawn of the next morning that the mystery was solved. Mr. Jones had borrowed the King Olaf's engineer and second mate and had run his warship in beside Guanica's biggest pier for purposes of reconnoiter, when there approached from the shore a little band led by an imposing personage who wore a frock coat and held above his shiny silk hat a cane, on which had been tied a white handkerchief.

"Ah, a truce party," observed Barstow, lighting a fresh cigarette and peering over the rail. "Now, perhaps, we'll learn what some of this means. You talk to them, Jones, you're the doctor."

The imposing personage spoke first in Spanish, eloquently and at some length, but Jones only shook his head. French was tried next, with no better result.

"Can't any of you talk English?" demanded Jones autocratically.

"Bueno! Los Americanos!" exclaimed the frock-coated personage delightedly. "That is excellent, senors, excellent! You will understand, therefore, that we come to protest against a barbarity. His excellency, el Presidente, and his councillors have fled to the mountains. The army has fled, also. Surely, you will not forbire hurl your dynamite among innocent women and children and peaceful citizens. You will not destroy our beautiful city with your dreadful armed privateer?"

"Armed privateer!" Mr. Jones was more puzzled by the English words than he had been by those of a foreign tongue.

Not so Pinkey Barstow. Following with his eyes the direction in which the silk-hatted personage had waved his hand, Mr. Barstow's gaze had been turned to the King Olaf, which still swung at anchor in the harbor. Never did the banana steamer look her character less. Projecting from either side of her bow was an 18-inch water main, giving to her, from that distance and in that light, a most formidable and warlike appearance.

A FEW queries put to the leader of the truce party elicited corroborative facts. Yes, an armed merchantman had been expected. Both the Government and the revolutionists had threatened to buy her, both had sent agents to the United States for that purpose. He of the frock-coat expressed the hope that the insurgents would be content with a peaceful victory, would not test the dynamite-throwing qualities of their destroyer on the town.

Mr. Barstow grinned and took Pluribus to one side.

When the honorable President of Guanica, with his honorable councillors and his breathless army, was summoned back from the mountains, when all those valiant gentlemen learned that they had been scared out of their capital by a storm-battered banana steamer laden with iron water pipes, they were more or less chagrined. But when they discovered that the victorious insurgents had been scared just as badly, if not worse, and had lost their stolen gunboat in the bargain, then they felt better.

First of all, they laughed, loud and long. They embraced each other, after the manner of the Latins. Lastly, they looked upon the unhandsome features of Pluribus Jones, observed the self-confidence with which he bore himself, the air of authority with which he spoke, and, marveling much, they hailed him as a hero and the savior of Guanica. Jones did not deny it.

THEY began by holding a reception in his honor on the plaza. Then they presented to him a purse of gold, accompanied by a Latin-inscribed parchment, on which were set forth the details of his heroism and the country's gratitude. A few enthusiasts clamored for a bronze monument of him to be erected opposite that of the great Bolivar, but this enterprise Jones discouraged. All that he desired, he said, was a gang of workmen to lay his water pipes through the streets of Guanica, as per contract. The Minister of War promptly put a regiment at his disposal and lodged him luxuriously in the Government palace while the work progressed. Also, his friend, the Honorable Barstow, was similarly favored.

And when the job was completed, more than a month inside the forfeit limit, the high officials accompanied the departing Jones and his friend to the harbor mouth on the restored gunboat, with the Government's best band playing American jazz songs and salute guns banging at the rate of two a minute.

At last "the tumult and the shouting died." The two had retired to the after-deck of the coast liner, away from the curious eyes of the other passengers.

"There was a time," observed Mr. Jones reflectively, as he gazed back at the disappearing harbor mouth, "when I wouldn't have believed I could do the things I've done since I first sighted that place—capturing a warship and all that."

Mr. Barstow laid a fraternal hand on his shoulder and spoke as one who voices an old conviction.

"But you were bound to do something of the kind some time, Jones; it was in you."

"Yes, I suppose that's right," assented Pluribus Jones.

TEARING THE TINSEL FROM G. WASHINGTON

well with the church folk, though he was not a vestryman, and it was practically necessary to hold that quasi-political office before one could hope to be a Burgess. Furthermore, the less reputable elements had equally to be enticed, and he was in poor standing with the politicians.

He was, however, in the worst possible estate for a candidate. He had disgusted all the good horse dealers who flocked to Braddock's army with their equine wreckage, for he denounced them in unbridled language as corrupt traitors and jobbers in human life. So the rural vote was against him.

The saloon vote was also enthusiastically against him; for he had fought the tippling houses with all his might and had flayed the drunken soldiers with great vigor and regularity. He had furthermore tried to close up many drinking resorts, including that of one Lindsay, a local boss of power.

THE election was held in Washington's absence. There were three candidates, and he made a very poor third. Out of 581 voters, only 40 voted for him. Hugh West Jr. was re-elected by 271 votes, and Thomas Swearingen got in with 270, although (or because) he was "a man of great weight among the meaner class of people," as Washington wrote.

It was a stinging rebuke to a dry candidate, and Washington resolved that the next election should be as wet as need be.

In the meanwhile, this chagrin, added to his other chagrins, all but broke his spirit. He had been defeated in everything he had undertaken. Probably nobody ever lived who accumulated more defeats than Washington. Yet he was never really defeated.

His historians usually write of him as if he always knew the destiny that Providence selected him for, and for him. They describe him as so silent and strong and serene that he might almost have foreknown that on a March day 35 years later he would be inaugurated for his second term as the unanimously elected and reelected President of the divinely constructed United States.

But the pitiful victim of defeat upon defeat, disgrace, abuse, frustration, blazing with fever and sick with dysentery, cowered alone at Mount Vernon and reviewed a life of miseries almost unbroken, and resigned himself to "an approaching decay."

There was not even a woman to love him. He had no hope of that "domestic felicity" which was perhaps the chief of his desires.

Then he met Martha Custis and wooed her. In wooing Martha Custis he was certainly doing the wise thing, but he was escaping from romance and compromising with his soul. This he did from no choice of his own, but, perhaps, because of his inability to persuade Sally Fairfax to be as madly rash as he was ready to be.

THE contrast of Martha with Sally was complete. Washington could not have talked long with her before he realized that she was neither well educated nor eager to be. Her letters must be an index of her mind, and they are spelled almost as badly as the letters of George Washington's mother—worse, even, than the spelling of George's writing before he met Sally, who may or may not have had some influence on the marked change in the nature of his written thoughts and their expression.

Sally was the great lady, the essential aristocrat. Martha was the pure housewife at her best—and worst. She was prophetically named Martha.

Her interest in Washington may have been one of instant love, for he was a noted soldier, already the commander-in-chief of all the Virginia troops. And Virginia was the world. He was tall and handsome, too. But the canny housewife had her share in her decision, for Mr. Washington was a very able man. He had already acquired a good deal of property for a soldier, and he was on his way to becoming one of the biggest land speculators in the country. At this time he was land poor and deeply involved in debt. But she may not have known that. He probably did not emphasize it. She had a natural taste for the easy profits that come from money lending. He was fond of that business, too.

She was a widow with two ready-made children, but Washington had an extraordinary affection for children, and there was every reason to expect that she would bring him some of his own.

Martha burned almost all their correspondence after his death, as ruthlessly as many another widow has destroyed her husband's letters, but with how much more loss to history, and to her husband!

Out of all the mass of them that he must have written, there remains only one relic of their betrothal, a brief note written four days before his election:

"July 20, 1758.—We have begun our march for the Ohio. A courier is starting for Williamsburg, and I embrace the opportunity to send a few words to one whose life is now inseparable from mine. Since that happy hour when we made our pledges to each other, my thoughts have been continually going to you as another Self. That an all-powerful Providence may keep us both in safety is the prayer of your ever-faithful and affectionate friend."

This celebrated letter is so brief in its fervor that it makes a bewildering contrast with the long, long letters he was soon dispatching to Sally Fairfax.

THERE he sits in the camp and in the secrecy of his tent pours out his tortured soul. It is a fearful secret and it must be kept.

"You have drawn me, dear Madame, or rather I have drawn myself, into an honest confession of a simple Fact. Misconstrue not ... nor expose it. The world has no business to know the object of my love, declared in this manner to you, when I want to conceal it."

This is George Washington writing. It's none of the world's business who the object of my love is. It will soon know that Mrs. Custis is to be my wife, and that is all it needs to know.

The campaign was over. Washington returned and married Martha Custis.

Liquor of all kinds he loved and manufactured, imported, gave away and consumed in vast quantities. Where Charles Lamb won a bad name as a little sot because anything over a thimbleful went to his head, Washington was always drinking, but never drunk.

IN time, Washington began to add to his estate, not hundreds of acres, but tens of thousands of acres, and to cast his eyes westward with an enthusiasm that only later events of a revolutionary nature turned back to the North and East.

For the present he was an English squire on English soil, far from wars and rumors of wars. The thought of a rebellion against his King, if it entered his brain, went out again at once as a silly fantasy.

As late as 1775, in writing to George William Fairfax, then in England, he laid the blame for the battle of Lexington on "the ministerial troops (for we do not, nor can we yet prevail upon ourselves to call them the King's troops) ... if the retreat had not been as precipitate as it was, and God knows it could not well have been more so, the ministerial troops must have surrendered. ... Unhappy it is, though to reflect, that a brother's sword has been sheathed in a brother's breast."

He was pleading with the Fairfaxes to understand his feelings, and he signed himself, "with sincere regard and affectionate compliments to Mrs. Fairfax."

If he could write so, after Lexington, and go on protesting his loyalty when he was once more a soldier and the commander-in-chief of a larger body of provincials, no wonder he wrote earlier, on October 9th, 1774, to persuade his old comrade and fellow-Virginian, Captain Robert Mackenzie, that he was "abused, grossly abused," by the strange people who were telling him "that the people of Massachusetts are rebellious, setting up for independency, and what not."

GIRL OF YESTERDAY truly describes the portrait-study by William Auerbach-Levy which is reproduced as the cover of this issue of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, by courtesy of the City Art Museum of St. Louis, where the picture has been shown recently as a part of the annual American exhibition of paintings.

The painter is better known as an etcher, and the fine technic of which he is master—whether working on plate or canvas—is manifest in the brushwork of this painting. Against a background of greenish tint the sitter is placed, her face turned from the painter as she sits in a curious, old-fashioned walnut chair. Her full gown is of bluish purple, her dark brown hair bound with a ribbon of dark blue.

The stark simplicity of the subject and its treatment are characteristic of the painter, who was born in Russia, February 14, 1889, and studied in the National Academy of Design in New York and at the Julian Academy under Laurens, in Paris. He is now an instructor of etching at the National Academy of Design and with the Educational Alliance in New York.

SIKORSKY'S FIGHT AGAINST ILL FORTUN

Igor Sikorsky and Rene Fonck (right), pilot of the ill-fated S-35.

Pioneer Aeronautical Engineer Saw His Fortune Wiped Out by the Revolution. Hampered by Insufficient Funds He Has Persisted and Succeeded. Today He Is One of the World's Foremost Flying Ship Designers.

By STEWART JACKSON

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

WHEN the great, gray hulk of that rakish, three-motored sky hawk, the biplane S-35, zoomed across the grassy stretches of Roosevelt Field at Westbury, Long Island, in its unsuccessful attempt at a non-stop airplane flight from New York to Paris, the moment realized the life ambition of one of the strangest, most efficient, most likable, most self-effacing personalities the history of aviation has ever known.

That moment was the culmination of the dreams of the designer and builder of the great air transport, Baron Igor I. Sikorsky, once a wealthy landed gentleman of Kiev in the regime of the Czar of All the Russias, later known as the Orville Wright of the Romanoff Empire, still later a financially wrecked exile from the land of his fathers—the land for which he had created the science of aviation—and today the humble citizen of Mineola, Long Island, president of the Sikorsky Engineering and Manufacturing Company. That the attempt was a failure, that the plane was wrecked, with a cost of two lives, is due to no shortcoming on the part of Sikorsky.

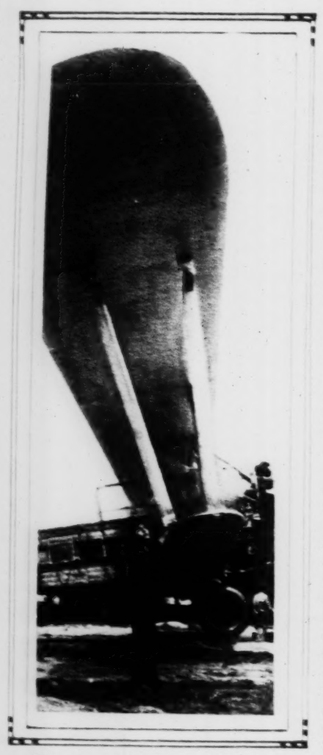
Aviation engineers the world over know Baron Sikorsky — but few others. He never talks about himself but about his plans, and in his seven years of residence in America this is the first interview he has ever granted. He is backward, diffident, but gentlemanly and pleasing. All of the things of the old life in Russia are not for him; when he speaks it is of hundred-horsepower motors and wing lifts.

Married and the father of three small children, 37 years old although he looks older, for he has packed the experiences of many years into the last 10, he has become an American citizen. But Sikorsky is far from wealthy. In spite of the fact that he is perhaps the world's best-known planner of large, multi-passenger air transports. All of his life has been spent for an ideal, spent in mapping out plans which others will tell you were 10 years ahead of their time. Fame and glory do not touch him.

The peculiar thing about Sikorsky is that he does not consider anyone his competitor. They are all his friends, for are they not all trying to advance the science of aviation?

But Sikorsky, shy though he may be personally, is not shy when it comes to his beliefs and plans. "I am prepared," he said the other day, "to build airplanes of almost any dimensions, planes that will carry 100 to 200 passengers and that will easily fly from New York to Paris.

"However, I do not believe that flights any longer than that will be practical, and as a commercial proposition flights of more than 2000 miles probably will not be common. Beyond that point the space and weight allowances for fuel will interfere with efficient operation."



The giant Sikorsky biplane, S-35.

The construction of the big S-35 was due not only to the perseverance of Sikorsky but a great deal of the credit must go to one of the strangest colonies of men gathered together in the vicinity of New York—a colony of 25 Russians, all of them expert airplane engineers, draftsmen, machinists, mechanicians and pilots, who have for five years labored at Roosevelt Field under the leadership of the master—Sikorsky—that a giant of the air might be built by man to conquer the Atlantic and to put air transport on a big scale before the world.

MOST of these men are refugees from the soviets — intelligentsia who were forced out when the red hordes swept away the polished civilization of the older empire. Many of them knew Sikorsky in Russia. Many did not, but all of them knew of him as Russia's greatest aeronautical engineer, and when they drifted to America they looked him up. He could not promise them high wages, for he was living on almost nothing himself. They cheerfully gripped his hand, one by one, and told him they didn't want wages but just a chance to eat and sleep and work out his dreams. So he took them out to Westbury, quartered them in hangars and sheds, and today those 25 Russians, one of them Baron Nicholas Solodieoss, a member of the highest Romanoff nobility, are still working for Sikorsky. They have missed many paydays, but they have never complained. All they asked was a chance to stand or fall with their chief.

Born in Kiev, Russia, on May 25, 1889, Igor I. Sikorsky was the son of a wealthy noble, who was professor of psychology at the University of Kiev and a scientist well known throughout Russia.

As early as 1908, while a student at the Polytechnic Institute at Kiev, young Sikorsky became keenly interested in aviation. In that year and the year following he built two helicopters, the first airplanes of any kind ever constructed in Russia. These makeshift affairs were only moderately successful, due to Sikorsky's inability to get a motor which combined sufficient power with low weight. During these two years, however, he built several sleds, driven by propellers, which functioned successfully.

In 1910 Sikorsky built a biplane with a wing spread of 27 feet and equipped with a 15-horsepower motor. Due to its low power, this first plane merely hopped off the ground for short stretches. The following year he built five planes, three of which crashed in flight. The first of these five, which was called the S-2, was equipped with a 20-horsepower Anzani motor and reached an altitude of 30 to 40 feet for flights of short duration. With the S-5, using a 50-horsepower motor, Sikorsky reached an altitude of 2000 feet and established what was then a world's record of 70 miles an hour, carrying three passengers.

With the entry in 1912 of the Russian Baltic Car factory into the airplane field Igor Sikorsky became its chief engineer. In 1913 he brought out the first multi-motored airplane in the world.

This craft and the father of the multi-motored idea, of which Sikorsky has always been the pioneer, was the S-6, and with its four 100-horsepower engines it created a sensation in Europe, particularly with its ability to fly on three of its four motors.

When the war came to Russia, Sikorsky was appointed technical adviser to the chief of the Aerial Fleet of the Russian Army.

Production was immediately started under Sikorsky's direction of four-motored bombers. These were the first heavy bombers used in the war, and enjoyed a brilliant record of successful raids over the German and Austrian enemy lines, with the loss of only one plane.

With the revolution of 1917 came the cessation of all airplane work in Russia and the danger to every noble or member of the intelligentsia. Sikorsky, once wealthy and powerful, gathered up the scraps of his shattered family fortune, practically nothing, and sadly left for Paris. Here he continued work as an airplane designer for the French Government. After the signing of the armistice, or early in 1919, Igor Sikorsky went to New York and worked for several months on salary as a designer of planes for various commercial firms.

It was at this time that he began to gather under his wing the 25 expatriated engineers, and, after spending several years earning enough money to start work for himself on a modest scale, he took these Russians out to Roosevelt, Long Island, and began work on his twenty-ninth airplane.

By this time Sikorsky had spent every available dollar he had in the construction of the plane and, as a result, he was compelled to use two antiquated 200-horsepower motors, which considerably underpowered the ship and made a smashup inevitable.

The next planes designed and built by Sikorsky were intended principally as training and messenger planes. But with the building of the S-35, made possible by joining hands with Lieutenant-Colonel Harold E. Hartney, a retired army officer, who formed the Argonauts Company and financed the Paris flight, Sikorsky believes that he has created the strongest military bomber and the most efficient commercial plane in the world.

"WITH a stop at Newfoundland for refueling," he says, "it will be perfectly feasible to maintain a New York-Paris service with a plane of the S-35 type. Believing that, with the present speed with which aviation is developing, any successful plane of today can only hold its supremacy for two or three years at the most, I am now working on plans which I believe will meet the aviation requirements of the next decade.

"The S-35 has come up to the exact calculated performance, so I am fully convinced that my designs of planes several times its size can be as accurately forecast and will be practicable.

"Another plane upon which I shall bend my efforts this fall and winter is a six-passenger, twin-motored amphibian ship, which will be able to fly with one motor."

Sikorsky gives a great share of the credit for the building of the ill-fated S-35 to Colonel Hartney. Hartney is an official of the Sikorsky Manufacturing Company and Sikorsky is an official of the Argonauts, backers of the Paris flight, so the two men are closely associated.

Colonel Hartney has had one of the most colorful careers of all American birdmen. For many years an officer in the regular army, he took up flying and during the war was a Colonel in command of the First Pursuit Group in France. Hartney, an intrepid fighting airman, has half a dozen German planes to his credit.

With the armistice he returned to the States and the Air Service [illegible] regular army, with the permanent rank of Major. It was in the fall of 1919 that he crashed at Omaha, Nebraska, in the transcontinental air race and his left leg was amputated above the knee following the wreck. He retired then from the army with the permanent rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, returned to civil life to become an independent supporter of commercial aviation.

Only lack of funds to construct a factory has kept Sikorsky and his [illegible] from becoming national factors in the postal, commercial and war plane fields.

When the Government opened bids for army bombers Sikorsky won the competition. He was thrown out of the competition before the ships were made at McCook Field because he had no factory facilities for turning out the ships as fast as the government needed them.

Drafting Lessons FREE

Actually!

—to prove you can learn at Home, in spare time!

We have developed a new, simplified way to teach Drafting, the first real improvement in Drafting home-instruction in many years! Thousands of students are making such rapid progress with this new method, and those who finish are so quickly successful that we have arranged for you to see it. TRY it, without one penny of cost or obligation. We will send you, absolutely FREE, three Drafting lessons, the same material sent to those who pay their money and enroll, so you can see for yourself how interesting and EASY this new instruction has been made!

Draftsmen WANTED
$60 to $125 a Week!

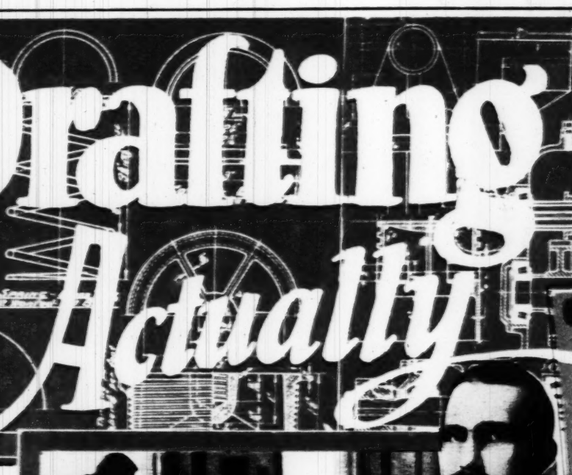
The want ads are full of big-pay Drafting Jobs. No wonder, when you consider the wheels of industry would stop turning without Draftsmen or plans! 70,000 fine positions open in past 12 months! Get ready to fill one. By our methods YOU CAN, and quickly. Here's your chance to get out of the rut, to make something more than a clerk or day laborer of yourself. To get into the highest paid line of work you can find. Even if you have only common schooling, lend me an hour or two of an evening, and I'll make you a REAL Draftsman or refund your money. Surprise offer to every man who answers this ad immediately.

EASY TERMS!

If you are now earning less than $40 a week, if you want to make a weekly salary of $60 to $125 instead, get in touch with me at once. I'll make terms so easy you can't afford NOT to get this wonderful instruction.

5 Highways to Success!

The BIG money in Drafting goes to men who SPECIALIZE, who know more than mere "mechanical drawing." Now, for the first time, you can get this advanced training AT HOME. You can take your choice of specialized work in Machine design, Electrical Drafting, Architectural drafting, Automotive drafting, or Structural drafting.



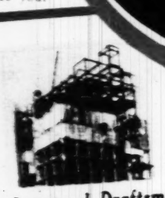
The Draftsman is the BOSS of the JOB. By his plans he frequently controls the work of thousands of laborers. You can't begin to imagine how INTERESTING this work is. What a fine bunch of fellows you work with. Or how easy it is to get a well-paid position when you "know your stuff" as we train you to know it.

Mechanical Draftsmen WANTED!

Big demand right now for Draftsmen who have specialized in MACHINE DESIGN. This is one of the well-paid branches you may choose, after you complete the general instruction in the early part of the course.

Electrical Draftsmen WANTED!

The world's greatest, fastest growing industry offers wonderful positions and salaries to men who, in addition to a knowledge of mechanical drawing, know enough Electrical Engineering to calculate and plan Electrical WORK. So if you decide to specialize in this interesting branch of Drafting, we prepare you specifically for these jobs and large salaries.



Structural Draftsmen WANTED!

In public works, great buildings, bridges, every kind of structure with a steel or reinforced concrete framework, Draftsmen are in demand. Hundreds of millions dollars' worth of hotels, theaters, skyscrapers, and institutions now being erected require the services of more Structural Draftsmen than can be found. Men who can take Experts' plans for steel and concrete work, calculate and design steel and concrete work, calculate and design steel and concrete work, particular and design steel and concrete work, particular and design steel and concrete work, particular

FRESH FRUIT

"The delicious fragrance of ripe, fresh fruit"

-its fragrance tells you . .

"The moment you open the package, the fresh fruit odor comes flying out!"

"At once my whole family noticed the real fruit flavor."

"The flavor is true to the fruit."

SO they write us—thousands upon thousands of women, who have bought Royal Fruit Flavored Gelatin and come back, delighted, for more.

Only from the pure juice of the ripe fruit do Royal Strawberry, Raspberry, and Cherry derive their delicious flavor. The cool refreshing taste of Royal Orange and Royal Lemon comes from the oils of the citrus fruits themselves.

You can rely on the purity and merit of Royal Fruit Flavored Gelatin, just as you have always relied on that of Royal Baking Powder. Ask for it by name at your grocer's. In the red package, the same color as the Royal Baking Powder can.

FIVE FLAVORS

Strawberry, Raspberry, Cherry — with delicious flavor from the fruit juices. Orange and Lemon with delicious flavor from Oil of Orange and Oil of Lemon.

SUPERIOR SALAD: Season one cream cheese and put small amount in cavities of 3 or 6 halves of canned pears. Dissolve one package Royal Strawberry Gelatin in 1 cup boiling water. Add 1 cup canned pear juice, 1 tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice and ¼ teaspoon salt. When mixture begins to thicken put enough in large plain mould to coat sides. Arrange pears around sides with cheese side down. Arrange strips of pimiento in design between pears. Fill mould with remaining gelatin mixture and chill until firm. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves with mayonnaise or French dressing. Pineapple may be used instead of pears. Serves 6.

DANDRUFF?

Now you can control it!

You need worry no more about dandruff, that unsightly nuisance, so embarrassing to both women and men.

As you probably know, dandruff is a germ disease that no intelligent, fastidious person can afford to neglect. Because so often it is a warning of more serious scalp trouble—possibly baldness.

There is one ideal treatment to control dandruff conditions—the systematic use of Listerine, the safe antiseptic. It really works wonders this way.

The use of Listerine for dandruff is not complicated. You simply douse it on your scalp, full strength, and massage thoroughly. You'll enjoy the cleansing refreshing effect. And you will be amazed to see how this treatment, followed systematically, does the trick.

Moreover, Listerine will not discolor the hair nor will it stain fabrics. And it is not greasy.

Try Listerine for dandruff. You'll be delighted with the results.—Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

How the Garwoods' furniture money buys more beauty as well as more furniture

THERE was the whole house to furnish. So the Garwoods made up their minds to find furniture in which beauty did not mean extravagance . . . naturally that led them to the Cavalier dealer.

Finished beauty

Cavalier Furniture—bedroom and dining room—is made to give you extra value. In style and finish it rivals furniture far more costly. In sheer beauty, its rich, carefully matched, full-grain walnut veneering challenges the field, regardless of price.

Prove to yourself that honest value is an in-built feature of Cavalier. Examine several pieces. Notice the firm strength they have—graceful, but built to last. Look at the backs of dressers and buffets. You'll find them neatly finished, even though they are hidden. And the drawers slide smoothly on generous, oversize guides. Every piece of Cavalier Furniture bears a tag guaranteeing fine construction. It is your protection, so watch for it, and also for the figure of the Cavalier that appears only on the genuine.

See your dealer

If you want your furniture dollars to buy more, have a talk with your Cavalier dealer. He has studied furniture. You can depend upon his advice. And he'll tell you that Cavalier offers a truly remarkable combination of high quality at moderate prices.

Pictures of Health . .

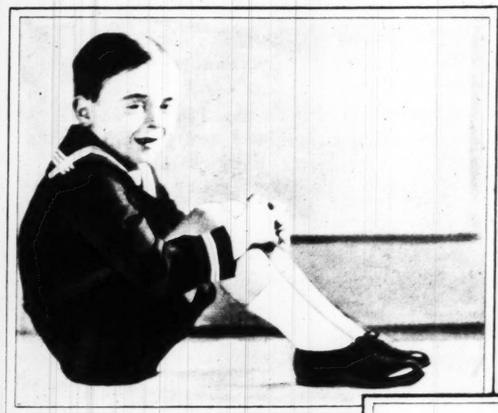
They conquered the common ills—found glorious vital health—by eating one simple food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active, daily releasing new stores of energy.

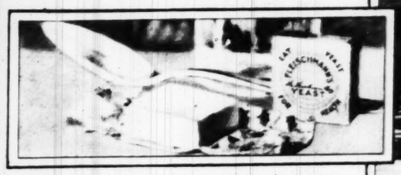
Eat two or three cakes regularly every day, one before each meal: on crackers, in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, in small pieces. For constipation dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and at bedtime. Dangerous habit-forming cathartics will gradually become unnecessary. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days.

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-921, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

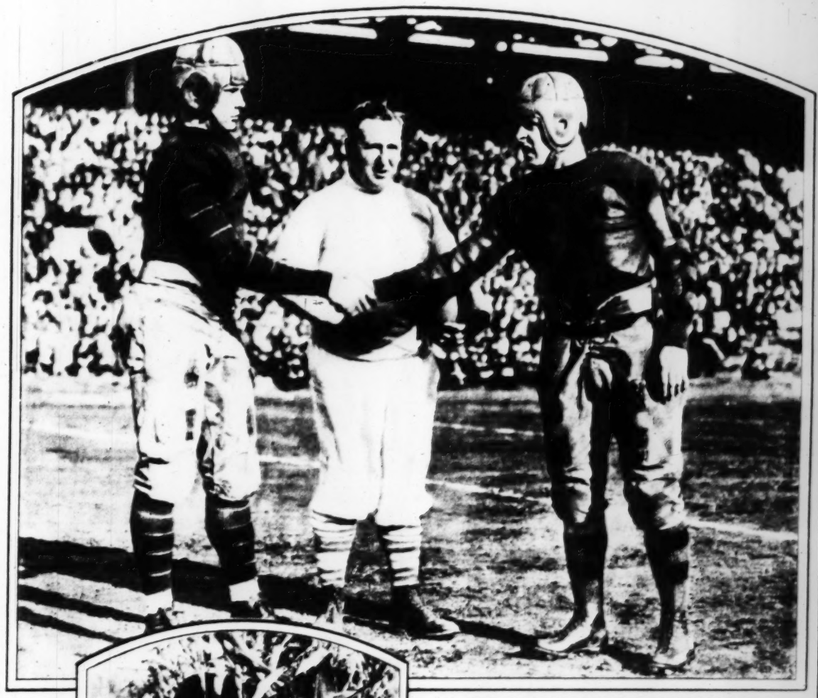


"SINCE MY LITTLE BOY HAD PNEUMONIA I have given him Yeast to build him up. He has improved rapidly. I find too that I never have to give him a laxative. With Yeast he is absolutely regular."
Mrs. Felix Griffin, Baltimore, Md.

"CONSTIPATION WAS MAKING ME ILL. I suffered from intestinal pains at all times. One of my friends suggested that I take Fleischmann's Yeast. Now the pains are gone and I feel one hundred per cent better."
Julius C. Andrews, Hopewell, Va.



THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion, clears the skin, banishes constipation.



Tom Thorp (center), well-known football referee

"WHILE HEAD COACH AT A LARGE UNIVERSITY the members of the football squad were taken down with boils. I tried every known remedy—no results. A trainer of another university team recommended Fleischmann's Yeast. Soon after giving my players Yeast the boils began to disappear."
Tom Thorp, Rockville Center, L. I.

"MY ENERGY BEGAN TO FLAG. I became nervous and irritable. Then I discovered Fleischmann's Yeast. I ate three cakes a day and in six weeks, marvel of marvels, I found I was not so tired. I was no longer nervous and irritable."
Ethel Y. Gins, Indianapolis, Ind.

"I HAD BEEN TROUBLED WITH INDIGESTION accompanied by dizzy spells. I tried Yeast and it brought great relief. My dizziness disappeared in a month or so. I felt better in every way. Now I just take the Yeast occasionally to keep my stomach in really good condition."
Hatty Lininger, Miami, Fla.

Children are influenced by their surroundings in musical matters

IN its broadest sphere the Duo-Art will exert a far-reaching influence on musical taste. Children in a home possessing the Duo-Art Piano will naturally and unconsciously become discriminating listeners. . . . I specifically name the Duo-Art because this instrument far surpasses any other of its kind in musical value and in repertoire.
— I. J. PADEREWSKI

"Marches and dances furnish wholesome exhilaration."

"YOUNG students of the piano are greatly benefited by the Duo-Art. By enabling them to hear the renditions of great compositions by famous interpreters, it engenders an appreciation that can only come through frequent hearing. . . . . I mention the Duo-Art particularly because the Duo-Art is supreme in presenting a true likeness of the artists playing."
— JOSEF HOFMANN

After the evening meal there is always a precious hour with the Duo-Art before the children go to bed

Children's Hour with the DUO-ART

By AGNES MOORE FRYBERGER

Educational Director, St. Louis Symphony Orchestra
Author of "Listening Lessons in Music"

IF I were asked the most important investment a young couple with children could make, I should reply without hesitation, "a Duo-Art Reproducing Piano with a carefully chosen collection of music rolls."

Entirely aside from the genuine and wholesome enjoyment which grown-ups derive from the Duo-Art, entertainment which varies from the intellectual feast of listening to Hofmann or Lamond play a Beethoven Sonata, to a stirring Ballet Russe composed and played by Stravinski himself, is this instrument's potent and beneficial influence on children.

Character building cannot begin too early. We realize today that a child is first of all an emotional being, and are consequently careful to provide influences that will stir the right emotions. If we can instil an appreciation of and desire for good music most of which expresses tender and beautiful sentiments, we have conferred a blessing that will last through life.

If it is our desire, as with so many parents, that our children should enjoy the advantage of music as an accomplishment, we can do nothing better than to provide a home musical atmosphere. The hours of practice are naturally more or less irksome. Unless they are lightened by the ambition to produce loved and desired effects, they are only too apt to be perfunctory and unproductive.

All this is so obvious that I look to see the time when practically every home, certainly every home with children, is equipped with a Duo-Art.

Music For the Children's Hour

I have selected the fifty following pieces. They do not of course, begin to exhaust the possibilities, but will serve, rather, as a key to further additions to the home library.

(1) Old-fashioned songs which the whole family can sing.
(2) Simple primary songs, and singing games.
(3) Folk songs and dances, plain marches, hymns.
(4) Small masterpieces with contagious melody, which can be sung or whistled.
(5) Pieces with titles which suggest a story, and therefore call for imagination.

Familiar Songs for the Family

102215	Mighty Lak a Rose (Nevin). (Tell words.)	57502	From an Indian Lodge (MacDowell).

NOTE: In all music of this class, have the child tell what the music is about. When there is definite story, as in Narcissus, Anitra's Dance, etc., tell it to the child.

"When children learn to like good music when young they do not care so much for the inferior kind later on

GANGSTERS KILL
COLP, ILL., MAYOR AND COMPANION

Cliff Stone and John Milroy Shot to Death With Machine Guns; Chief of Police Keith Wounded.

SHELTON FEUDISTS ARE SEEN IN HERRIN

Feast Bloodshed Believed to Be Vengeance for Slaying of Their Friend Some Time Ago.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
HERRIN, Ill., Nov. 8.—Inquiry into the killing of Mayor Joff Stone and his pal, John Milroy, in machine-gun fusillade Saturday night at Colp, a mining village five miles west of Herrin, today centered about the hypothesis that it was the work of the Shelton gang, one of the two armed gangs in a feud here.

Bearing out this theory a man, whose name is withheld, today told a Post-Dispatch correspondent that he is of a band of armed men who invaded Herrin after the shooting and detained Chief of Police George Griffin on the street for a few minutes, was a well-known Shelton gangster.

It is further argued in discussions here about the shooting that Mayor of Colp, a two-gun man, had incurred the enmity of the Shelton crowd by shooting John Scalf, a man in a poolhall fight last year. Freeman, a former Chief of Police of Colp, was killed by Scalf before he had a chance to draw his automatic pistols and Scalf was at liberty on $10,000 bond on a murder charge in the shooting when he fell Saturday night.

Two Men Killed, One Wounded.

Stone and Milroy were killed and Keith's companion, Chief of Police Orval Keith, was slightly wounded at 9:20 o'clock, and it was only a few minutes later that a band of men later identified as Shelton gangsters, entered Herrin in three automobiles.

They stopped at the European hotel building, on the lower floor of which Chief Deputy Sheriff Ora Thomas and The Klan raider, S. Marion Young, shot it out for the first time in January, 1925. There were gangsters gathered on the sidewalk.

Chief Griffin, who has steadfastly refused to discuss the incidents of the evening, was coming down the street and the gangsters formed a ring about him. Just what was said or done is not generally known, but after a few minutes Chief Griffin Police Chief was allowed to continue on his way.

Without the same time a man, who had refused to allow his name used, stepped out of a doorway nearby and was met by a man who covered him with an automatic and said, "Get back in there before you get hurt." He stepped back into the doorway, but not before he had recognized the gunman as a Shelton gang leader.

Stories of Shooting Vary.

As for the shooting itself there are a half dozen accounts, each with conflicting details. One has it that Milroy was killed first and that Stone was machine-gunned to death when he arrived at the scene of the killing. Another version is that Milroy was killed when he went to Stone's aid.

Keith, who was wounded in the hand, told reporters today that he and the Mayor were in the Blue Goose roadhouse, at the crossroads south of Herrin, when three small boys ran in and said there was trouble at the Pete Salmo roadhouse, half a mile south in Colp. "We beat it down there in my car," Keith said. "As we turned into the hard road into the side road leading to Salmo's place we were stopped by a bunch of men, who covered us and we got out. I took the left side and the Mayor on the right. We had our hands up.

Took Pistol From Keith.

"One of the men called me by name and took my pistol from me. Then there was a lot of shooting and I saw Stone fall. It seemed as if they were using a machine gun. I turned and ran as fast as I could. One of them hit my hand as I ran and I fell down, but I got up and kept on out of sight." Keith was inclined to believe Milroy already had been killed when Mayor Stone arrived on the scene and that he and the Mayor were "just butted into a private war."

Another version, however, has it that Milroy ran to Stone's side from the Underwood pool hall, just across the street, and was caught in a stream of bullets from machine guns. Both he and Stone were shot dozens of times, and of
